Flames Make Havoc at McGill University

Mechanical Building in Ruins After a Fierce Fire ---Examination Papers Were Destroyed--- Origin a Mystery.

Montreal, April 6.—McGill University yesterday sustained the biggest loss it has in years. In less than an hour fire completely destroyed the big engineering building, which was easily one of the noblest and best-equipped scientific structures on this continent. Owing to the costly manner in which the building was equipped, the damage will amount to at least $600,000; but it is almost entirely covered by insurance. In one room alone there were models valued at $40,000.

BURNING SOME TIME.

The fire was one of the most peculiar and disastrous seen in Montreal for some months. Luckily, there was no loss of life and the few injuries sustained by the fire-fighters were not of a serious character. The fire was discovered near five o'clock, and had already made such headway that it must have been raging for at least half an hour. An alarm was immediately turned in from the University grounds, but before the firemen could answer it the entire upper portion of the building was ablaze, and the fire raged so fiercely that the flames leaped high up into the air. So intense was the heat that the windows in the Chemistry Building, situated a hundred feet away, were all cracked.

EXPLOSIONS OCCUR.

Soon after the firemen arrived a number of explosions occurred in the building, and it was then seen that there was not the slightest chance of saving any portion of it. In less than an hour, the entire lower portion of the roof fell, carrying the floors away with it.

Owing to the distance that separated the building from many others that go to make the group one of the most notable in America, little difficulty was experienced in preventing the fire from spreading.

A MASS OF RUINS.

Within an hour after the fire had been discovered, some of the side walls fell in, and the whole pile was simply a mass of smouldering ruins. Hundreds of students living on the streets about the University were in the campus shortly after the fire was discovered, but the flames spread so rapidly that it was impossible for them to save anything from the building.

GIFT OF SIR WILLIAM.

The building, which is known as the Macdonald Engineering building, was erected by Sir W. C. Macdonald, who has done so much towards making McGill University what it is today. No expense was spared, either on the building or in its equipment, and on this account the leading professors considered it the best-equipped engineering building in America.

ORIGIN A MYSTERY.

The firemen and officials of the University are at a loss to know how the fire could have originated. It apparently broke out in the second storey, and on this account could not be ascribed to the furnace.

Several of the spring examinations had already been held, but all the papers received from the different years were in the building and were completely destroyed.

Prof. McLeod, vice-dean of the faculty of science, said he would not possibly explain the origin of the fire. It must have been going for for some time. None of the students were in the building after six o'clock, and everything seemed all right when the watchman made his rounds early in the evening.

STUDENTS' PERSONAL LOSS.

The loss of the 400 students will also be a severe one, as each of them had personal equipment in the building valued at from $75 to $200.

The workman mechanical building which is the only structure immediately adjoining the burned building, was saved by a fire wall, but sustained considerable damage through smoke and water.

In the basement was an elaborate and expensive electrical and heating apparatus, together with a department devoted to intricate and costly testing apparatus. The building was erected thirteen years ago.

THE INSURANCE

The insurance on the building totals $320,000—$120,000 on the building and $200,000 on the contents. The Royal Insurance Company sustains the heaviest loss, its insurance representing 15 per cent. of the whole. The Phoenix of London comes next, its losses representing 13 per cent.

BOODLING PROVED IN ARKANSAS

Dramatic Scene in Circuit Court.

AT TRIAL OF AN EX-SENATOR

Alleged Graft in Legislature's Large Contracts.

Little Rock, Ark., April 6.—In one of the most dramatic scenes ever witnessed in the circuit court of Pulaski county, former State Senator John A. Hinkle yesterday, while on the witness stand at the trial of Former State Senator Webb Covington on a charge of perjury, told of alleged "boodling" in the last Legislature. Asked by the attorney for Covington as to whether he had testified before the grand jury to receiving from a local liquor dealer $5,000 in one package and $2,500 in another as payment for action that had been taken on the fuller beer inspection bill, Hinkle admitted that he received $5,500 at the liquor dealer's office. Asked with whom he had divided the money, he declined to answer.

Members of an alleged boodle combination, Hinkle alleged, stood about the State house inquiring if "the money had come down on the beer bill" before they voted to kill the measure.

D. P. Cook also testified. He admitted receiving $12,000 from the contractor for the State capitol, and said he gave Covington the money for distribution.

The names of several members of the Legislature who are under indictment were frequently mentioned in connection with the alleged grafting.

Ex-Senator Butt, alleged to have been a member of the boodle combination was convicted of "boodling."

Brantford Rifles May Not Come Here

As noted in former issues of The Times an invitation has been extended by the local regiment to the Duffering Rifles to come here on Victoria Day. The Brantford Expositor says;

The Expositor asked Colonel Ashton about the matter. The colonel said, "No invitation has been received yet. The matter is largely one of finance. It would have to come before the officers for consideration before any statement can be made.

Locally it is thought that while officers and men would be delighted to make the trip, it will hardly be possible to finance it at the present time.

Lectures by Local Educationalists

Messrs. J. E. Hodgson, of the Collegiate Institute teachers' staff, and Mr. Duncan Walker, Public school inspector, are arranging for a course of lectures which will be very beneficial to the teachers, as "Nature Study," has become one of the important subjects in the curriculum, and these lectures should be well attended. Mr. Hodgson has secured the use of the Historical Society's museum as a lecture hall.

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure? No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Camp Again at Kingston

The annual camp of No. 8 district, camp will hereafter be held in Kingston. The camp as is known to those "who know" was held in Cobourg to avail those present of the rifle range. However as soon as the rifle range now being acquired at Kingston has been completed a proper water supply installed and the camp site better drained it will probably be desirable to locate the camp again in Kingston.

Mr. Madill Contradicts a Rumor

Mr. W. Madill, formerly of the township of Otonabee, writes to Peterborough to contradict the story current that his family in Saskatchewan, had been frozen while he was away purchasing coal. Mr. Madill goes on to say that there is no coal within two miles of his residence. Were it not for occasional blizzards, Mr. Madill says the weather in his locality would be all right. He notes that when a blizzard is raging on the prairie, the oldest settler can easily be lost. He however, notwithstanding the blizzards, advises young men to go west

Why Such Secrecy Over Public Money?

It is Time the Education Board Ends its' Secret Session.

"What was the amount of the next tender to that accepted by the Board of Education for the Collegiate Institute?" was asked some forty-eleven times of The Times yesterday. We could only say that the Board of Education held a meeting, previous to the general meeting, to the former of which the press representatives were not allowed admission, at which the tenders were presumably considered and adjudged. All that the press of Peterborough was allowed to know was to whom the tenders were awarded. No further particulars were available, it seems that this PRIVATE way of dispensing public funds should be end 1.

At the meeting of Thursday night over $55,000 of the people's money was practically spent, without the public being allowed to learn what competition there was over the tenders. We have every faith in all and every member of the Board, but this secret session business whilst dealing with the public funds should cease.

British Whiskers as a Source of Revenue

London, April 5.—The action of a certain New Jersey legislator in introducing a bill imposing a tax on whiskers is widely commented upon here.

Frank Richardson, the well known humorist, who is described by Punch as Mr. Frank Whiskerson, because he is the greatest English authority on whiskers, was interviewed on the subject today. He was enthusiastic over the prospect of seeing whiskered men taxed. He said;

"It is the best thing in the world. The idea is splendid. It ought to be introduced in England at the earliest opportunity, but the taxes are not heavy enough. They should mount to £20 per whisker. I've never seen a man wearing a single whisker, but I don't see why it should not be done just as a single eyeglass is worn. If men insist upon going about as if they were blots on the landscape, I don't see why they should not pay a big price for the privilege. Of course the tax would be difficult to collect, and the only way out of the trouble would be to make people take out whisker licenses just as they take out doglicenses. Police constables should be empowered to stop any man they saw between whiskers and call upon him to produce his license."

Mr. Richardson supplied the first official list of known face furnishings. It is as follows;—Whiskers, ear guards, face fins, weathercocks, face fungus, hold-alls, hearth rugs, cutlets, paint brushes, and the whiskerette moustaches; the inverted eyebrow, the walrus and the soup strainer. He said;—"There is no reason why moustaches should not be taxed also. A modified moustache, like an inverted eyebrow, such as I wear myself, might retail at a pound, whereas a walrus or a soup strainer should not be allowed in the street until the man behind it had paid £20 to the Government.

Municipalities Have Important Law Case

Sherbrooke, April 6.—The case of the corporation of the township of Clifton against the township of St. Edwidge de Clifton, was heard in the Circuit Court before Mr. Justice Hutchinson. The case is an action for $3,650.

The plaintiff corporation contends that during the month of October or November, 1906, Moise Carrier, who resides in the township of Ste. Edwidge de Clifton, was suffering from smallpox within the limit of the defendant's municipality, and that the defendant took no precaution to prevent the spreading of the disease. That through the negligence of defendant, Carrier was permitted to come into plaintiff's municipality, with the result that several men were afflicted with smallpox. The defendant denied the allegations.

Several witnesses were examined and the case was taken en delibre.

Fresh Air and Postum a Health Combination Hard to Beat.

"Four years ago" writes a Vermont lady, "I was a victim of indigestion. Everything I ate distressed me—gave me nausea and formed gas in my stomach which was very annoying.

"I had palpitation so bad I could not lie on my left side, and began to think my heart must be affected. I had used coffee for 25 years, and although it would be impossible to give it up, as I usually had nothing for breakfast but a roll and a cup of coffee.

"My indigestion grew worse, in spite of doctoring, and I felt obliged to try something else. I drank chocolate and cocoa, but soon got tired of them.

"The doctor had ordered my husband to stop drinking coffee on account of heart trouble, so he was using Postum and wanted me to try that. I took one cup of it as our servant prepared it, and thought it was wretched stuff.

"I was getting desperate when the cook left me and I had to make Postum for my husband. Then it was that I studied the directions on the package and wondered if the girl had been boiling it long enough.

"I cooked it fully 30 minutes and was surprised to find it most palatable. I found that rich cream improved it as much as it did coffee. I also learned that Postum tasted better, and it was easier to prepare it the night before.

"I put two heaping tablespoonfuls into a square of cheese cloth, tied it tightly, dropped it into a clean coffee pot, poured over it three cupfuls of cold water, and let it stand covered until morning.

"Then it was boiled thirty minutes and we had two large cups of a delicious drink, after cream and sugar had been added. It has a rich delicious flavour of its own and we have used nothing else for four years.

"Postum and Fresh Air have cured us of dyspepsia and seeming heart trouble, and we have taken a new lease of life." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Campbellford Man After His Wife

The Toronto Telegram says;

This morning Robert Darragh, of Campbellford, came to the morality department at the city hall to ask the aid of the police to find his wife who left him four and a half years ago with his three small children.

This is the second time he has come to ask the department to find his missing spouse. He heard she was working in a departmental store, probably under her maiden name of Lena May Frayer. Up to the present time the police have been unable to locate her. Darragh wants to take her home with him.

Church Matters in Campbellford

The Campbell Herald says;

The Trustee Board of the Methodist church met on Tuesday night to discuss tenders for the proposed new church. The tenders were upwards of $30,000 and as the present subscription would not warrant such a large expenditure, the matter of building has been deferred. In the meantime it was unanimously agreed to create a sinking fund, with a view to having a considerable amount of money with which to start operations. Some necessary repairs will be made to the present building. The Board decided to return to the pew renting system.

Foxy Farmers Get in on Hay Weight

The Madoc Review of last issue demonstrates conclusively that all farmers are not as conscientious as they might be. This paper says that a farmer brought in a load of hay to a gentleman in that village, and, as usual drove it to the scales to have weighed. After it was weighed three men slipped off the load, who had been hidden in the hay, while the weighing operation was going on. The hay was taken to the purchaser and upon his meeting the hidden partiers, he asked them when they were ready to go to work for him. They appeared somewhat surprised and informed the questioner that they had not hired with him, but were informed by the purchaser of the load that he had bought them with the load. The purchaser finding they were not willing to accede to the purchase, had them weighed, and deducting the weight of the men from the hay, paid the farmer for the hay weight. This is no hay yarn, but an actual fact, and instead of the purchaser being so remiss with them, he should have made an example of them, and have meted out to them their proper punishment.

Money Back of Plot To Squelch Roosevelt

Hearst-Harriman-Rockefeller Band Said to Have Raised Fund to Ruin President--Scheme Exposed by Friend.

Washington, April 6.—It was said on authority at the White House yesterday that there is ample evidence at hand for the claim the president holds that there is a movement afoot to defeat his policies in the next congress and in the next national convention.

It is declared that the "Hearst-Harriman-Rockefeller combination" has already a fund of $5,000,000 with which to carry on its campaign in opposition to the president. It was further authoritatively said;

"They are gathering up the loose ends, but the movement will flatten out. It is apparent in Ohio and Pennsylvania; in fact, it extends across the entire continent.

"The scheme was thoroughly divulged at a recent dinner and reached the White House through a friend of the president.

"The scheme of the people behind the movement is to buy newspapers, public men and others who may assist the opponents of the president in their work."

It was also stated authoritatively at the White House yesterday that part of the plan to encompass the defeat of the president's policy is the election of state delegates to the national convention from those states known to favor the president.

The delegates are to be instructed for President Roosevelt, notwithstanding knowledge in advance that the president would not be a candidate for re-nomination.

Thus, according to the statement, those delegates upon the president declining to be a candidate for renomination, which he has said he would do, are to consider themselves free and are to be switched over to some opponents of the president and the policies for which he is standing.

The creation of the alleged combination, it was stated at the White House, first leaked out at a dinner here, attended by a number of anti-Roosevelt Republicans a few weeks ago. A friend of President Roosevelt, who was at the dinner, carried the news to the White House.

Paid Settlement and is Now in Jail

Owen Sound, April 6.—Last summer Dr. Parks, of Feversham, while attending the family of W. Patterson, of Collingwood Township, had his suspicions directed to the 13-year-old daughter of the house, whose mind is somewhat unbalanced. Direct questioning elicited a confession that for two years the girl had maintained illicit relations with Hugh Thompson, a neighboring farmer, who is 50 years old.

In November following Dr. Parks took the girl and her parents to the office of Mr. John Birnie, K.C., town solicitor of Collingwood, where depositions were made. Mr. Birnie wrote to Thompson, and as a result the latter visited the lawyer's office and made a settlement for $800, paying $600 cash and giving a mortgage on his farm for the balance.

Two hundred dollars of the amount paid Mr. Birnie handed over to Dr. Parks, and the rest he retained, the parents of the girl received nothing.

Recently the attorney-general's office learned of the charge against Thompson, and Provincial Detective Greer went up and arrested him. He appeared before Magistrate Dewson, of Flesherton, and was committed for trial.

Mr. Birnie in explanation of his retention of the money, stated that he heard rumors that the crown was about to take the matter up, and thought it best not to hand over the money to the parents. Dr. Parks claims that the $200 which he received was in payment for professional services to the family, in addition to $100 which he had already received.

A Bullet-proof Fabric

London, April 6.—A Milanese barrister, Signor Amedeo Bucci, is said to have invented a flexible fabric, somewhat resembling leather, which no bullet or hard steel instrument is able to pierce. Signor Bucci made a tour around a large square in Rome with a motor car, the tires of which had been covered with the fabric. Nails of large dimensions were stuck in the ground, point upward, and the car passed over them without damaging the rubber tires. Later on the inventor called on the minister of marine, two personally experimented upon a piece of the fabric which he successfully tried to perforate by firing several revolver shots at

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE

The Imperial Conference is to be held in London, England. The underlying purpose of it is to bind together more closely the different parts of the British Empire. There has been for years a growing sympathy among the colonies towards each other and towards the mother land. Much more is needed and may be accomplished. Some suggest that the desired aim may be accomplished through the formation of an Imperial Council. This Council would have legislative authority and might seem to deprive the colonies of their freedom and right of self-government. On this account the council may not be favored by the Conference. A Conference has no legislative power but may have a strong influence in bringing about a free alliance of sister nations with each other and with the mother land. It would be well to have a definite understanding with the Imperial Government in regard to the position of the colonies towards British treaty obligations, and this can be done by a conference as well as by a council.

CHANDOS

The winter surely is over now, for the sugar makers are hard at work. Passing Mr. Wm. Tucker's sugar bush the other day, as far as the eye could reach you could see tin buckets hanging from the noble maples, and a team of horses drawing the sap to the kettle to be boiled into the luscious syrup.

Reading The Examiner the other day I saw a statement about Loon Lake which I will contradict. Loon Lake is in the Township of Chandos, not Cavendish, and was stocked with bass eight years ago by S. E. Scott and M. Couch. Mr. Kennedy's summer cottage is not on H. Beal's farm, but on S. E. Scott's farm. There were no bass caught in the lake after H. Beal put in his fish until about four or five years ago, and now you can find no better lake for sport.

Forty Buried Under Blazing Ruins

San Francisco, April 5. — Twenty men were burned to death, and twenty others injured in a fire which destroyed an Italian hotel at Seventeenth and Connecticut streets, in the Potrero district, early yesterday. The injured were of the laboring class, and were asleep in their rooms when the fire started. Before they could be aroused, the flames had spread through the building. The walls fell, and the inmates were buried in the ruins, twenty being taken out dead and dying. People rushed to the assistance of the buried victims, and succeeded in rescuing all of them from the flaming timbers. Teams were hurriedly harnessed and automobiles brought into service, and the injured were rushed to the Potrero Emergency Hospital, where several died while awaiting treatment.

SEVERAL WOMEN PERISHED.

In the work of rescue, W. A. Cole, a fireman, was thrown from a ladder, and, it is believed, fatally injured.

The majority of the injured were hurt in leaping from the upper windows. A number of women are reported to have been in the building and all of them are believed to have perished.

An adjoining lodging house at 118 Kentucky street also was destroyed. There were forty-five men sleeping in this place, but all of them are believed to have escaped.

Besides the known dead, these are missing: Theo. Mra. Rosa Beadia, an unknown woman, and a lad of four, and a girl of eight.

Are You Often Bilious?

Read This and Learn How to Prevent Attacks.

Biliousness is merely a term applied to a condition that exists when the body is over-loaded with bile.

The complexion turns yellow, eyes look dull, pimples, blotches and eczema break out, headaches are ever present.

Biliousness has two great causes, constipation and defective liver action.

When Dr. Hamilton's Pills are taken they not only correct the bowels, but act directly on the liver, regulating its bile secretion.

Unlike ordinary medicines which merely and give temporary relief, Dr. Hamilton's Pills remove the condition which causes biliousness; thus permanent cures are effected.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills do cure biliousness and liver ills under all circumstances.

We prove this by the statement of Mr. Fenwick Luddington, of New Barbor, N.S., who writes: "Three months ago I had no expectation of ever getting free from periodical bilious attacks. They were preceded by dizziness and dreadful headaches. If I stooped over my head would swim and a nauseous feeling crept into my stomach.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills fixed up my liver, drove all the bile out of my blood and made me a well man in a few months. Today I enjoy a good appetite, excellent digestion, and the best of health. Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Plot to Dissolve the Russian House

St. Petersburg, April 5. — Documentary evidence of a plot, supported by powerful influences at court, to cause the dissolution of the Lower House of Parliament was printed in the Rech, organ of the Democrats yesterday, in a circular signed by M. Puriskievitch, a Monarchist member of the House from Bessarabia, and vice-president of the League of the Russian people which was sent from the League's headquarters here.

The date of the circular shows that the plot was conceived March 13, a week after the convening of Parliament, and was set in motion March 27th by a pre-arranged signal, a mysterious black cross in the Russian banner, whose appearance coincided with the assassination of Dr. Joloa, editor of the Russki Vodomosti of Moscow. The circular directed that should this plot succeed, loyalist demonstrations were to be organized on the day of the dissolution of Parliament.

The movement for a dissolution of the House has the full sympathy of the reactionary members of the Cabinet, and, though no steps have yet been taken in that direction, the possibility of Parliament being dissolved is plainly foreseen.

A Remedy for the Grip.

Gen. W. H. Parsons, 925 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes as follows:

"Upon the recommendation of personal friends and many strong testimonials to the efficacy of Peruna in the treatment of the numerous symptoms of the grip with which I have been affected for four months past, I have been induced to undergo a treatment of this justly celebrated formula.

"I feel a decided change for the better by its use for one week only, especially in toning up the stomach, and a consequent decided effect upon my appetite.

"I therefore feel much encouraged that I am on the road to complete restoration.

"My numerous friends in Texas, where I have had the honor to command a brigade of her veteran cavalry in a four-year war, may accept this voluntary testimonial to the merit of Peruna from a sense of obligation for its wonderful efficacy."

Pe-ru-na a Good Tonic.

Gen. M. C. Butler, of South Carolina, writes from Washington, D. C., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble.

"I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved.

"It is indeed a wonderful medicine, and besides a good tonic."

Colds in the Head and Throat.

Chas. W. Bowman, 1st Lieut. and Adjt. 4th M. S. M. Cav. Vols., writes from Lanham, Md., as follows:

"Though somewhat averse to patent medicines, and still more averse to becoming a professional affidavit man, it seems only a plain duty in the present instance to add my experience to the columns already written concerning the curative powers of Peruna.

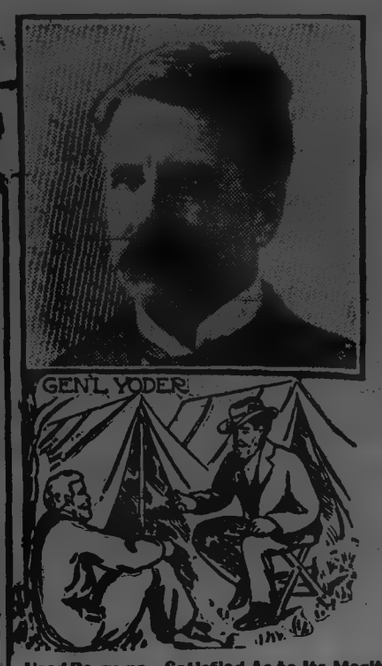
"I have been particularly benefited by its use for colds in the head and throat.

"I have been able to fully cure myself of a most severe attack in forty-eight hours by its use according to directions.

"I use it as a preventive whenever threatened with an attack.

"Members of my family also use it for like ailments.

"We are recommending it to our friends."



Recommends Pe-ru-na to the Afflicted.

Brig. Gen. D. T. Kirby, Washington, D. C., writes concerning Peruna, as follows:

"Friends of mine having used your Peruna catarrh cure with good results, I am impressed with its curative qualities, and can recommend it to those who are afflicted."

An Invigorating Tonic.

Rear-Admiral Hichborn, U. S. Navy, Washington, D. C., writes:

"After the use of Peruna for a short period, I can now cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy to any one who is in need of an invigorating tonic."

For Catarrh of the Stomach.

Gen. W. W. Duffield, Washington, D. C., writes:

"I have used Peruna in my family and have found it a valuable medicine and take pleasure in recommending it to all who suffer from catarrh of the stomach or who require a tonic of prompt efficacy."

Used Pe-ru-na—Satisfied As to Its Merits —Recommends It to All Sufferers.

Gen. S. S. Yoder, 203 Md. Ave., N. E., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I desire to say that I have found Peruna to be a wonderful remedy. I only used it for a short time and am thoroughly satisfied as to its merits. I shall gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

When Other Remedies Failed Pe-ru-na Proved Efficacious.

Hon. Geo. W. Honey, National Chaplain U. V. U., Ex-Chaplain 4th Wisconsin Cavalry, Ex-Treas. State of Wisconsin and Ex-Q. Master General State of Texas, G. A. R., writes from 1700 First street, N. E., Washington, D. C., as follows:

"I cannot too highly recommend your preparation for the relief of catarrhal troubles in their various forms.

"Some members of my own family have used it with most gratifying results.

"When other remedies failed, Peruna proved most efficacious and I cheerfully certify to its curative excellence."

Pe-ru-na, a Standard Treatment For Catarrhal Diseases.

Mr. John C. Nelson, Dayton, Tenn., geologist and mining engineer, while a Captain in the Federal Army during the Civil War, contracted a case of rheumatism. This malady was constant and persistent, inducing the development of other ailments, which also became chronic. After taking a course of Peruna, Capt. Nelson writes:

"Having been painfully afflicted with chronic rheumatism and the adjunctive complications for many years, and after having received many general and special treatments with only temporary relief, I read your scientific treatise on catarrhal diseases.

"At my request you prescribed a special course of the Peruna remedies, which I closely followed, and am happy to report that my rheumatism and complicated ailments are subdued, and I feel young again at the age of 69 years.

"Reason will accept your classification of catarrhal diseases as scientific and true, and the Peruna remedies as a standard treatment for them. I thank you heartily for your skilled and logical advice."

Enjoys Renewed Health and Strength.

James J. Osborn, 623 Wahsatch Ave., Colorado Springs, Colo., has filled all the positions in Knight Templars Masonic Order, was a Mason since 1866, Judge of County Court, Clinton, Mo., and also County Collector of Clinton. He writes:

"A sluggish liver which I had been troubled with for two years made life miserable and I was unable to attend to my business half the time. I lacked energy, had headache most of the time, and my food distressed me and did not seem to do me a particle of good.

"Reading of the many cures performed by Peruna, I decided to try a bottle. Before I had taken many doses I felt better.

"I took it as directed for two months when I was a well man."

DEAFNESS CAUSED BY CATARRH— RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

Gen. A. M. Legg, writes from the Savings Bank Building, Washington, D. C., as follows:

"I take pleasure in endorsing the many recommendations I have heard and read of Peruna, because of having had knowledge of the truth of so many of them.

"We always tell our sick and ailing friends of the remedies that we have learned, from experience, were good for us when ailing in the same way, and we do it as a duty we feel that we owe them.

"Why is it any the less our duty to advise all the people we can when we know of a good and comparatively inexpensive remedy that makes many cures, and benefits in almost all cases?

"My own little personal experience of being relieved of deafness, caused by a siege of catarrh, warrants me in advising all the afflicted to just try Peruna."

For Kidney Trouble, Coughs, Colds and Catarrh.

Gen. A. T. Hawley, 1336 25th St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I have used Peruna and find it very beneficial for kidney trouble, and especially good for coughs, colds and catarrhal trouble."

Convinced of Pe-ru-na's Merit.

Brig. Gen. J. Floyd King, Washington, D. C., writes:

"I unhesitatingly state that I am convinced Peruna is a medicine which will effect all that is claimed for its use."

Those desirous of obtaining special directions with regard to the use of Peruna should write to Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Nevada Stocks are Money Makers

If one is to generalize his observations upon the mining world in 1906, he must select as his most important generality the prevailing speculative interest that has been excited among the city folk and the county folk of the United States. The close of the year brought to a climax one of the most phenomenal mining investment booms in the history of the country, but dimly foreshadowed by the Cripple Creek boom of nearly ten years ago and by no means equalled by the Comstock boom of the '70s. It is not exact to speak of this boom in the past tense, because it still prevails. Nevertheless, about the middle of November it had reached a height that must be considered in the nature of a climax, the most important that this particular boom has yet attained. When we say that the whole country has taken notice, we tell the story in a few unassuming words.

More mining stock exchanges have been in existence, and actively so, than at any other time in the country's history—so many, in fact, that the number must be carefully gone over in order to recall them at all. The evidence that numerous such exchanges furnish is convincing. It establishes clearly the prevalence of a bull market.

In a pronounced degree the movement came from Nevada, and in a lesser degree it was supplemented by a movement from Cobalt Canada. In varying degrees, the boom was encouraged by the unprecedented activity in many camps and the universal demand for the commercial metals.

NEVADA STOCKS.

The great speculative mining stock boom of 1906 originated in Nevada. No one disputes this, although other speculative sections were correspondingly active. At the opening of the year, the outcome could hardly have been anticipated, and at the time of the San Francisco earthquake the hope for a phenomenal stock market was discovered practically nowhere.

By a strange and dramatic freak of destiny, the date of the San Francisco earthquake, April 18, was also the date of the world-renowned strike on the Hayes & Monnette lease on the Mohawk mine at Goldfield. The country knows the result. Before the end of the year this mine has produced about $6,000,000, and the Mohawk shares had sold up to $19 apiece, as compared with the opening quotation of 23 cents in January. While the San Francisco earthquake had for a time paralyzed the trading in Nevada shares, a bad slump being only prevented by a concerted effort to sustain the market, the discovery of the Mohawk exercised so great an influence that before the opening of fall it became apparent that the year would go down in history as a record-breaker speculatively.

And it is true that more money has been made on Nevada stocks in the past two years than has ever been made before in any ten years. This is easily accounted for when you look at the history of mining stock in the Goldfield, Nevada district, where it is proven that 20 per cent. of the stocks have advanced from 50 per cent. to as high as 2000 per cent., as in the case of the Mohawk, and as many as 70 have advanced 2000 to 5000 per cent., and of the hundreds of stocks listed on the Goldfield Exchanges all will show a healthy advance with promise of much larger advances in price during the present year. This is particularly true of the close in or inside properties. From the Mohawk on the south, to the Sandstorm, Kendall and Desert Rose mines on the north, all these mines have produced as rich ore as was ever taken from the Great Mohawk mine; in fact, in a radius of two hawk mine. In a radius of two square within the present year there will be many mines opened up in this territory that will equal, if they do not surpass, the Mohawk and Sandstorm mines.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assasays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

He leaned back and, interlocking his fingers, stretched his arms out with the palms of his hands outward, a habit of his when asked a question needing consideration.

"She is of medium height. Her hair is brown. Her worst enemy admits, I believe, that she is pretty. Of course I am convinced of it."

"Of course," replied Jocelyn steadily. "That is as it should be. And I have no doubt that you and her worst enemy are both quite right."

CHAPTER XIII.

RUMOR met Maurice Gordon almost at the outset of his journey northward. "Smallpox is raging on the Ogowe river," they told him. "The English expedition is stricken down with it. The three leaders are dead."

Maurice Gordon had not lived four years on the west African coast in vain. He took this for what it was worth. But if he had acquired skepticism he had lost his nerve. He put about and sailed back to Loango.

"I wonder," he muttered as he walked up from the beach to his office that same afternoon—"I wonder if Durnovo is among them."

And he was conscious of a ray of hope in his mind. He was a kind hearted man in his way, this Maurice Gordon of Loango, but he could not disguise from himself the simple fact that the death of Victor Durnovo would be a distinct convenience and a most desirable relief.

Thinking these thoughts, Maurice Gordon arrived at the factory and went straight to his own office, where he found the object of them, Victor Durnovo, sitting in consumption of the office sherry.

Gordon saw at once that the rumor was true. There was a hunted, unwholesome look in Durnovo's eyes. He looked shaken and failed to convey a suggestion of personal dignity.

"Hello!" exclaimed the proprietor of the decanter. "You look a bit chippy. I've heard you've got smallpox up at Msala."

"So have I. I've just heard it from Meredith."

"Just heard it! Is Meredith down here too?"

"Yes, and the fool wants to go back tonight. I have to meet him on the beach at 4 o'clock."

Maurice Gordon sat down, poured out for himself a glass of sherry and drank it thoughtfully.

"Do you know, Durnovo," he said emphatically, "I have my doubts about Meredith being a fool."

"Indeed!" with a derisive laugh.

"Yes."

Maurice Gordon looked over his shoulder to see that the door was shut.

"You'll have to be very careful," he said. "The least slip might let it all out. Meredith has a quiet way of looking at one which disquiets me. He might find out."

"Not he," replied Durnovo confidently, "especially if we succeed, and we shall succeed; we shall!"

Maurice Gordon made a little movement of the shoulders as indicating a certain uneasiness, but he said nothing.

There was a pause of considerable duration, at the end of which Durnovo produced a paper from his pocket and threw it down.

"That's good business," he said.

"Two thousand tusks," murmured Maurice Gordon. "Yes, that's good. Through Akmed, I suppose?"

"Yes. We can outdo these Arabs at their own trade."

An evil smile lighted up Durnovo's sallow face. When he smiled his drooping, curtain-like mustache projected in a way that made keen observers of the human face wonder what his mouth was like.

Gordon, who had been handling the paper with the tips of his fingers as if it were something unclean, threw it down on the table again.

"Ye-es," he said slowly, "but it does not seem to dirty black hands as it does white. They know no better."

"Lord!" ejaculated Durnovo. "Don't let us begin the old arguments all over again. I thought we settled that the trade was there. We couldn't prevent it, and therefore the best thing is to make hay while the sun shines and then clear out of the country."

"But suppose Meredith finds out?" reiterated Maurice Gordon, with the lamentable hesitation that precedes loss.

"If Meredith finds out it will be the worse for him."

A certain concentration of tone aroused Maurice Gordon's attention, and he glanced uneasily at his companion.

"No one knows what goes on in the heart of Africa," said Durnovo darkly. "But we will not trouble about that. Meredith won't find out."

"Where is he now?"

"With your sister at the bungalow. A lady's man—that is what he is."

On hearing that Jack was at the bungalow with Jocelyn, Maurice Gordon glanced at the clock and wondered how he could get away from his present visitor. The atmosphere of Jack Meredith's presence was preferable to that diffused by Victor Durnovo. There was a feeling of personal safety and dignity in the very sound of his voice which set a weak and easily led man upon his feet.

But Victor Durnovo had something to say to Gordon which circumstances had brought to a crisis.

"Look here," he said, leaning forward and throwing away the cigarette he had been smoking, "this simili-affair seems in going to be the biggest thing that has ever been run on this coast."

"Yes," said Gordon, with the indifference that comes from nonparticipation.

"And I'm the only business man in it," significantly.

Gordon nodded his head, awaiting further developments.

"Which means that I could work another man into it. I might find out that we could not get on without him."

The black eyes seemed to probe the good natured, sensual face of Maurice Gordon, so keen, so searching was their glance.

"And I would be willing to do it, to make that man's fortune, provided that he was my brother-in-law."

"What the devil do you mean?" asked Gordon, setting down the glass that was half raised to his lips.

"I mean that I want to marry Jocelyn."

And the modern school of realistic, mawkishly foul novelists, who hold

"Besides," he said, "I may succeed without any of that—eh?"

that love excuseth all, would have taken delight in the passionate rendering of the girl's name.

"Want to marry Jocelyn, do you?" answered Maurice, with a derisive little laugh. On the first impulse of the moment he gave no thought to himself or his own interests and spoke with undisguised contempt. He might have been speaking to a beggar on the roadside.

Durnovo's eyes flashed dangerously and his tobacco stained teeth clinched for a moment over his lower lip.

"That is my desire and intention."

"Look here, Durnovo," exclaimed Gordon, "don't be a fool! Can't you see that it is quite out of the question?"

"No," he said, "I can't see that it is out of the question. On the contrary,

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 32. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 39 acre one and about 50 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle fluronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 39 acres of J. B. 32 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 30 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $180,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 6 inch nicolite, 18 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1283-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer."

This Map Tells the Story. It shows about 20 of the best mines in the camp, worth from $1,000,000 to $20,000,000 each, now producing from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 per month.

The Sandstorm Annex Gold Mining Company

Owns outright 35 Acres of Rich Mineral Land, all in process of patent, in the heart of the camp, lying between the Mohawk and the Great Sandstorm Mines, and only a few hundred feet away from either.

By reference to the small map hereto attached, which is a correct copy, you will see the Last Dollar, Ruble and Rex, three properties belonging to the SANDSTORM ANNEX GOLD MINING CO., shown in heavy lines; with the Sandstorm, Kendall and Desert Rose mines at top, and the Mohawk, Jumbo and other mines at bottom.

Experts agree that the rich veins from which the Sanstorm is getting such fabulously rich ore, which is equal to any taken from the Mohawk, is a continuation of the Mohawk vein, and extends right through our property.

The Desert Rose mine, joining the Last Dollar, one of our properties, has produced ore worth $20,000 a ton in gold.

The SANDSTORM ANNEX GOLD MINING CO. is now making their first

Offering of Treasury Stock for quick sale at 15c a share par value $1.00, to buy machinery and develop the property.

This is ground floor price, and about one-quarter to one-half what other property around us is selling at. There is some near us selling for 35 and 50 cents, and not as good as ours. We are offering our stock on its merits, consequently when we list it on the Exchanges it will advance rapidly. This we will do as soon as this small allottment is taken. We expect to see it sell for 50 cents inside of three months.

Mohawk first sold for 10c., has since sold for $20.00.

Jumbo first sold for 10c., has since sold for $5.00.

Red Top first sold for 10c., has since sold for $5.00.

Sandstorm first sold for 10c., has since sold for $1.50.

Combination Fraction first sold for 10c., has since sold for $4.00.

No Self Control. Start at "Trifles."

No Control of Your Nerves

The nerves are the great controlling force of the body.

They govern every action, every function. Upon their vitality hinge your energy, your power to think and act.

But alas, your nerves are weak!

You have burnt up your nerve force, used up the reserve you so badly need today.

Just one way to win it back.

Build up with Ferrozone.

It restores worn-out nerves, because it supplies them with nutriment and building material.

Ferrozone gives you "grip" and courage—makes the blood tingle through your veins—fills you with the feeling that a powerful and strengthening medicine is winning you back to health.

Mr. C. R. Zink, a prominent citizen of Lunenburg, N.S., proved Ferrozone was a marvelous tonic and says: "Nothing I ever used gave such prompt, strengthening effect as Ferrozone. I was run down, quite nervous, no appetite and in a generally used-up condition. Ferrozone gave me a wonderful amount of new strength, quite restored my nerves and made me well. I can recommend Ferrozone to every man who works hard and needs a tonic."

By supplying nourishment and vital force to the nerves, by enriching the blood, strengthening the heart—Ferrozone is sure to hold any man, woman or child in ill-health; try it—50c. per box at all druggists.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Gathered From the Local Police Station.

"Paddy" Conway, an old pensioner, was arrested yesterday by P. C. Adams. This veteran was lying helplessly drunk in a hotel yard. He had only been released from jail the first of the month, after spending the winter months in the local Bastile.

Only one case was tried in front of the Rubbernecks Club at yesterday's session of the police court. Hector Baker, whose features are familiar to all frequenters of this court was charged with vagrancy. He pleaded not guilty. Chief Ressel was not prepared to go on with the case, so Baker was remanded for one week.

It seems that on Thursday evening as P. C. Newhall was on beat on Hunter street towards George street with a gentleman who met him, the officer noticed two men standing in the gateway of Mr. D. Bellegham's yard. One man was hopelessly drunk, and Baker had his hand in the inebriated one's pocket. He did not notice P. C. Newhall coming. The constable caught Baker by the wrist before he had time to take his hand out of the drunken man's pockets. When asked what he had been doing Baker replied "looking for tin." He afterwards said he was searching for a flask. He was brought to the police station, where he spent the night. He will pass the week at Castle Nesbitt, and will be brought before his worship again next Friday.

Baker has been in the police court on previous occasions. The man whom Baker is charged with attempting to rob gave his name as McCarthy.

"There's a Reason"

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliance vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the system through the change which comes with marriage and motherhood. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant pelvic drains and weaknesses which too often come with marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate womanly organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and form at once witness to the fact in renewed comeliness. Nearly a million women have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Ingredients on label—contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. Made wholly of those native, American, medicinal roots most highly recommended by leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken-down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for the expectant mothers, to prepare the system for the coming of baby and making its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as "Favorite Prescription." It can do no harm in any condition of the system. It is a most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine nicely adapted to woman's delicate system by a physician of large experience in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments.

Dr. Pierce may be consulted by letter free of charge. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

DOCTOR DRUMMOND IS DEAD AT COBALT

Popular Canadian Author Succumbs to Paralysis--Was a Lover of Outdoor Life---Born in Ireland of 1854.

Cobalt, April 8. — Dr. Drummond died at his residence at the Drummond Mine at twenty minutes to eleven this morning.

He never regained consciousness from the time he was stricken with paralysis last Monday, and no hope has really been entertained. His wife and brother, T. J. Drummond, were with him when he died.

The funeral will be held in Montreal and the body leaves here Sunday afternoon.

Deceased was 53 years old.

Dr. Drummond and his two brothers, Messrs. George E. and Thomas J. Drummond, purchased a property for $10,000, and some time ago refused $40,000 for the same.

Dr. Drummond was married in April, 1894, to Alley Isabel, daughter of Dr. O. C. Harvey of Savanna la Mar, Jamaica. In religion he was a Protestant. Two children, a boy of 10 and a girl of 3 years, survive.

Dr. Drummond was, of course, well known throughout Canada, not only as an author but as a lover of the outdoor life. The fame of his works extended to the United States, and there also in the north woods, and amongst literary circles, the news of his serious illness was received with profound regret.

They knew him there, as he was known in Canada, as a physician, naturalist and woodman.

Dr. Drummond died in a surrounding peculiarly fitted to the environment he loved, and, through his writings, made others love. He expressed the very spirit of big, strong elemental things, of the wild rush of a swollen torrent across rocks, of trees bending before the snow gale, of the long comfortable evenings in camp, a tale of good hunting to tell or listen to, and the quiet rest and cold and the inner peace and warmth;

Yourse'f an' rest of de boys, Johnnie,
by light of de coal oil lamp,
An' you're singin' an' talkin' merry,
sittin' around de camp,
We hear de win' on de chimney-an'
we know it was beeg, beeg, storm.
But ol' box stove she's roarin', an' camp's feelin' nice an' warm.

OF SWEET NATURE.

"Dr. Drummond's verse reflects his character," said Dr. G. Lenox Curtis of New York, president of the Canadian Camp, recently. "He was a man of sweet nature, a jovial man. He was never averse to reading his own verse in camp, to which he has spent most of his time in the past few years, and those whose privilege it has been to hear him have much to remember."

Dr. W. H. Drummond lay unconscious since Monday last, when he was stricken with paralysis that rendered useless his right side. He lapsed into unconsciousness then, and ever since it has been a fight by his physicians to keep him alive.

HIS WORK HISTORICAL.

Dr. Drummond was born in 1854 at Curnaw House, County Leitrim, Ireland, and the author of "The Habitant" and other French-Canadian verse is therefore not himself a Canadian by birth. Through his writings Dr. Drummond has familiarized the majority of readers on this continent with the picturesque talk of "Jean" and "Baptiste," and has thrown light on the manners and customs, the racial peculiarities and the history of the element of French-Canada.

Dr. Drummond was the son of an officer of the Royal Irish Constabulary. He was a practising physician of Montreal, but the life of the French-Canadian impressed him so strongly that he felt impelled to record it.

When Dr. Drummond was ten years old he came to Canada with his parents, but his father died after he had been but a year in the new country. Since he came to Canada, Dr. Drummond has always lived in Montreal, and his three brothers are all prominent in the business life of that city.

WHERE HE WAS EDUCATED.

Dr. Drummond was educated at Mobill, County Leitrim, Ireland, and at Montreal High School, and studied medicine at Bishop's College, Montreal, graduating from there in the year 1894. He held the chair of medical jurisprudence at Bishop's College. The noted author was vice-president of the Laurentian Club and the St. Maurice Club, both being well-known fish and game associations, and was also president of the Montreal Kennel Club. He became best known to the general public, however by his contributions to dialect literature.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Gathered From the Local Police Station.

Another hotel case was before the police court on Saturday, this time Mr. Flynn, proprietor of the American House, being charged with having sold liquor on Palm Sunday, March 24th.

License Inspector Joseph Stewart, in the box said that he had often been in Flynn's house and had always found Flynn trying to keep a decent and respectable house.

A young man named McCliggott, of Douro, the next witness, was in the American House on Palm Sunday, with Garnet Spencer, and the two McMurray's. They had four bottles of ale in a room upstairs. Spencer paid Flynn for the liquor. Flynn pulled the corks. Witness had other liquor than that in the five bottles during the afternoon. This was liquor brought out of the house, but drunk in the yard.

To Mr. Haverson, his reason for informing was that he and Flynn had had some words. He went with his brother and brother-in-law to the hotel. There he found the two McMurrays and Spencer.

Another witness said he was at the American Hotel on Palm Sunday. He had some ale in a room upstairs. His evidence corroborated that of the last witness, but he did not see the liquor paid for.

B. Spencer, who lives in Smithtown, was in the city on Palm Sunday. He lives some 15 miles from the city. He asked Flynn for a room about six o'clock Saturday evening for himself and a friend. He asked him also to put away some liquor for Sunday. He invited some friends to his room and they had four bottles of lager, which Flynn had brought up and left in an adjoining room. Flynn did not pull the corks, each man extracting his own with jack knives or lead pencils.

Mr. Flynn then went into the bog and said that the two men from the country had been at his hotel. They got a room at six o'clock Saturday night. Spencer asked him to lay away some liquor for use on Sunday. He put eight or nine bottles in the wood cellar. Took it up to the room next morning.

Mr. Haverson noted that this was a case where the action had been brought from private spite and to get revenge. The evidence of men laying such informations was to be taken with care. Flynn, the defendant, had told a straight story, and no one of the witnesses contradicted any part of it. He noted that Inspector Stewart was possibly the most painstaking and conscientious inspector in the Province of Ontario, and devotes his entire energy and time to making the hotelmen keep the law, and Mr. Stewart spoke very highly of Flynn's way of keeping the law.

The magistrate in summing up, censured the man who out of private spite because the hotel keeper had reproved him for using profane language in front of a child, had gotten Mr. Flynn, of whom Inspector Stewart had spoken very highly into the present trouble. He considered that the fact of Flynn putting a number of bottles away Saturday in legal hours, for his guests' supply was not shown clearly enough proven, i.e., that whilst they might have been put away for a legitimate purpose, the place of storage was not absolutely for the guests' private use. He imposed the lightest fine permissable under the act, viz., $50, with $8.10 costs. Another charge against the same defendant for the same day, Palm Sunday, was dropped.

Keith will on that day take charge of this church as its pastor. The rev. gentleman, who has recently returned from India, where he was doing work for the Bible Study Department of the Y.M.C.A., and who has made a most favorable impression here, is a graduate of McGill University from which institution he received the degree of M.A. He studied theology in Princeton and in the Presbyterian College, Montreal. He received the degree of Batchelor of Divinity in 1904 and was awarded the gold medal for highest standing in the graduating class.

Don't Speak or Corpse Will Wake

Local Children Play a Somewhat New Game.

On Saturday a funny little incident, worth the narration, amused at least one family. It might be noted that in the family referred to are three small children, the youngest being about three years of age. During the evening the mother of these hopefuls noticing a suspicious quiet, went upstairs to a bedroom, and hearing whispers, but seeing little light over the transom, quietly opened the door. To her astonishment in place of the usual electric light, were two burning candles. On the floor lay a bureau drawer. In this, head on pillow, and covered to the neck with pillowslums, lay her youngest with a bunch of artificial flowers, borrowed from an elder sister's hat, over her chest. One of the elder children, in a stage whisper, said, "Mother, don't let baby see you. We're paying corpse and if she hears you she won't lay still another minute! This somewhat gruesome game had been suggested by an elder one of the trio having been recently in a house where the sad and stern tragedy of death had suggested the scene described.

Government to Own Branch Lines

Fredericton, N. B., April 8.—In the House yesterday afternoon, Mr. Ryan, of Albert, gave notice of a motion to the effect that it would be in the interests of the Province and the I. C. R. to have the Government take over the branch lines of railways of the Province. The motion will be discussed on Monday next and is likely to make some interesting discussion.

The Gaynor and Greene Case

New Orleans, April 8.—United States District Attorney Marion Erwin concluded his argument for the Government in the Gaynor and Greene case on appeal in the United States Circuit Court at Savannah before the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals. He had spent more than two days speaking in rebuttal of the defence. Mr. Erwin went into nearly every phase of the case.

S. A. Band to Meet

In a few weeks the bandsmen of the Salvation Army Band, now over 40 strong, will hold their annual meeting for reorganization and discussion of work during the coming summer. There are $150 worth of instruments on the way now, to add to the others which are comparatively new. The S.A. band is now a credit to both the order and the city, their music having given pleasure to many both in the streets and at the Victoria Park public concerts. It is an institution well worthy of support.

BRITISH COLUMBIA IS PROSPEROUS

Financial Outlook is Much Brighter.

REVENUE IS INCREASING

But the Public Debt is Decreasing Rapidly.

Victoria, B. C., April 8.—The estimates for the year ending June 30, 1908, presented to the Legislature Thursday, show an increase in revenue of $493,500 over the present year. The estimate for land sales is almost double that of last year, the increase being made largely owing to the recent sale of Government lands in Vancouver, a considerable balance from which is still outstanding. For timber royalties the estimate is raised $300,000 over that of last year, owing largely to the increased activity in the lumber markets. Miscellaneous interest has been raised from five to twenty thousand.

The expenditure shows a decrease in the cost of the public departments amounting to $55,000, while the debt itself will be reduced $298,530. Salaries are increased over $30,000, the provincial police alone getting $10,000 more than last year. The cost of education is increased $61,000 and $25,000 is set aside for fighting forest fires.

Concluding a vigorous address Finance Minister Tatlow said the credit of the province is now established on a firm basis and the attention of fellow-subjects had been attracted in our directon, and it will not be long until the Province rises to the position it must occupy sooner or later as the wealthiest Province of the Dominion.

Case of Mayhem at Bridgenorth

The Tweed News of last issue describes a revolting fight between two drunken men at Bridgewater.

The participants were Walter Brown and Chas. Sprack, both of Bridgewater, who had been drinking together, and finally ended up by a scrap in which Brown used his teeth and chewed Sprack's ear and one finger somewhat after the fashion of a South Sea cannibal. Brown was placed under arrest by Constable Sedore and brought to Tweed Saturday evening. He remained in the lock-up here until Monday noon, when he was taken back to Bridgewater for trial before Magistrate James. After hearing the evidence Brown was found guilty of common assault and a fine of $5 and costs was imposed. It was also arranged that both men sign a pledge to abstain from intoxicating liquors for one year.

PAID DEBTS IN GOLD

Halifax, N.S., April 7. — The other day Mrs. Grace Spencer, aged between 65 and 70 years, was found dead inbed at her home, 60 Kempt road, after being lifeless, so the Medical Examiner is of the opinion for about two weeks. The deceased was a widow, and had one daughter living in the States.

In a small room, modestly arranged, the body lay partly undressed, and in a good state of preservation, while in a skirt on a chair nearby, was found a bank book which showed that the deceased had to her credit $1,100 in a large New York banking institution, $60 in gold, and $9 in other money. This discovery may in part explain the tragic ending of one who evidently had sufficient to provide herself with all the luxuries but who was content to live and die alone.

She was, so the neighbors say, a woman of peculiar habits, eccentric to a degree, and solitary. Her habit was to take a basket and go to a grocery store in the neighborhood. There she would tender a ten dollar gold piece in payment for the goods. She invariably tendered a gold piece of similar denomination. Then she would not be seen again for two weeks, or until the supply of provisions had run out. A person of such regular habits would be missed if they failed to turn up in the accustomed time.

Three weeks elapsed, and Mr. Knowles, who keeps a feed store in the vicinity, thinking that something was wrong, despatched one of his men to investigate matters. The man climbed a ladder, looked in a back window, and saw the old lady lying on the bed, dead. Undertaker Spencer, when notified, proceeded immediately to the house, and it was he who searched and found the bank book and money referred to above. The deceased owned the house that she resided in.

The body bore no marks of violence of any nature, and the face gave no evidence of other than a peaceful death.

Many Changes Proposed for Rifle

Ottawa, April 8.—A return laid on the table of the House on Wednesday gives some later information regarding the government's dealings with the Ross Rifle Company of Quebec. It shows that following the complaints made in respect to the rifle a military board was appointed to recommend improvements for the rifle. On March 19, the board recommended no less than 25 changes which it was considerable desirable to have made. The military council concurred in the report of the board. Many of the changes which the board considered desirable are of a minor character, but they are all calculated to make the arm stronger. Of the 25 changes recommended, 11 were agreed to by the Ross Rifle Company; 11 others the company agreed to try experimentally, at their own cost, while 3 of the suggested changes the company maintains if made should be at the expense of the Government.

WEAK STOMACH CAUSES SICKNESS

Different Symptoms That Result From Indigestion. How to Cure by Strengthening the Stomach.

If you have ever suffered with a weak stomach you must realize that the digestive system is to the body what the foundation is to the house—the base of support and strength.

Whatever hurts your stomach or lessens its power, hurts all other parts of the body and impairs their powers. If the stomach is weak and distressed, one organ after another will be involved until the heart, kidneys and liver are all distressed.

Get the stomach right and health will naturally come to the other organs. This explains why a good many people who have doctored for years for diseases of the heart, kidneys or liver, have at last been cured by Mi-o-na stomach tablets. They found to their astonishment and happiness that, when the weak stomach was strengthened, their health returned, the heart became regular, the torpid liver active and the kidneys healthy.

Do not think we claim Mi-o-na is a "cure-all." It is not. It is a specific for all distresses of the stomach, and when it strengthens the stomach and cures indigestion, you will soon be well all over without further medicine.

Mi-o-na is sold only in 50c. boxes, never in bulk. It is sold under an absolute guarantee to refund money unless it cures.

Write today for a free sample package, and also give us your symptoms, and one of the best known stomach specialists will give your case his careful and personal attention without charge. Booth's Mi-o-na Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Wanted for Murder of His Room Mate

Vancouver, B. C., April 8.—F. C. Gould, the young man who was arrested here on Saturday while trying to pass forged cheques, and who was found to have passed four false cheques on Brown's store, was identified by Sergeant of Detectives Mulhern as Leo C. Thurman, wanted in Norfolk, Virginia, for the brutal murder of his room mate, U. P. Dolson, on the morning of February 1, 1906. Thurman killed his fellow-lodger by crushing in his skull while he was asleep. The body was found doubled in a trunk and was tagged for shipment. A reward of $300 was offered by the Oddfellows Lodge of Norfolk and $100 by the Governor of Virginia for the arrest and conviction of the murderer. Ever since Gould's arrest, Sergeant Mulhern has labored under the conviction that the man was no ordinary criminal, but no amount of questioning could shake Gould's story that he was from Pittsburg, Pa. Mulhern photographed Gould and started to search the records. In the file of the Chicago Police Journal he found a telling likeness of Thurman. The accompanying letter press showed that Thurman had deformities that would render his identity absolute, and when Gould, pale and trembling, was ordered to strip, his identity was no longer in doubt.

Ontario Fruit Prospects

St. Catharines, April 8.—The fruit growers of the Niagara peninsula are quite satisfied that the past winter has not done any particular damage, and with the announcement of spring the fruit trees look in as healthy a condition as they have at this time for years. The peach trees especially are in good shape, and the strawberry plants are showing up well; altogether everything promises an excellent crop unless something unforeseen happens.

Spelling Reform Movement

New York, April 8.—Chairman Brander Matthews, of the simplified spelling board, at its annual meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, submitted a report, in which he said that at least 10,000 persons were using the form of spelling urged by the organization. Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury, of Yale, was elected president. An active effort to enlist the support of teachers and professors and that steps be taken to bring about the establishment of a common board for Great Britain were recommended.

Railway Work on Sundays

Toronto, April 8.—In the near future three Canadian railways will be called upon to defend actions to be entered by County Crown Attorney Drayton at the suggestion of the Lord's Day Alliance. A number of test cases will be taken up, each typical of a certain class of offence, under the Lord's Day Act.

Some of these cases are:

The starting of any train on Sunday which was made up on that day.

General shunting between the hours of 6 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The forcing of employes, such as telegraphers, to work seven days a week.

SEAL INDUSTRY A GREAT SLAUGHTER

In Six Weeks Seals Valued at a Million Dollars are Captured---The Greenland Tragedy of the Year 1898.

St. John's, Nfld., April 7.—This has been an eventful season in the history of the seal fishing industry, an avocation like which there is not another in the world, writes a correspondent of the Boston Post. Between March 10 and April 20—a brief six weeks—350,000 seals, valued at fully a million dollars, are captured by the twenty-four steamers and four thousand men engaged in this pursuit.

Three of the older captains, the last links with the bygone days before steam was introduced, have been struck off the list. Captain Arthur Jackman, the most renowned of the three as a sealer, whaler, Arctic voyager and dauntless Viking, who lost four vessels under him but never lost a man, though he cruised from Greenland to the Levant, died early in February; Captain Samuel Blandford, the commodore of the fleet, who had been for fifty years master of a sealer, was stricken with paralysis in January, and Captain William Winsor, who at the age of sixty-seven started on a two-hundred mile journey on foot and by dog sled to join his vessel, collapsed by the way and had to abandon the attempt.

A REVOLTING SLAUGHTER.

At the inset of the current toward Labrador, where the floes are deflected by the currents along the northern coast of Newfoundland, sealers come upon their prey, and day and night are made hideous with the scenes that ensue.

The mother seals fight gamely in defence of their young, but are driven off by sealers' clubs and the little ones are slaughtered in thousands. They are the best prizes, yielding the finest oil, and the skin and its adhering mass of fat are separated from the carcass (which has no value) and dragged to the ships.

The seals are found in immense herds or "patches," often covering a body of ice reaching beyond the range of vision, and it is not uncommon to find as many as 250,000 seals killed in one of these herds and brought to St. John's.

The seals are to be found also in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and four of the ships go there to hunt them, but twenty of the fleet operate on the Atlantic sea coast of the island, their range extending from the Belle Isle Straits to the Grand Banks, which area of ocean is more or less covered with ice and berg ice every winter, to the great annoyance of trans-atlantic shipping.

The great slaughter of the young seals takes place between March 12 and 24. The young seals are then so feeble to move, and there is no escaping the hunter's murderous club. Sometimes the mothers, alarmed at the noise which accompanies the onrush of the men, scramble to the blow holes in the ice by which they reach the water, and thus escape with their young.

THE GREENLAND TRAGEDY.

The most horrible tragedy in the history of the floes was that of the steamer Greenland in 1898. This ship was struck by a blizzard while 180 men were hunting for seals over the icy plain. They were left helpless while she was driven to sea.

Two nights and a day elapsed before she reached them again, and when she did she found that forty-eight of them had perished from hunger and cold. Some had gone mad from their sufferings, others had collapsed from exhaustion and been frozen stiff, a few had been killed by floating pieces of ice tossed about, while others fell into the ocean and were drowned. Of the total only 25 bodies were recovered, the others having found a grave in the depths of the sea. About forty of the survivors were frost-bitten, and it was a sad looking ship that returned to port that year.

The calamity is one of the most dreadful, and yet the most phenomenal, known to Arctic chronicles. The cold, the hunt, the exposures on the ice, the accidents, submergings, the great loss, the insufficient clothing, the loss of rest, the casualties on shipboard, the ice blindness, the wounds brought on by lack of attention and cleanliness—all these things combine to make the sum total a whole of an awe-inspiring nature. And this is not surprising when it is considered that the most a man could earn for his share in the ship was about $200, though he might be lucky enough to be picked up in the engage to the boat, while the average seems to get into more at the floe, will not exceed $50, one year with another. The ships' officers sometimes fare as badly as their men.

Scaffold Caught Him in Drop of 200 Feet

Chicago, April 8.—John Nagel, a construction engineer, fell from the top of a 200-foot chimney of the Standard Steel Car Works at Hammond yesterday, but in that he struck a projecting scaffold on the outside about 25 feet from the top, which enabled him to grasp a plank, thus saving his life.

Nagel was in charge of the building of the giant smokestack, and in order to see the progress he ascended to the top of the structure in a drop bucket. When the bucket neared the top the man in charge of the hoisting engine below failed to perceive Nagel's signal to stop, and the engineer was thrown over the edge of the narrow aperture above.

His fall was witnessed by hundreds of workmen on surrounding buildings, whose attention was drawn to the top of the towering chimney by Nagel's cries. He escaped practically unhurt, but the other men on the smokestack were so unnerved that they could not work for some time.

The Gleaner Libel Case

Fredericton, N. B., April 8.—Mr. J. Douglas Hazen, M.P.P., who is to act as legal adviser to the editor of The Gleaner in the threatened libel suit of the Hon. Mr. Emmerson, has been notified by Mr. J. H. Barry, K.C., solicitor for the Hon. Mr. Emmerson, that the action to be brought against the editor of The Gleaner, will not be a criminal libel action but a civil suit. As yet the papers have not been served, and there has been no retraction made by The Gleaner.

Brantford, April 7.—Dennis Burke, bartender of the Wellington Hotel, was fined $12.85 at the police court yesterday for selling liquor to minors, sounding two girls fifteen years of age, who entered the hotel with boys under age. The police caught the quartette while they were drinking.

Montreal, April 7.—Jim Sellers has stolen $1000 from his employers.

Way back about the beggining of the fall, a young man about 19 years of age, hailing from Dundee, Scotland, arrived in Canada and struck Montreal. His name was James Sellers, and he was highly recommended. More than that, he was well educated and had a thoroughly respectable appearance. He looked around for a situation and finally found one as a clerk with a Mr. Davidson, druggist of Westmount.

Those who came into the store liked his manner, his general air and his way with his employer, and he was promoted to a position of trust. Now, Mr. Davidson has an arrangement with the Canadian Express Company, whereby he issues money orders, and thereby hangs a tale. About three weeks ago young Sellers failed to report for work. Enquiries at his lodging house disclosed that he had disappeared, and at once Mr. Davidson made an examination of the books. The result was that he found the money order book, containing 21 blank orders, had disappeared. As each of these could be filled out for $50, the blue might approximate $1050.

The matter was at once placed in the hands of the police. The track of the absconding clerk was at first clear, for he calmly went on cashing money orders as he needed the money.

First he was heard from in Kingston, next in Guelph and other Ontario points, then in Winnipeg, and then in Vancouver, where all trace of him was lost. He named his own name in each case, and day after day Mr. Davidson was confronted by money orders bearing the absconding clerk's name, until between $900 or $300 had been accounted for. And what Mr. Davidson is afraid of is that it is not at an end yet.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 6, 1907

THE VOLUNTEER ORGANIST

The great big church wus crowded full uv broadcloth an' uv silk,
An' satin rich as cream that grows on our ol' brindle's milk;
Shined boots, biled shirts, stiff dickeys,
an' stove-pipe hats were there,
An' doods 'ith trouserloons so tight they couldn't kneel in prayer.

The elder, in his poolpit high, said, as he slowly riz:
"Our organist is kep' to hum, laid up
'ith roomatiz;
An' as we have no substitoot, as Brother Moore ain't here,
Will some un, in the congregation be so kind 's to volunteer?"

And then a red-nosed, drunken tramp of low-toned rowdy style,
Give an introductory hic-cup an' staggered up the aisle.
Then thro' thet holy atmosphere there
crep er sense of sin,
An' thro' thet air of sanctity the odor
uv ol' gin.

An' Deacon Purrington, he said, his teeth all sot on edge,
"This man purfanes the house of God!
W'y this is sacrilege!"
The tramp ne'er heard a word he said, but slouched 'ith stumbling feet,
An' sprawled an' staggered up the steps an' gained the organ seat.

An' then went pawin' thro' the keys,
but soon there rose a strain,
Thet seemed to jest bulge out the heart an' 'lectrify the brain;
An' then he bowed down on the thing
'ith hands an' head an' knees,
It seemed as tho' he'd fallen kerflop upon the keys.

The organ roared, the music went sweepin' high an' dry,
It swelled into the rafters an' bulged out to the sky,
The ol' church shook an' staggered an'
seemed to reel an' sway,
An' the elder shouted "Glory!" an' I gylled out "Hooray."

An' then he tried a tender strain, that melted in our ears,
Thet brought up blessed memories an'
drenched 'em down 'ith tears;
An' we dreamed of old-time kitchens,
'ith tabby on the mat,
Uv home, an' love, an' baby days, an'
mother an' all that.

An' then he struck a streak of hope,
a song from souls forgiven,
Thet burst from prison bars uv sin an'
stormed the gates of heaven;
The mornin' stars they sung together,
no soul wus left alone,
We felt the universe wuz safe and God
wus on His throne.

An' then a wail of deep despair and darkness came again,
An' long, black crape hung on the doors uv all the homes of men;
No luv, no light, no joy, no hope, no
songs of glad delight,
An' then—the tramp he staggered down and reeled out uv sight.

But we knew he'd told his story,
though he never spoke a word,
An' it was the saddest story that our ears had ever heard;
He had tol' his own life-history an'
no eye wus dry that day,
When the elder rose an' simply said:
"My brethren let us pray!"

Foreigner Mopped Floor of Station

Toronto, April 6.—That the cleanliness of the floor of the Union Station waiting-room shall be maintained, was strongly exemplified yesterday morning, when a foreigner insisted on spitting where spitting was not allowed. Despite the protests of the constable, he continued. This exasperated the sturdy limb of the law, who called to a redcap boy to bring him a mop. Handing it to the swarthy offender he said:

"Get busy and clean that floor up and then get out."

As his tone was persuasive, the foreigner swallowed his wounded dignity and began to remove the traces of his offence, to the enjoyment of a large number of spectators, and the glory of the Toronto police force.

Plain Talk for British People

London, April 6.—Sir William Lyne, Australian minister of trade and commerce, in an interview, said it was no use telling them England was not in a bad way. She was living from hand to mouth. He was not only glad his views against free trade had been published, but "you will hear something stronger from me in the same direction before I leave England." Australia wanted no help from anybody. All she wanted was to help the British. The preference would come.

"You may try to stifle it, but when labor is throttling you will have to look to the colonial preference for help."

When the Spider Goes Courting.

"The male spider is the bravest and most demonstrative of all lovers," says a naturalist. "He approaches the female, runs round her a few times in little circles and then begins a violent oriental dance. He twirls round and round. Drawing in his legs, he writhes and crawls, serpentlike, along the ground. Straightening his legs and erecting his body, he towers above the lady grandly. And the mischief of it is that the female spider is always stronger than the male and when his dance is done she either accepts him for her mate or else, falling upon him fiercely, she tears him to pieces. Imagine a human lover trying to please his mistress with the knowledge in his heart that, if he failed, he would be murdered. His efforts would be lukewarm and distrait, eh? Yet the humble spider, whom we are accustomed to despise, dances, death staring him in the face, with a gayety, a warmth and an abandon seldom to be met with north of Africa."

Scotch Dialects.

The written language is so far from the spoken in Scotland that spelling reform is an academic question. A story which illustrates the many dialects is told of an examination at Aberdeen university. The examiners were an English clergyman and a lowland Scotchman. The master of the scholars put many questions to them which were admirably answered. The boys brought the Israelites out of Egypt with a simple directness which Moses would have envied. Then the clergyman asked, "How did Pharaoh die?" The boys sat dumb. The lowlander, to make it more plain, repeated the question, "Hoo did Phawraoh dee?" Again there was a dead silence. Next the master himself took the matter in hand—"Fat cam' to Phawraoh at his hinder end?" The boys answered as with one voice, "He was drooned!" To "dee" means in the Aberdeen dialect to die in one's bed. These careful scholars knew that Pharaoh had not "deed."

Queer Damage Calculation.

That spirit of thrift popularly supposed to pervade New England is amusingly illustrated by the observation of a Connecticut farmer. The good man had been seriously ill in midsummer, but by reason of his strong constitution he quickly rallied. On being asked in the autumn how he was feeling he replied in a cheerful tone:

"Pretty fair, now, thanks. Anyway, it don't make much difference, seein' that the farm's well fixed up. If I'd died in hayin' or harvestin' time, I calkilate it'd been $50 damage to me." Then, after a pause, he added:

"Come to think of it, that's too low a figure. Sixty-five dollars would be nearer"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Fought Over Coffin.

Bucharest, April 6.—Four desperate attacks were made by peasants on troops near Craiova recently. The insurgents, who numbered ten thousand, were armed with guns, axes, knives and scythes, and accompanied by their wives and children. Many were killed and wounded in each attack. After the first assault a long funeral procession, headed by a priest, issued from the village, the coffin being followed by thousands of weeping peasants. As they approached the troops they were met by a volley which killed or wounded a number of them. After further fighting the remainder of the peasants fled, leaving the coffin, which, when the soldiers examined it was found to be empty.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. An Automobile Widow.

By Helena Smith Dayton.

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague.

"Really, Elizabeth," protested Judge Ferris, "I think so much of you both I can't mix up in your trouble!"

"That's why I came to you," argued Mrs. Bradbury. "You see, when one is married one has one's favorite clergyman, so when one is unmarried why not one's pet lawyer? It seems kinder."

"Kinder? Going to make it a function with caterers and flumadiddles?" demanded the judge.

"At least you will inform Ned of my decision," ignoring the flippancy.

"Why, Bess, surely you've no grounds for a divorce. You can't wheedle your freedom out of a court because Ned perhaps forgot to give you violets on your birthday or"—

"I have a reason," icily.

"Oh, ho!" exclaimed the judge. "May I ask her name?"

"It's an automobile!" explained Elizabeth. "I'm what is called an 'automobile widow.'"

"A new one to me," commented the judge musingly.

"We've quarreled ever since he bought that big circus chariot of his. I wanted horses instead—I'm originally from Kentucky, you know, and I vowed I'd never step foot in that car, and I haven't! He spends all his time in it, he says I'm unreasonable, and"—Elizabeth broke down.

"Proceed," prompted the judge.

"The last two days he hasn't even gone through the formality of asking me to accompany him, though of course I wouldn't have gone! Yesterday he whizzed by with that blond Johnson girl and today with Mrs. Wheeler. However, I'm not jealous of a mere woman. It's the car!"

"Ned probably wanted to show you if you wouldn't motor with him—others would," suggested the listener.

"Shows how demoralizing the craze is," stormed Elizabeth. "Recall the fuss there was when women first took to cycling? Well, since men have taken to motoring the reformers ought"—

"OH, HO!" EXCLAIMED THE JUDGE. "MAY I ASK HER NAME?"

"You aspire to start a reform by making an example of Ned? Have you a photo all ready for the newspapers?"

"I'm not seeking notoriety," she snapped. "I simply want a nice quiet divorce. I may as well be a grass widow as an automobile widow."

"Come, Bess, you can't be serious. Go home, but stop en route and buy some ripping motor togs. Get red silk to show you are enthusiastic and then"—

"I'm not here to consult you about toilets," she cut in. "I came to apply for a divorce. What's more—fancy red with my hair!"

"No one dare call it anything but Titian in my presence! But, seriously, you will go home and make peace with Ned?"

"If you wish to communicate with me further, I shall be at Clara Lincoln's. Good afternoon." She swept out and into the elevator. "But I mean business."

"Bess will purchase motor togs yet!" smiled the judge. "But I must give expert advice to Ned—surely one's 'pet lawyer' can be 'kinder!'"

Mrs. Bradbury went directly to an attorney who knew neither herself nor her husband. She decided it poor policy to do business with friends. Young Lawyer Elkins, she found, had no scruples.

"Has the defendant any property we could attach?" asked the splinter of the bar pompously.

"I wouldn't take a penny from him!" protested Elizabeth.

"We could worry him a lot!" tempted the legal adviser.

"Could I attach his automobile?" cried Elizabeth eagerly.

"I shall get out the writ at once!" he said decisively.

"I suppose it is a clever way for an automobile widow to avenge herself," sighed Elizabeth. Then briskly, "You will find the car at the Westminster garage."

Elizabeth went to Clara Lincoln's rejoicing at her coup d'etat. Clara, being of the Miss Hobbs type, congratulated her on her admirable spirit. Clara was propping up the "admirable spirit" when Elizabeth's lawyer called her to the telephone.

"Hello! Yes, this is she. The car is not there? A sheriff and two detectives searching? My goodness, every one in town will hear about it! Necessary? Oh, very well!"

Later another call came.

"Yes. Located the car at the Appleby Coach company? Bring it away at once— On the third floor? Well, bring it down the way it went up! Man refuses to operate the elevator? Can't you force him to? Then get a trained elevator man, and I'll pay for his time. They refuse to allow the elevator to be operated—ridiculous! Equipped with a writ to seize property, but balked because there's no law to force them to help you get it! Lawyer Elkins, are you there? Take it out a widow; the wall must be full of windows. Windows too small? Take the machine apart. Gracious! Five hundred dollars to put it together again? You suggest leaving it there with a sheriff to guard it? Very well!"

Elizabeth passed an unhappy night. What would Ned do? She speculated about the blond and Mrs. Wheeler and worried about the sheriff sitting alone through the long night on the third floor of the Appleby repository with Ned's big cream colored motor car shining like a ghost out of the gloom. She feared she was punishing the sheriff more than Ned.

Next morning a strange lawyer called—Ned's lawyer! She shuddered.

"Mrs. Bradbury," began Lawyer Snyder, "how much will you take for your interest in the car?"

"It's not money I want," she explained loftily, "but the car."

"This is certainly the motoring season," he agreed, "and the dealers can't deliver a car under six weeks. That's why the other two ladies were so anxious to secure this one."

"What two ladies?" Elizabeth demanded.

"Why, a few days ago Mr. Bradbury advertised his car for sale, and he gave demonstrations to two lady prospects"—

"The blond and Mrs. Wheeler!" gasped Elizabeth, light dawning. "He was selling to please me. What a mess I have made of everything!"

"Any message to send my client?" asked Snyder, rising.

"Wait, please," cried Elizabeth wildly. "I'm going down to Mr. Bradbury's office myself. There's really nothing more you can do on the case."

Elizabeth was smiling on the lawyer recklessly.

"May I take you down in my automobile?" he suggested.

"Oh, would you?" she asked gayly. "Automobiles go so delightfully quick! But pardon me a moment. Hello, central! Give me 5006 Blue. Is that Judge Ferris? O-o-h, Dicky. I thought you'd be relieved to know I've decided on the color for my motor outfit. Red may denote enthusiasm, but gray is much more serviceable, and, you know, Ned has talked of some long trips. Besides, gray is so harmonious with Titian tresses. That's all. What? Ned there? How lovely! I'll be right down."

What HON. H. G. EWART, Former Congressman, Circuit Court and U. S. Judge, Western District, North Carolina, Has to Say of NEVADA MINING INVESTMENTS:

Nevada's past history was written by the Comstock. Its present history is being written by Goldfield, Tonopah and Bullfrog.

The great Comstock Mine at Virginia City, Nevada, produced $680,000,000. It added hundreds of millions to the world's supply of precious metals; it built transcontinental railroads, great steamship lines and telegraphic cables across the ocean, it financed some of the world's greatest newspapers, it endowed universities and colleges, and galleries of art, it built multitudes of towns and cities, it completed that splendid metropolis, San Francisco, it made United States senators, railroad and bank presidents, it fixed in history the names of Mackey, Fair, Flood, O'Brien, Shaw, Jones and Sutro.

Tonopah was discovered in 1900. Her Mizpah is probably the greatest silver-gold mine of the world. This camp has paid $2,200,000 in cash dividends.

Goldfield came next, and is producing today $130,000 every twenty-four hours, or at the rate of $50,000,000 per annum.

It is Bullfrog now, the baby among her wonderful camps, that Nevada is holding forth to the world like a doting mother. Unlike Goldfield, Bullfrog is essentially a great milling proposition; there being literally mountains of ore, assaying from $6 to $250 per ton. When other mining camps in Nevada will be deserted, Bullfrog will be known as the "Camp of Confidence and Endurance." It will take centuries to exhaust its great ore deposits. This is the reason why Schwab, McKane, Oddie, Clark and other millionaires have quietly acquired nearly every foot of available mineral ground in this great district. This is the reason why four great railroads have already completed, and are rapidly extending their lines into the Bullfrog district. This is why Rhyolite has in the short space of three years changed from a habitation of coyotes and side-wheelers into a modern up-to-date city of 7,000 people. This is the reason why the Montgomery-Shoshone is building upon its properties a great reduction mill which will handle its thousands of tons of ore and which will cost over half a million. This is the reason why all Bullfrog stocks have steadily advanced in the face of the savage and unjustifiable attacks made by Wall street and their paid newspaper emissaries.

The South Bullfrog district, which includes the Keane Wonder, Big Dell, Cliff, California Bullfrog, Death Valley Mining & Milling Co., and others, is looked upon as one of the coming camps of importance. The ore found in this district are quartz and talc, carrying iron oxides, the principal values being in gold, with silver and copper traces.

It is in this district that the Bullfrog-Comstock Mines Company (Inc.) properties in part are located. The company owns 80 acres of highly mineralized lands within two miles of the California Bullfrog Mine. Its assays show rich gold, silver and copper values, and being a tunnel proposition, can be economically and quickly developed. The other property of the Bullfrog-Comstock Mines Company is splendidly located right in the very heart of this great gold-bearing camp, consisting of 160 acres within 1 1-2 miles of the great Montgomery-Shoshone Mine owned by Charles M. Schwab, the Pittsburg steel magnate, and his associates. It is only two miles from the City of Rhyolite with a fine road leading to the mines, and within one mile of the water pipes leading from Indian Springs to the City of Rhyolite. Its ledges are bold and well defined, and expert engineers declare it as the ir opinion, that the same rich veins of the Montgomery-Shoshone traverse this property.

Kansas City, Mo., February 20, 1907.

J. H. MORELAND,

Mr. Moreland is one of the most expert and reliable assayers in the United States. He is a graduate of the State School of Mines of Colorado, and has had fifteen years practical experience as assayer of leading mines and smelters. For many years he was the official Government assayer for the United States Custom House at Kansas City, Mo. The large proportion of all ores shipped from Mexico is received at Kansas City.

The Bullfrog-Comstock Mines Co. is officered and managed by gentlemen of the highest character and standing in this city. The company has secured the services of Mr. J. E. Lindstrom, of Rhyolite, Nevada, as general manager, whose years of experience in Alaska, Colorado, and California, peculiarly fit him for this position.

After the most careful and personal examination of the properties of this company, its officers, and its possibilities, I have accepted the position of Fiscal Agent of the company and offer to the investing public, 250,000 shares of its stock at 10 cents per share. With the knowledge I have of the tremendous possibilities of this company, and its valuable properties, and the high character of its officials, I do not hesitate to urge my friends in the south, and the investing public generally, to buy this stock, satisfied as I am that they will realize enormous profits on their investments.

It will give me pleasure to mail to any inquirers, prospectus, maps, and full information as to the properties of this company. Highest references given.

This stock can be purchased either for cash, or on the installment plan as follows:

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 25 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.

We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 6200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assassays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 20 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN

Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by HARPER & BROTHERS

It seems only natural that she should marry the man who is her brother's partner in many a little speculation."

Maurice Gordon, sitting there staring hopelessly into the half breed's face, saw it all. He went back in a flash of recollection to many passing details which had been unnoted at the time; details which now fitted into each other like links of a chain, and that chain was around him. He leaped forward in a momentary opening of the future, and saw himself ruined, disgraced, held up to the execration of the whole civilized world. He was utterly in this man's power, bound hand and foot. He could not say him no, and least of all could he say no to this demand, which had roused all the latent chivalry, gentlemanliness, brotherly love that was in him. Maurice Gordon knew that Victor Durnovo possessed knowledge which Jocelyn would consider cheap at the price of her person.

"I don't think," said Durnovo, who seemed to be following Gordon's thoughts, "that the idea will be so repellent to your sister as you seem to think."

And a sudden ray of hope shot athwart the future into which his listener was staring. It might be so. One can never tell with women.

"I don't want you to do anything now," he went on more gently. It was wonderful how well he knew Maurice Gordon. The suggested delay appealed to one side of his nature, the softened tone to another. "There is time enough. When I come back I will speak of it again. Your sister is very fond of you, and—I think I have one or two arguments to put forward which she would recognise as uncommonly strong. I would not bring forward those arguments except as a last resource. I would first point out the advantages. A fourth share in the simiacine scheme would make you a rich man—above suspicion—independent of the gossip of the market place."

Maurice Gordon winced visibly, and his eyes wavered as if he were about to give way to panic.

"You could retire and go home to England—to a cooler climate. This country might get too hot for your constitution. See?"

Durnovo came back into the center of the room and stood by the writing table. His attitude was that of a man holding a whip over a cowering dog.

He took up his hat and riding whip with a satisfied little laugh, as if the dog had cringingly done his bidding.

"Besides," he said, with a certain defiance of manner, "I may succeed without any of that—eh?"

"Yes," Gordon was obliged to admit, with a gulp, as if he were swallowing his pride. And he knew that in saying the word he was degrading his sister—throwing her at this man's feet as the price of his own honor.

With a half contemptuous nod, Victor Durnovo turned and went away to keep his appointment with Meredith.

* * * * * * *

Guy Oscard was sitting on the natural terrace in front of Durnovo's house at Msala, and Marie attended to his simple wants with that patient dignity which suggested the recollection of better times and appealed strongly to the manhood of her fellow servant Joseph and her whilom master.

"I hear the sound of paddles," she said.

"My ears are not so sharp as yours," said Oscard.

He listened, and after a moment heard the regular glug-glug of the paddles stealing over the waters of the still tropic river, covering a wonderful distance.

"Yes," he said, "I hear. Mr. Meredith said he would be back tonight."

She gave a strange little low laugh—almost the laugh of a happy woman.

The two boats came on to the sloping shore with a grating sound, and by the light of the waving lanterns Oscard saw Durnovo and Jack land from the same boat.

The three men walked up to the house together. Marie was at the door and bowed her head gravely in answer to Jack's salutation. Durnovo nodded curtly and said nothing.

In the sitting room, by the light of the paraffin lamp, the two Englishmen exchanged a long questioning glance, quite different from the quick interrogation of a woman's eyes. There was a smile on Jack Meredith's face.

"All ready to start tomorrow?" he inquired.

"Yes," replied Oscard.

And that was all they could say. Durnovo never left them alone together that night. He watched their faces with keen, suspicious eye. Behind the mustache his lips were pursed up in restless anxiety. But he saw nothing—learned nothing. These two men were inscrutable.

At 11 o'clock the next morning the simiacine seekers left their first unhappy camp at Msala. They had tasted of misfortune at the very beginning, but after the first reverse they returned to their work with that dogged determination which is a better spirit than the wild enthusiasm of departure, where friends shout and flags wave, and an artificial hopefulness throws in its jarring note.

In less than a week they had left the river, hauling their canoes up on the bank and hiding them in the tangle of the virgin underwood. A depot of provisions, likewise hidden, was duly made, and the long, weary march began.

We have not to deal so much with the finding of the simiacine as with the finders, and of these the chief at this time was Jack Meredith. It seemed quite natural that one duty after another should devolve upon him, and he invariably had time to do them all and leisure to comment pleasantly upon it. But his chief care was Victor Durnovo.

When they had been on the march for two months—piloted with marvelous instinct by Durnovo—Meredith made one or two changes in the organization. The caravan naturally moved slowly, owing to the enormous amount of baggage to be carried, and this delay seemed to irritate Victor Durnovo to such an extent that at last it was obvious that the man would go mad unless this frightful tension could be relieved.

An advance column, commanded by Meredith and Durnovo, was selected to push on to the plateau, while Oscard and Joseph followed more leisurely with the baggage and the slower travelers.

Victor Durnovo would never know rest now until he reached the spot where the simiacine should be. If the trees were there, growing, as he said, in solitary state and order, strangely suggestive of human handiwork, then Victor Durnovo was saved. If no such spot was found, madness and death could only follow.

"Yes," he cried; "it's simiacine!"

Luck and Reputations.

"Nobody gifted with a sense of humor can fail to be diverted by the Puck-like manner in which luck makes and unmakes reputations for business ability," says Will Payne in Everybody's. "Years ago a gentleman named Jennings was an extensive owner of downtown real estate in Chicago. He was the first, I believe, to develop on a large scale the modern system of the ninety-nine year lease, whereby the owner insures to himself and his heirs for a century an absolutely fixed rental, free and clear of all charges. After Mr. Jennings had leased a lot of his lands for ninety-nine years a depression came on. Other people's incomes were curtailed, but his was stable. 'What foresight!' said the town. 'What sagacity!' 'What superb business judgment!' Mr. Jennings' views on the business situation and outlook were eagerly sought. The depression passed. Realty prices advanced immensely. The Jennings lots could have been leased at twice the rental named in the old indenture. The town shook its head sympathetically over poor Mr. Jennings' deplorable shortsightedness."

Woes of a Drummer.

"I'm just a little discouraged with my work," said the tall New York boy who has started out on the road. "I was making my second trip west when I met an old drummer who had been on the road for more than thirty years. He sat with grip between his knees and talked to me.

"'Chuck it, my boy,' he said. 'If there is anything else in the world you can do, do it. Look at my gray hairs. I don't know what it is to have a home. For thirty years I have seen my wife about once in five weeks. I know that I've a wife and children in a flat in New York, but that's all I do know about them. The children have grown up and married, but I have not had time to attend their weddings. My wife has grown gray, too, but she has had the best of it. She has had a home and the children. If there is anything else in the world you can do, my boy,' he repeated, 'quit drumming, and do it.'"

Curious Blunders.

Some remarkable mistakes in memorials have totally escaped notice until it was too late to rectify them. The spurs on the boots of Cromwell's statue at Westminster abbey, London, are the most interesting feature of the monument, although they generally get no attention at all from sightseers. They are worn upside down. In a painted window on the staircase which leads from the floor of Westminster palace to the committee rooms an inscription on a sword wielded by the "Black Prince" has the words "Prince of Wales." Again, in the fresco depicting the embarkation of the pilgrim fathers in the corridor leading from the outer lobby at St. Stephen's to the house of lords the Mayflower is shown to be hoisting the union jack, a flag which did not come into existence until 250 years after the days of the historic Mayflower.

A "Ringers' Jug."

A beer jug in a belfry is happily somewhat of a rarity in these days. At the beginning of the last century, however, people were not so particular. The ringers' jug at Beccles, in Suffolk, holds six gallons, a sufficiency to sustain the ten weary ringers, though the weight of the bells did exceed six tons. The vessel is made of red earthenware and has three handles, one of which is concealed by the neck. It bears the following inscription in quaint spelling:

"When I am fill'd with liquor strong
Each Man drink once and then ding dong.
Drink not too much to Cloud your Knobs
Least you forget to make the Bobbs.

A gift of John Pattman Beccles." On the reverse side is the maker's name, "Samuel Stringfellow, Potter."—London Strand.

KENNEDY COBALT, Ltd.

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 12. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 20 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 20 acres of J. B. 12 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 6 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 5 inch nicolite, 18 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1283-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

New Liskeard, 17th November, 1906.

JACOB M. EGGERT, M.E.

We offer a few more shares at Fifty Cents (50c); par value One Dollar ($1.00). The property is being developed as fast as possible, and we cannot promise that stock will be sold at less than par for very long. Don't wait until it is $3.00 to invest, giving others big profits for what you should have bought sooner. We want you to get in on the ground floor and share in the big profits. For a limited time only we will accept subscriptions at 50 cents—the stock is slated for a sharp advance very soon. Send marked cheque or money order.

LIFE DEPENDS ON HEALTHY BLOOD.

IS YOURS RICH AND PURE?

Blood is the soul of life.

Check its formation, rduce its quality, lessen its red cells—you at once sap strength and vitality—you peril life itself.

When you strengthen the blood, make it richer in red cells, increase its solid constituents, you supply the materials that rebuild—you furnish that disease-resisting element we call strength.

When you are weak and ailing—when appetite is poor—when mental effort seems impossible, sleep hard to get, be sure your blood has grown poor and your nervous system in consequence is impaired.

Nothing so quickly stimulates the formation of rich, red blood as Ferrozone.

Ferrozone's action upon the digestive power is immediate—everything you eat is converted into nourishment and building material.

Ferrozone fortifies the action of the kidneys, liver and stomach, increases circulation, and by these means throws into the blood a vast store of material to build up and to strengthen.

Ferrozone by making blood and stimulating vital action, transmits to the debilitated brain cells, exhausted by toil, by anxiety, or by sickness, the strength they need.

The beneficient action of Ferrozone on the brain is transmitted through the nervous system, and all powers of the body are enormously increased.

Ferrozone enables the body to perform all its functions in a normal and natural way, and with an absolute freedom from reaction, which is the most positive assurance that the body is strengthened—not stimulated.

Whether the weakness you suffer is profound or of long standing, whatever the conditions are—if the blood is impaired, if its redness is reduced, if its activity is lessened—Ferrozone is an absolute and rapid remedy.

For any condition of weakness, debility or ill-health in men, women and children, you cant find so nourishing and strengthening a tonic as Ferrozone; try it, sold everywhere in 50c. sizes.

New Amusement Park is to be Operated

Street Railway Company to Open a Park, a Few Miles From the City.

It now seems that that beautiful gift to the city, Jackson Park will soon miss the crowds and excitement that have during summer nights for several seasons made it such an attraction to thousands of our citizens.

It is rumored currently that the local street railway authorities have decided to acquire and in fact now have an option on a suitable spot on the river edge, for a park of their own, to which the car lines will be extended. It is the intention of the company to spare neither trouble nor expense to have this appropriately situated and beautiful location one of the most attractive amusement parks in the country. Of course, owing to the extensive preparation, buildings of various kinds, etc., it is improbable that the new park will be in readiness for the thousands who will daily and nightly flock to it, or not until the fallat earliest. However the company will in the mean time continue the energetic and successful catering to the public's amusement at Jackson Park that has characterised former years. Already Mr. Learmonth, has arranged for new and popular amusements at the latter park, which will be in full swing as soon as the weather permits.

Cheap Groceries for Sale Today

In order to obtain permanent premises, China Hall has purchased the large and well assorted stock of groceries, etc., of Mr. A. Rountree, No. 384 George street. This stock, which is one of the finest grocery stocks in Peterborough, will, together with the balance of the China Hall stock, be thrown on the market at cost price, commencing March 2 and continuing until both stocks are entirely disposed of, but no longer than the 15th of April, after which date the store will be re-fitted, and opened about May 1, with an entirely new stock of crockery, china, glassware, cut-glass, plated ware, fine china ornaments, etc. China Hall, after that date, will be beyond a doubt one of the finest and most complete china stores in Canada. The China Hall Company.

Waters vs. Allan Case Settled

The case of Harry Waters against Jas. Allan, of Peterborough, in which $10,000 was claimed for alienation of his wife's affections, has been settled out of court. The action was to have been tried at the sittings of the High Court today, but will not be proceeded with now. This leaves only two cases on the docket, Bretsch versus Spry, and Kendry versus Richmond.

Work on New Factory Begun

As noted in a former issue of The Times, a new furniture factory is to be erected in the east ward. No time has been wasted in getting this proposition into tangible shape, as Mr. W. J. Main has been already awarded the contract for the foundation, which will be of concrete and the first carload of material for the factory has arrived and is now being placed on the ground for the foundation. Mr. Main will commence work immediately on the excavations for the building.

AT THE "PRINCESS"

Toronto Attraction Will Draw Many to City From Peterboro.

The most important musical happening, not only of the season but of at least a decade, will be the appearance at the Princess Theatre, Toronto, for four performances, beginning Thursday, April 11th, and continuing for these nights and a special Saturday matinee, of Mr. Henry W. Savage's new English Grand Opera company in Puccini's operatic sensation, "Madam Butterfly." The production of this marvelous work by precisely the same company of eminent artists that appeared during its only recent New York run, assisted by a chorus of seventy-five voices, and an orchestra of sixty pieces, constitutes an attraction of such great magnitude and interest that the railroads have operated with the theatre management to afford out-of-town people an opportunity to attend with the least possible inconvenience attached. The nearest railroad agent can furnish all the details requested.

The Princess Theatre management has taken unusual pains to provide a satisfactory mail order service. Orders should be accompanied by remittance payable to O. B. Sheppard and enclosed in a stamped envelope for return. Such orders will be filled in the sequence of their receipt, thus giving outside parties an equal opportunity with the citizens of Toronto. The prices of seats are as follows: Lower boxes $1.50; Lower floor $2.50 and $2.00; Balcony $2.00 and $1.50; Gallery $1.00.

"Madam Butterfly" is not alone the operatic furore of modern times, but is as well a magnificent scenic spectacle. The atmosphere of Japan is so faithfully duplicated that the spectator easily imagines himself in the land of the wisteria and the geisha. In its entirety "Madam Butterfly" is the most beautiful, entrancing and soul stirring work that the stage has seen in years. It is Puccini's masterpiece, produced with the greatest cast Mr. Savage has ever organized and enlivened without regard to expense.

Among the singers who will appear are: Miss Szamosy from Budapest, Rena Vivienne from Milan, Florence Easton from London, Harriett Behnee from Berlin, Ethel Dafre from Paris, Francis Maclennan, Robert Kent Parker, Joseph F. Sheehan, Thomas D. Richards, Wallace Brewnlow, Carl Cantvoort, Stephen Jungman and Francis Tyler.

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa, suppressed or absent monthly period, with pain from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and Anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

CONNECT THE MAFIA WITH BLACK HAND

Italian Police Gather Evidence That Explains Kidnappings and Murders in New York---American Fugitive Member of Both Gangs.

London, April 8.—The Rome correspondent of The Chronicle says that mysterious kidnapings and murders by the Black Hand in New York have just been unraveled at Palermo through a crime committed by the Sicilian Mafia on July 14, 1906, when a rich merchant named Marchez was found killed at Partinico. In his office were found a quantity of blackmailing letters containing threats of death.

The police were finally put on the track of Nunzio Minore, who shortly before the crime had returned from New York to his wife and family. Informers testified Minore was one of four assassins hired from the Mafia by relatives of the murdered man who were anxious to inherit his property.

FIND EVIDENCE UNDER FLOOR.

Minore's sister's house was surrounded by the carabinerie. Minore's wife hurled out of a back window a bundle of incriminating documents, which fell to the soldiery below. Other packets of correspondence were found beneath the floor, but the evidence thus obtained of Minore's complicity in the Marchez murder were insignificant beside the revelations of his connections with the Black Hand in New York, which had sent him to Sicily after a series of stirring deeds of blood and violence.

Here is a characteristic case: In March, 1906, Antony Bozzuffi, the fourteen-year-old son of a New York banker, was kidnaped and concealed in a house in 59th street, Brooklyn. A ransom of $20,000 was demanded of the father. The lad escaped through the connivance of Salvatore Lungo, who had been told to guard him.

GUARD WAS MURDERED.

Lungo, some mornings after, was found dead with stiletto and revolver wounds all over his body. Minore was convicted of the kidnaping, but the New York courts acquitted him of assassinating Lungo or belonging to the Black Hand.

The Palermo police have now been able to communicate the missing proofs to the New York criminal department, together with a mass of facts and the names of persons allied with secret societies in the United States. The New York authorities have written to the King's procurator general at Palermo that the photographs sent were easily identified. The Marchez murder trial will soon begin at Palermo, and it is believed that it will reveal some astounding connections between the New York Black Hand and the Sicilian Mafia.

Inspector Ball on Creek Contamination

Board of Health Met and Presented a Vote of Thanks to the Chief.

At yesterday's meeting of the Board of Health, when Messrs. Chairman (Wm. Eyres, Parker, Schneider, Neill, Mayor McWilliams, M.H.O. Dr. Bingham, S.I. Geo. Ball and Dr. McNulty were present, Sanitary Inspector Ball reported that the creek running through the center of the city, was little better than an open sewer. A large number of closets either over the creek or near to it contaminate the water.

The Board of Health will take action at once to have this practice stopped and those who do not comply with instructions will be prosecuted.

The following vote of thanks was moved to Chief Russet and the police constables, —"That this Board express to George I. Russel, chief constable, who has acted as sanitary inspector for many years, and to the constables who have been his assistants, its appreciation of the capable manner in which they have enforced the sanitary laws in Peterborough and carried out the directions of the Board of Health. Their efficient supervision has improved the sanitary conditions and the intelligent co-operation has been of great assistance to the Board in its work, and as the growth of the city, and of their police duties has rendered necessary the separation of the work and the appointment of a sanitary inspector, this Board wishes to convey to them and place on record its appreciation of their zeal and faithfulness.—Carried unanimously.

The quality of milk being furnished to the citizens of Peterborough is a little better than the average Judging from the reports from the Provincial Analyst in Toronto. Seven samples have been reported on and they are all above standard except one and it is very good.

Medical Health Officer Dr. Bingham, read a report on seven samples of milk, which have been sent to Toronto. These samples were all found pretty good, with no pollution in any of them. The butter fat averaged from 3.25 to 6 per cent.

Meeting adjourned till next Monday morning.

Mr. Herb. Kendry Gets $1000 Damages

Suit Over Non Completion of Chicken Farm Purchase.

At yesterday afternoon's session of the spring assizes, before Mr. Justice Riddel, with Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon for complaintant, and Mr. A. P. Pousette for defendant, the long talked of case of Kendry vs. Richmond was decided.

The first witness, Mr. Herb. Kendry, said he was a tenant of certain lots in North Monaghan. Had been there for two years under a five years' lease. When he sold to Mr. Richmond the photographer, he had over 600 chickens. An agreement of sale was signed by himself and defendant for $2000. He got $10 on account. $490 was to have been paid some months later. On August 27th, after Richmond had taken possession, he got a letter from him saying defendant was sorry he could not complete the purchase. Defendant asked and was given an extension of time, several times. He did not get the money. On October 4th he got a letter from defendant saying he could not raise the money. The letter asked witness to take possession of the farm. Before getting this letter he drove to the farm and saw Richmond's boy there. He went to Richmond's gallery and asked his permission to sell at $1000. Mrs. Richmond who was there said she did not direct what he, plaintiff, did, so long as they got back the $50 they had put in the place. He knew that Mr. Richmond had been trying to sell the place, to raise the money. His reason for selling was that he had to get out to take a good position at Auburn Hall. He afterwards sold the place to Mr. Booth for $1000. Before selling to Richmond he had tried to get an extension of lease from Miss Crawford, owner of the property. This was granted. He told Richmond when making the sale that he was paying $150 per annum and that should the renewal be granted he, Kendry would himself pay till over $25 possible raise in rental.

To Mr. Pousette, an inventory had been made previous to Richmond taking possession. This was produced. He recommended to Mr. Richmond that a poultry expert who had been with him, would remain with the latter should he buy. Before getting Richmond's last letter, he closed a deal with Mr. Booth for $1000.

Mr. James Booth said the place was in bad condition when he got it.

Mr. G. M. Roger, next Witness, was solicitor for owners of the land, the Miss Crawfords. They made no objection about transferring the lease provided Mr. Kendry stood good for the rental.

His lordship awarded Mr. Kendry the $1000 claimed for non completion of Mr Richmond's agreements with costs.

St. Paul's Church In Special Session

Last night a special meeting of the congregation of St. Paul's church was held in the Sunday school of that storied edifice.

Representatives of the three local papers were present to report proceedings but shortly before the opening of the meeting a prominent member of the congregation came to the newspaper men and politely but firmly intimated that the church officials had just held a preliminary session and their unanimous decision was that the press representatives be requested not to report anything regarding the proceedings of the meeting. It was plainly to be inferred that the business to be transacted was of a comparatively private nature, and affected only the immediate members of that particular congregation. In the face of such request, our readers will sympathize with us in our unavoidable neglect to present a report of the meeting.

New Victoria Harbor C. P. R. Line to Start

The Orillia Packet says in reference to the contract being let for the new grain line between Victoria Harbor and Peterborough:—

"Enquiry at the office of the Toronto Construction Company elicits the information that the officials expect work to begin on or about the 15th of April. They have not yet been informed where the work will begin, but expect the whole line to be pushed through vigorously though they scarcely think it possible it can be built in a year.

Mr. Robert Evans of Otonabee Is Gone

Yesterday morning, after a short illness, Mr. Robert Evans passed away at his old home in Otonabee. For the past third a century the people of Otonabee have known and respected Robt. Evans.

The deceased was born in Clinton, Ont., in 1835, but moved to Otonabee with his parents when quite young. The old homestead is still occupied by the family.

Besides his widow the deceased is survived by five boys and one daughter. The boys are Herbert, who resides on the adjoining farm, Frank, of Winnipeg, Andrew, Harry and Willie at home, and Miss Mary at home. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock when Rev. Mr. Steadman, of Indian River Baptist church, will conduct a service at the residence on the 3rd con. Interment will take place at Fife's cemetery.

Huge Muskrat Killed In Brown's Feed Store

Yesterday morning shortly after the first arrival at Mr. C. N. Brown's flour and feed store, Sunset Street, got the establishment opened up, he missed his dog. Hearing a noise down the cellar he at once went down and here was a smart contest going on between the canine and a huge muskrat. The muskrat came out second best and was quickly killed. The dog hauled it out from under a raised bin, and this supposedly wild animal proved to be the largest seen here, dead or alive for many years. The flat tail measured about an inch across.

It is supposed that the rat came from the river and watching its opportunity climbed in through an open basement window. The skin is a remarkably fine one.

Spring Assizes Opened Yesterday

The Morality of This County Demonstrated to be of High Standard.

Yesterday morning the Spring Assizes opened, and were closed by five p.m., in a manner that clearly demonstrated the high moral and financial status of the city, as neither the services of grand or petit jury were required. This is an almost unique status for a city the population and size of Peterborough. The grand jury under instructions from Mr. Justice Riddell, inspected the jail and other institutions coming under the supervision and about 4.50 p.m. presented a most satisfactory report at the opening of the court there were a few jurors in bean and his lordship instructed the Crown council to investigate their cases and if they had not a reasonable excuse to bring them before the bench. In this connection it was equal to a man's privilege to vote. A juror was a servant of the King and would be paid by the King. He, therefore, must have a good excuse for being absent from court when called.

Mr. Justice Riddell, trial judge at the assizes, entered the court room sharp at one o'clock. As this was his first appearance since his advancement to the bench, in Peterborough, crown counsel addressed his lordship on behalf of the Peterborough bar. His lordship made a brief reply and he then opened the court.

The following members of the local bar were present, viz; Messrs. A. P. Pousette, K.C., D. O'Connell, G. N. Gordon, G. M. Rogers, E. A. Dixon, G. Edmison, E. L. Goldwell, J. Tilson, F. D. Kerr, J. W. Bennett and R. E. Wood.

As noted in former issues of The Times the case of Waters vs. Allan for alienation of affection of the complainant's wife's affection, was settled out of court and consequently not tried.

Mr. A. P. Pousette, K.C., read a complementary address to Mr. Riddell, to which the eminent jurist replied in fitting terms.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The cause of Raugh vs. Spry, for damages arising over the defendant's alleged placing of a high fence so as to shut out the light from complaintant's residence was completed with Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon for plaintiff, and Edmison & Dixon for defence.

After some evidence had been heard, his lordship, not as a final decision, but more as a mere remark said he was inclined to think that a substantial prevention of light and air had been caused by Mr. Spry's 6-foot wire in front of and close to complainant's windows, enough to interfere with the requirements of the ordinary human being. Defendant had no right to put up a fence so as to interfere with his neighbor's light or air. He could have put up a fence to prevent snow etc., piling up to his land. He thought that an injunction should be issued to compel defendant remove his fence and for possible damages for the amount actually done.

Mr. O'Connell then contended that the fence should be taken away, to prevent accumulation of snow and ice and referred to somewhat similar cases as precedents. He claimed that the erection of this fence prevented snow and ice melting and getting away and the complaint was persecuting to spite client's walls. He in reply to a question by his lordship, said he did not care so much for damages.

Mr. Edmison for the defendant contended that the deed or grant of land to the defendant simply stipulated so many feet in land, and that his client was within his right.

His lordship asked for all papers in connection with the case to take to Toronto, saying he would render judgment at the earliest date possible.

Simple Way to Kill Catarrhal Germs in Nose, Throat and Lungs.

The only natural and common sense method known for the cure of catarrhal troubles is Hy-o-mei. It is breathed through an ingenious pocket inhaler, so that its medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells of the nose, throat and lungs, killing all catarrhal germs, soothing the irritated mucous membranes, and restoring a healthy condition.

If you suffer from catarrhal troubles, such as offensive breath, raising of mucous, frequent sneezing, husky voice, discharge from the nose, droppings in the throat, loss of strength, spasmodic coughing, or a feeling of tightness across the upper part of the chest, you should begin to use Hy-o-mei at once. It will destroy all disease germs in the nose, throat and lungs, and provide the blood with additional ozone.

We do not want anyone's money unless Hyomei gives relief and cure, and we absolutely agree that money will be refunded unless the remedy gives satisfaction.

All druggists should be able to supply you with Hyomei or we will send it by mail on receipt of price, $1.00, and every package is sold with the distinct understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures. Booth's Hyomei Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

A SPLENDID INVESTMENT

Times' Readers Looking for Safe profitable Investment Will do Well to Give This Prompt Attention.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of the Sandstorm Annex Gold Mining Co., represented by Thos. Patterson & Co., of Peterborough, as fiscal agents. This company owns 6 acres of the most valuable ground in the district of Nevada: the greatest gold camp ever discovered in the history of the world; a camp that is producing $130,000 every 24 hours; the camp where millionaires are made in a day. The properties of this company were among the first locations made in the camp, and within 1,000 feet of the great Sandstorm mine, the first mine in the camp and one that has produced the richest ore ever discovered in the camp—ore that was so rich that it was hauled by the wagon load and stored in bank vaults until a car was ready for shipment. This property not only lies near the Sandstorm mine, but it lies directly between this mine and the greatest mine in the world: the Mohawk mine, and only about 1,000 yards away. The same rich syndicate that paid $20,000,000 for the Mohawk also owns the Sandstorm mine, both on the same rich mineral dyke. With the property of the Sandstorm Annex Gold Mining Co. lying between and on the same rich dyke, surrounded with rich mines, the Mohawk stock has advanced from 14 cents a share to $18 a share within a year, and hundreds of stocks have advanced from 100 per cent. to 6,000 per cent. This company is under the management of practical mining men who reside in Goldfield and are constantly on the ground and know how to develop a mine. The company is negotiating for a valuable tract lying between them and the Sandstorm mine. When this is bought it will add greatly to the value of the stock, as every foot of the ground owned by the company has as great a prospective value as any of the ground of the Monawk, from two acres of which $7,000,000 has been taken in the past ten months. This stock is slated for an early advance. It will soon reach $1 a share. Leave your order today with Thos. Patterson & Co., Peterborough, Ont.

Gathered From the Local Police Station.

At yesterday's police court Chas. Gunther was charged by a man named Page with owing the latter the sum of $17.90 as wages. Page in the box, produced a statement that Gunther had hired him to work at 25 cents an hour or 30 cents when working overtime. He asked for his money, and defendant told him he would not give him his money until pay day, so he then demanded the balance of his money, $16.

Mr. Gunther in the box, said he came here to fill a contract at the Dominion Bank. He brought men here from the United States to work at 20 cents per hour. The first week complainant earned $10.60, and he gave him $5 on account. Complainant did not demand 25 cents per hour. When Page claimed 64 hours pay as due, his, defendant's book only showed 53. The magistrate, however in comparing the two men's accounts found that the complainant's claim was correct. The defendant claimed to have hired complainant without stating any particular wage. He afterwards told him and others, when they had worked for some time that he only paid 20 cents an hour or 25 cents for overtime.

The complainant assured the magistrate he had gotten 25 cents per hour in the same building from the general contractor before working for Gunther.

His worship thought Gunther in hiring men, who had had 25 cents an hour previously, and did not let them know he was cutting wages until they had worked until pay day was not acting squarely and gave complainant the full amount of his claim and damages amounting to $20.10 to be paid in eight days.

Mr. Soden at Dr. Drummond's Funeral.

Mr. R. J. Soden was in Montreal yesterday, attending the funeral of his cousin, the late Dr. Drummond, whose funeral took place in that city yesterday afternoon. Mr. Soden is a first cousin of the late Dr. Drummond. Mr. Soden's father and Dr. Drummond's mother were brother and sister. Mr. Soden was naturally shocked at hear of his cousin's death. Between Mr. Soden and cousin there was a warm friendship.

STATE FUNERAL FOR LATE MR. ST. JOHN

Public Can View the Body on Wednesday Morning in the Legislature Chamber---A Beautiful Casket.

Toronto, April 8.—From 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning till the hour of the funeral the remains of the late Speaker, Hon. J. W. St. John, will lie in state in the Speaker's room at the Parliament Buildings. The public will be admitted at the entrance to the Legislative Chamber, pass round the bier, and go out through the private door of the apartment.

The Speaker's chair and dais will be draped in black, and all the furnishings of the Speaker's apartments will be covered with somber materials. The public service, conducted by the Rev. W. H. Hincks, will be held in the Legislative Chamber at the Buildings at 2 o'clock.

A BEAUTIFUL CASKET.

The public funeral, which will be under the auspices of the Government and at the public expense will be a most elaborate ceremonial. The casket, which is solid mahogany, oxidized silver steel-braced handles, is said to be the finest ever produced in Canada. It has been constructed specially for lying in state, the lid turning back and one side letting down. The plate, which is of sterling silver, has upon it the following simple inscription;

Hon. J. W. St. John,
Born July 17th, 1854,
Died April 7th, 1907.

The casket is lined throughout with cream liberty satin, and itself weighs over 300 pounds. The outside casket in which the coffin will be placed in the grave is itself made of polished oak, with copper handles and name plate with a similar inscription upon the lid.

FOUR BLACK HORSES.

The hearse will be drawn by four magnificent black horses, heavily draped each led by an attendant. In all respects the cortege will be equal to that of the late Hon. Sir Oliver Mowat.

The body was brought from the hospital at six o'clock this morning to the family residence, 194 Dunn avenue. It will be removed tomorrow evening to the Parkdale Methodist church, where it will lie in state during the service, and to enable his many sorrowing friends to view the remains.

SERVICE IN THE CHURCH.

There will be a service on Tuesday night in Parkdale Methodist church, over the Sunday school of which Mr. St. John presided as superintendent for fourteen years. This service will be especially for Sunday school children, and for adult members of the congregation. There will be a number of addresses, the speakers including Pastor W. H. Hincks, Dr. Gilmour, warden of Central Prison, representing the Trustee Board; Mr. George Blackwell, representing the Quarterly Board; Mr. Ivor E. Brock, superintendent of the Sunday school; Mr. William Mountain, associate superintendent, and the visiting clergymen. Afterwards the pupils of the school will look their last upon the loved dead.

The private pall-bearers will be chosen this afternoon. The pall-bearers from the Parliament Buildings will also be chosen today, at a Cabinet meeting, which will be held to perfect arrangements for the funeral.

AT PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS.

Late tomorrow evening it will be taken to the Parliament Buildings. It will be placed immediately in front of the fireplace in the reception room of the Speaker's apartments, and above the mantel and on the wall the floral tributes will be arranged.

THE CANADA LIFE

This great company has now reached the year of its Diamond Jubilee, and gives no sign of abatement in its vigor and growth—on the contrary, its sixtieth year was in several respects the most successful in its whole history. Both the interest income and the growth in assets exceeded the similar items of any previous year.

The business in force now totals $111,572,000., an increase of $4,590,000. over that a year ago. This, in view of the "unrest and anxiety" to which the Directors' Report refers, must be considered as an eminently satisfactory record—especially when it is remembered that a lower lapse ratio indicated the continued confidence of policyholders in the management. This doubtless was partly due to the splendid showing made by the company before the Royal Commission, when its affairs were explained by Senator Cox.

The payments to policyholders, $1,854,229., of which $1,287,000. was for death claims, represents the great work the life companies are doing in relieving distress.

Dr. Drummond Buried

Montreal, April 9.—Montreal seemed in mourning yesterday, in memory of the late Dr. W. H. Drummond. Everyone who knew the doctor loved him, and keenly regretted his sudden taking off. On the arrival of the train from Cobalt in the morning the remains were placed in St. George's church, immediately opposite the C. P. R. Windsor station. And during the morning, notwithstanding the heavy snowstorm that was raging, hundreds upon hundreds of the leading citizens of Montreal passed through the church to pay their last tribute.

The large church was crowded at half-past two, when the plaintive beauty of Chopin's Funeral March swept in lingering cadence over the mourners' heads. In addition to members of the family, many friends had come great distances to attend the funeral.

The Rainy River Settlers Uneasy

Toronto, October 8.—The settlers in the Rainy River District are uneasy, and have a hard struggle for existence, and a great clamor for a new province has sprung up there, and also east of Winnipeg, said Ald. T. L. Church, especially at Fort Frances and Emo. The late government let a lot of abuses grow up and let the district be exploited by grafts to favorites, and the settler has been nowhere.

Mr. Church has been acting for several legal men in the district, and for Winnipeg men with interests there, the past two years, and says the matter of separation is not confined to one party but both in the district.

The settlers have confidence in the Whitney government and its integrity, and he says the present government have had a very hard job, being handicapped by what the late government did in dealing with the question.

A prominent legal gentleman from the district, with Mr. Church, on behalf of the settlers interviewed Hon. Mr. Cochrane last fall, and also before he left for England, on the matter.

It is said the government was considering the appointment of a commission to investigate abuses, with a view of suggesting reforms. The lot of the settler is a hard one in the district, and something should be done.

STARCH INDIGESTION

A Very Common Form of Dyspepsia Vanquished By Eating

Grape-Nuts

"There's a Reason."

The starchy foods so much used nowadays—white bread, pastry, potatoes, hot biscuit, etc., often cause "starch indigestion" and a long line of troubles because the digestive organs are unable to handle the excess of this kind of food-material.

It remains in the stomach, partially ferments, causing gas and sour eructations, besides preventing the body from absorbing the full amount of food necessary. Such persons often feel hungry a short time after eating.

In making Grape-Nuts a food expert combined with the wheat and barley in the same way the human organs act food—with heat, moisture and time—the diastase in the barley, during the process of manufacture, changing the starch into a form of double sugar, thus making it easy of digestion.

In this way he devised a means of assisting weak digestive organs to handle natural food with ease and not only build up brain and nerves, but strengthen the digestive organs at the same time.

If you have any kind of indigestion or nervous dyspepsia, you'll find a marked change in your condition by a ten day's use of

Blizzard in the West Is Hard on Farmers

Cannot Get Seeders to the Qu'Appelle Valley.

Regina, Sask., April 8.—Saskatchewan is in the grip of what indeventedly hoped will prove the last blizzard of the longest winter. Traffic is again at a standstill, which is all the more exasperating because the movement of machinery for the spring trade has hardly yet developed.

On the south line especially, farmers are clamoring for seeders and harrows. Most of this northern implement business is handled from Regina, where all the big firms have warehouses, and unless a spell of fine weather comes before the spring floods, there is every prospect that northern traffic will be interrupted in the Qu'Appelle Valley until after seeding operations.

Notwithstanding, however, these discouraging circumstances, feeling is very buoyant, the advance of immigration tending to generally relieve the financial condition.

Consternation in the Court at Fez

Paris, April 7.—The official despatches received from Fez say that the French claims were presented to the Sultan, March 3rd. The news of this occupation of Oudja by French troops arrived at the Moorish capital March 29, the day the column entered Moorish territory. The impression prevails that the Sultan will concede all the French demands. The energetic action of France caused consternation among the court entourage at Fez, and it is expected to result in a prompt reply, but no official notification of its nature has

THREE MEN HOLD UP A TRAIN

New York, April 8.—Three daring train robbers held up an eastbound West Shore freight train a short distance east of Clarence, N.Y., a few minutes after 10 o'clock last night, and while two of them held the conductor and engineer at the points of revolvers the third man broke open a car and threw out a number of packages of merchandise. The engineer was then ordered to proceed, so far anybody no trace of the robbers has been discovered.

The police say it was one of the most daring robberies of its kind that has been attempted in this part of the country in years. The thieves, after robbing one of the cars, searched the pockets of the conductor and two trainmen, (securing a small amount of money.

All of the men on the train who encountered the robbers were able to give good descriptions of the men who escaped into the bush.

A SCIENTIFIC HERMIT

Paris, April 8.—A strange hermit has been arrested in a cave called "The Devil's Grotto," near Beauvoir en Royans.

The cave was not known to be inhabited, and the residents of the neighborhood held it in superstitious awe. Lately they were terrified by reports of mysterious lights having been seen in the cave after nightfall, and police assistance was sought.

A magistrate and several policemen visited the cave, and on penetrating to the interior found a man with long matted hair and beard, who said his name was Andre Faure.

The cave contained an electric generator and was brilliantly illuminated. Faure was fitting up shelves to accommodate some thousands of volumes which were stacked in the cave.

A Drawer For Scraps.

Every woman knows the value of a scrap bag to hold bits of silks, ribbons, lace and other "leftovers" from dressmaking, which may be useful for patching or for some other purpose. But where a bag is used the coveted piece is sure to be down at the bottom, so that it is necessary to dump out the entire contents of the bag every time something is wanted out of it. Therefore it is better to devote a spare drawer in a bureau to scraps. Here the various rolls of laces and ribbons, each wrapped and pinned into tight bundles, may be spread out so that each one may be easily recognized. A box for buttons, old fringes and the like may be included among the contents of the drawer, which proves a boon to all who have tried it.

Monograms on Linen.

"The custom of marking linen with indelible ink, practised half many years ago by fashionables, has completely passed. Down to glass and pantry towels, household linen must now have an embroidered monogram," said a linen expert. "Tablecloths at present are marked with two monograms, one at either end of the cloth or diagonally at opposite corners. Sheets and pillowcases have a large embroidered monogram placed back of the hemstitching, drawn work, embroidery or lace insertion which decorates the edge."

To Make a Pretty Collar Case.

A pretty collar case is made by taking four pieces of cardboard a little longer and wider than the collars. Cover two pieces with figured silk and two with plain. Put a piece of perfumed wadding between each plain and figured piece and overseam. Take the two pieces after they are overseamed together and tie at the back with narrow ribbon and at each end. These cases are nice to keep the collars smooth and in order.

Care of the Bathroom.

The care of the bathroom is simplified wonderfully if each person leaves it as clean as it was found. In one house where there is a single maid to do all the work the bathroom study holds a small bottle of kerosene oil and a soft linen cloth, and the pleasant rub leaves the tub immaculate, the smell of the oil being quite gone after opening the window for a moment.

Colored Embroideries.

Tepid water with a good soap and a pinch of salt in it is a good way to clean colored embroideries. Care ought be taken not to rub the soapy into the embroidery, and when it has been gently pressed rinse it out in a bath of clean tepid water. It must be wrung out carefully and then placed right side down between two clean cloths and ironed while still wet.

White China Silk Blouses.

Never wash white china silk blouses in hot water. It will turn them yellow after they have been laundered a few times. A lather should be made from white laundry soap, and in this rub the waist lightly. Then rinse in warm water to which a little ammonia has been added. A last rinsing in bluing water will help to keep the silk white.

For the Kitchen.

Very useful in the kitchen is a table or wide shelf covered with zinc where hot cooking utensils may be placed when taken from the fire. It will be a great saving to your enameled sink. Zinc is easily kept clean by daily washing with soap and hot water.

Smelling Salts.

Do not throw away your smelling salts when the liquid has evaporated, leaving them dry, and you think you have had them so long a time that they are no longer of any use. Renew them. That is, pour over them some perfumed ammonia—violet, lavender or whatever the salts may have been originally.

Plush goods and all articles dyed with aniline dyes which have faded from exposure to the light will look as bright as new after sponging with chloroform.

It is important to call in medical help if the child appears stunned for a few minutes after a fall.

KING EDWARD HUSTLES.

Monarch Answers His Letters Promptly and is Early At Work.

Considerable snap is now imparted to royal functions. Before the King's accession levees began at 2 o'clock. Old friends lunched together at their clubs, toddled over to Buckingham Palace and spent half the afternoon chatting round huge fires that burnt in every room. Things are now speeded up. Levees begin at 12 and are over in three-quarters of an hour. Those who in old times used to remain chatting with the then Prince of Wales are a little huffed in consequence.

Distinguished folk are hustled a good deal at the court, too. Those who are wise reach Buckingham Palace about 9 o'clock p. m. Proceeding to the first room they are then the earliest to pass before their Majesties, after the diplomatic corps has been received. Early arrivals at once take up a position on the raised dais, commanding a fine view of the show.

Great Display of Gowns.

It's a sight to behold some of the women wrestling with their court trains, which require considerable practice to handle gracefully. Talking of trains reminds me that here, too, things are on the upgrade. Women no longer borrow the well-worn train of their sister, aunt or of a retired duchess or go in for patchwork get-up.

The one object at present is to exhibit a gown both beautiful and original. Lace, tulle, gauze, tissue and other filmy materials are used, and the effect when seen in contrast with the men's brilliant uniforms beats fairyland.

By the bye, "hock cup" is just now in great demand at court suppers. It was once a specialty in the days of Queen Victoria. The recently revived taste for light wines is largely due to the royal lead, hock being a favorite with the King.

King Edward has broken right adrift from his mother's prejudice. Elevators have recently been installed in Buckingham Palace. The writing-room where His Majesty attends to business affairs is fitted up like a city magnate's private office. He has not yet taken to a roll-top desk, but an American letter filing system is now in constant use. A battery of new typewriters have been installed in the private secretary's office.

Business Methods Used.

The King manages his vast correspondence on strictly "business" lines. Every letter has its number and proper index reference. It is not generally known that the King prides himself on the fact that he leaves no letter unanswered overnight. Dictating to various secretaries, His Majesty really dispatches a big "bunch" of correspondence each morning before most society leaders have had their second breakfast.

The personal suites of rooms in Buckingham Palace have just been gorgeously re-decorated. Queen Alexandra's bedroom is paneled in pale rose silk, with hangings of white satin. Her bathroom is quite new, an annex being specially built for it. It is fitted with a bath of Grecian marble from special quarries.

Queen's Life in Letters.

That important chapter of history covered by "Letters of Queen Victoria" is at last to become accessible to the public, for three volumes will be issued in the autumn.

The forecast indicates that the work, which is appearing "by authority of His Majesty the King," will be one of exceptional interest. The first volume covers the correspondence of the Queen until she was nearly 25 years old. Here she will be seen as a girl princess, then as a young queen under the guidance of a courtly, chivalrous premier. Next the reader finds her called upon to select a husband after her own heart. All through there is held up a mirror of public events as they appeared from the throne.

The second volume covers a long period, dealing with the repeal of the corn laws and foreign revolutions, of which the most sensational incident will perhaps be found in the story of the flight of Louis Philippe to New Haven.

The correspondence in the third volume bears on the eastern question, the Crimean war, the Indian mutiny, the China war, the Franco-Austrian war, and the struggle for a united Italy. This volume closes with the prince consort's life, so the subject just covers a quarter of a century—that is to say, from 1837 to 1861. Queen Victoria was a woman of strong individuality and of decided preference and even prejudices. The object throughout the book has been to show the personality of the Queen, her method of approaching and dealing questions, her outlook, her sympathies, her shrewdness, her perseverance, and her diligence.

Standardized Sausage.

The Lancet (London) which ever loves to cast a keen eye on some homely detail of everyday life, such as poison in postage stamps or the nutritive value of Christmas puddings, this week devotes its editorial columns to the sausage. To advertise on the whole nowadays sausages are made with wholesome ingredients, though it says, "it is a common subject of jest, since it is so often regarded as a convenient vehicle for materials which, when undisguised, certainly do not appeal to us as being suitable, or even wholesome for purposes of food."

In spite of this improvement the Lancet is not satisfied and demands "a standardized sausage," so as to prevent it from being loaded with a cheap substitute, which is nearly always bread or broken waste biscuits. This, The Lancet says, is a palpable fraud, as the sausage is looked upon as a meaty and not a farinaceous food. Moreover, the price is approximately that of meat. The Lancet, therefore, demands a legal, authoritative definition of a sausage.

Many Changes Proposed for Rifle

Ottawa, April 6.—A return laid on the table of the House on Wednesday gives some later information regarding the government's dealings with the Ross Rifle Company of Quebec. It shows that following the complaints made in respect to the rifle a military board was appointed to recommend improvements for the rifle. On March 19, the board recommended no less than 29 changes which it was considerable desirable to have made. The military council concurred in the report of the board. Many of the changes which the board considered desirable are of a minor character, but they are all calculated to make the arm stronger. Of the 29 changes recommended, 11 were agreed to by the Ross Rifle Company; 11 others the company agreed to try experimentally, at their own cost, while 2 of the suggested changes the company maintains if made should be at the expense of the Government.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5300 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assasays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN

Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by HARPER & BROTHERS

To save his companion's reason Meredith more than once drugged his food, but when the land began to rise beneath their feet in slight billowlike inequalities—the deposit of the glacial age—Durnovo refused to stop for the preparation of food. Eating dry biscuits and stringy tinned meat as they went along, the four men—three blacks and one white—followed in the footsteps of their mad pilot.

"We're getting to the mountains, we're getting to the mountains! We shall be there tonight! Think of that, Meredith—tonight!" he kept repeating with a sickening monotony. And all the while he stumbled on. The perspiration ran down his face in one continuous stream; at times he paused to wipe it from his eyes with the back of his hands, and, as these were torn and bleeding, there were smears of blood across his cheeks.

The night fell. The moon rose, red and glorious, and the beasts of this untrodden forest paused in their search for food to watch with wondering, fearless eyes that strange, unknown animal—man.

It was Durnovo who, climbing wildly, first saw the break in the trees ahead. He gave a muffled cry of delight, and in a few minutes they were all rushing, like men possessed, up a bare slope of broken shale.

Durnovo reached the summit first. A faint pleasant odor was wafted into their faces. They stood on the edge of a vast tableland melting away in the yellow moonlight. Studded all over, like sheep in a meadow, were a number of little bushes and no other vegetation.

Victor Durnovo stooped over one of these. He buried his face among the leaves of it, and suddenly he toppled over.

"Yes," he cried as he fell; "it's simiacine!"

And he turned over, with a groan of satisfaction, and lay like a dead man.

CHAPTER XIV.

ONE morning three months later Guy Oscard drew up in line his flying column. He was going back to England with the first consignment of simiacine. During the twelve weeks that lay behind there had been constant reference made to his little body of picked men, and the leader had selected with a grave deliberation that promised well.

The lost soldier that was in him was all astir in his veins as he reviewed his command in the cool air of early morning. The journey from Msala to the plateau had occupied a busy two months. Oscard expected to reach Msala with his men in forty days. Piled up in neat square cases, such as could be carried in pairs by a man of ordinary strength, was the crop of simiacine, roughly valued by Victor Durnovo at £40,000. Ten men could carry the whole of it, and the twenty cases set close together on the ground made a bed for Guy Oscard. Upon this improvised couch he gravely stretched his bulk every night all through the journey that followed.

It was on the open ground in front of the tents that Guy Oscard drew up his quick marching column before the sun had sprung up in its fantastic tropical way from the distant line of virgin forest. As he walked along the line, making a suggestion here, pulling on a shoulder rope there, he looked stanch and strong as any man might wish to be. His face was burned so brown that eyebrows and mustache stood out almost blond, though in reality they were only brown. His eyes did not seem to be suffering from the heaviness noticeable in others; altogether, the climate and the mystic breath of the simiacine did not appear to affect him as they did his companions. This was probably accounted for by the fact that, being chief of the hunters, most of his days had been passed on the lower slopes in search of game.

Oscard gave the signal for the men to start, and the long caravan defiled. The porters nodded to Meredith with a great display of white teeth, while the head men, the captains of tens, stepped out of the ranks and shook hands.

Before they had disappeared over the edge of the plateau Joseph came forward to say goodby to Oscard.

Before they had disappeared over the edge of the plateau Joseph came forward to say goodby to Oscard.

"And it is understood," said the latter, "that I pay in to your account at Lloyd's bank your share of the proceeds."

Joseph grinned. "Yes, sir; if you please; presumin' it's a safe bank."

Meredith walked a little way down the slope with Oscard.

"Goodby, old chap!" he said, when the parting came. "Good luck, and all that. Hope you will find all right at home. By the way," he shouted after him, "give my kind regards to the Gordons at Loango."

And so the first consignment of simiacine was sent from the plateau to the coast.

Guy Oscard was one of those deceptive men who only do a few things and do those few very well. In forty-three days he deposited the twenty precious cases in Gordon's godowns at Loango and paid off the porters, of whom he had not lost one. These duties performed, he turned his steps toward the bungalow. He had refused Gordon's invitation to stay with him until the next day, when the coasting steamer was expected. To tell the truth, he was not very much prepossessed in Maurice's favor, and it was with a doubtful mind that he turned his steps toward the little house in the forest between Loango and the sea.

"And when did you leave them?" asked Jocelyn, after her visitor had explained who he was.

"Just three forty-four days ago," he replied.

"And were they well?"

"Oh, yes," he replied. "You know Meredith?"

"Yes," she said. "We know Mr. Meredith."

The visitor did not speak at once, and she looked up at him over the flowers, with grave politeness.

"Meredith," he said, "is one of the most remarkable men I have ever met."

"Really," she replied, with a kindly interest. "How?"

"He is not the man I took him for. He is so wonderfully polite and gentle and pleasant."

"Are you going back to—them?"

"No, I leave tomorrow morning early by the Portuguese boat. I am going home to be married."

"Indeed! Then I suppose you will wash your hands of Africa forever?"

"Not quite," he replied. "I told Meredith that I would be prepared to go up to him in case of emergency, but not otherwise. I shall, of course, still be interested in the scheme. I take home the first consignment of simiacine; we have been very successful, you know. I shall have to stay in London to sell that. I have a house there."

"Are you to be married at once?" inquired Jocelyn, with that frank interest which makes it so much easier for a man to talk of his own affairs to a woman than to one of his own sex.

"As soon as I can arrange it," he answered, with a little laugh. "There is nothing to wait for. We are both orphans, and fortunately we are fairly well off."

He was fumbling in his breast pocket and presently he rose, crossed the room and handed her, quite without afterthought or self consciousness, a photograph in a morocco case.

Explanation was unnecessary, and Jocelyn Gordon looked smilingly upon a smiling, bright young face.

"She is very pretty," she said honestly.

Whereupon Guy Oscard grunted unintelligibly.

"Millicent," he said, after a little pause—"Millicent is her name."

"Millicent?" repeated Jocelyn. "Millicent what?"

"Millicent Chyne."

Jocelyn folded the morocco case together and handed it back to him.

"She is very pretty," she repeated slowly, as if her mind could only reproduce—it was incapable of creation.

OLD TIME PUNISHMENTS.

Cold Water Baths Helped to Cure Swearing and Scolding.

To punish a child in such a way that it will see the direct connection between the correction and the fault is one of the precepts of modern education. The judge of the eighteenth century was not worried by such psychological theories, but his decisions often had the grim humor of fitness.

What could be better for the scold than a cooling plunge or for the wife beater than a few lashes on his own back?

A number of tender handed English gallants joined a pioneer expedition to Virginia. The weather was cold and the work hard. When these soft muscled young men were set at chopping trees their hands were sorely blistered by the ax helves. With the cries of pain many oaths were heard.

The president of the company soon put a stop to this swearing by ordering a can of cold water to be poured down the sleeve of the guilty one at every oath he uttered.

In colonial days hog stealing was considered one of the most serious of crimes. At the first offense the thief's ears were slit, at the second his ears were nailed to a pillory, and at the third he suffered death "without benefit of clergy."

Deceitful bakers and careless fish dealers had to "lose their ears," while he who spoke detracting words had his tongue bored by a bodkin.

A Frenchman, traveling in America in 1700, describes the ducking stool as a "pleasant mode" of punishing a scolding woman.

In 1635 Thomas Hartley of Virginia wrote of his witnessing the execution of a ducking stool sentence:

"Day before yesterday at 2 of ye Clocz, I saw this punishment given to one Betsey Walker, who by ye violence of her tongue made her house and her neighborhood uncomfortable. They had a machine for ye purpose, yt belongs to ye Parish. It has already been used three times this summer.

"Ye Woman was allowed to go under ye water for ye space of ¼ minute. Betsey had a stout stomache and would not yield until she had been under five times. Then she cried piteously. Then they drew back ye Machine, untied ye Ropes and let her walk home a hopefully penitent woman."

BUSINESS PROVERBS.

Not the big earner, but the wise investor, is the future capitalist.

The wise man knows that wealth is not worth getting save for the purpose of using and so gets after it early.

Investment is putting money into chicken farming; speculation is counting the chickens before they are hatched.

The chap who does his work indifferently because he thinks he is above his job thereby proves his unfitness for the job that is above him.

The man who yields to honest persuasion slowly and imperceptibly, as rock to water, may make a loyal investor when won. But he who is quick to lay hold of a good investment makes the most money.

Multitudes of people sleep soundly nights, believing their savings to be protected in the banks, not dreaming that the banks have invested them in business enterprises that the depositors themselves declined to buy shares in because they thought their earnings were too large to be safe.

Willing to Chance It.

It is reported of the Earl of Mansfield that he once dismissed a servant, but wrote for him a "character," as follows: "The bearer, John ——, has served me for three years in the capacity of coachman. He is an able driver and a very sober man. I discharged him because he cheated me." A day or two later the man returned to thank his old master for the help he had afforded him in getting him a new birth. How had the testimonial helped him? The man explained that his new master had observed that ability to drive and sobriety were the qualities he required in a coachman. As for the cheating, his employer had said, "I'm a Yorkshireman, and I'll be hanged if you cheat me."

is recommended

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 32. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 20 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 20 acres of J. B. 32 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 5 inch nicolite, 18 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1233-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

New Liskeard, 17th November, 1906.

JACOB M. EGGERT, M.E.

We offer a few more shares at Fifty Cents (50c); par value One Dollar ($1.00). The property is being developed as fast as possible, and we cannot promise that stock will be sold at less than par for very long. Don't wait until it is $3.00 to invest, giving others big profits for what you should have bought sooner. We want you to get in on the ground floor and share in the big profits. For a limited time only we will accept subscriptions at 50 cents—the stock is slated for a sharp advance very soon. Send marked cheque or money order.

RECURRING HEADACHES

Do They Bother You ?

You fine life a miserable affair because you have headaches, but you have neither nausea nor are you weak —You know if you could only prevent headaches you would enjoy perfect health.

Such headaches indicate a general lowered condition, because they arise from a general decay of the nervous system.

This depressed condition of the nervous system has its origin in the reduction of the quality and quantity of the blood.

The blood is thin—its red coloring is reduced—it contains no nourishment.

The digestive organs are not supplying it with sufficient nutritive matter.

The result—nerve weakness, nerve debility, ill-health.

If you had used Ferrozone you would know how powerfully all the digestive and assimilative functions of the body are stmulated.

Ferrozone does more—it supplies all the elements that are essential to the rebuilding of the body—supplies the reconstructive forces that contribute to the formation of rich, red blood.

You see, Ferrozone doesn't treat a symptom—it remedies a cause—and that's why a month's treatment will absolutely remove every vestige of recurring nervous headaches.

Nothing like Ferrozone to build you up, to give the reserve of force, that happy health that contributes so much to happiness and contentment.

Ferrozone will make you feel like new, try it—sold by all druggists in 50c. boxes.

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription"

The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder, curing a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchia, stomach (as catarrhal dyspepsia), bowels (as mucous diarrhea), bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or ulcerative stages of these affections it is often successful in affecting cures.

The "Favorite Prescription" is advised for the ailments of one class of diseases—those peculiar weaknesses, derangements and irregularities incident to women only. It is a powerful yet gently acting invigorating tonic and nervine. For weak worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the break-down, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulas of both medicines and quoting what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines.

The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can't afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition, any secret nostrum.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Sold by J. D. Tully.

Business Booming at Chemong

As a slight indication of the great demand that does exist and will increase for Chemong Park property, during the coming summer, it might be noted that Mr. W. Popham, of New York, a leading capitalist of that city, now registered at the Snowdon House, will at once proceed to erect a handsome cottage at that park. Messrs. Belcher & Heathcote, the local architects, are now engaged on the plans. Mrs. (Rev.) Andrews will also erect a substantial cottage in the park this spring. It is also rumored that Mr. Soden the George street bookseller, will build there this summer.

Dr. Morrison Elected President Bd. of Trade

Geo. A. Gillespie, Vice-President--W. H. Bradburn, Treasurer---T. Q. Quartermaine, President.

The Board of Trade met last night, no less than $90,000,000 invested in which there were present, President D. Hughes-Charles, and Messrs. Jas. Drain, Rev. Canon Davidson, J. Coyle Brown, Mayor R. F. McWilliams, Ald. Bradburn, P. Downham, Geo. A. Gillespie, Robert Fair, A. P. Poussette, H. LeBrun, B. E. Ackerman, W. S. Dodds, F. D. Kerr, John Riddell, W. H. Moore, G. B. Van Blaricombe, Dr. Morrison, Dickson Davidson, R. E. Wood.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Mayor R. F. McWilliams at this juncture offered that the Board of Trade has not been for a great many years the live active association in the city it should be. It has always seemed to him that the trouble has laid in the fact that the meetings have been those of individuals rather than representative men speaking for general interests. If the Board of Trade is to be made a live association it must undergo a radical change; it should be composed of men representing many interests — the manufacturing, mercantile, financial and legal, walks of life. These representatives should be selected by their own particular section of the trading community.

Mr. A. P. Poussette commended the mayor for his manifest interest in the Board and accompanying suggestions, in regard that the principle be protected by them be adopted. He eulogized President Hughes-Charles for his indefatigable work in the Board, but deplored that he had not been substantially supported. It could not be denied that the Board had not accomplished the work which might reasonably be looked for from the Board of Trade of so live a city as Peterborough, and the hoped a radical change would now be made on the lines of professoin.

Ald. Bradburn moved, seconded by Mr. Robert Fair, that Dr. Morrison be president for the current year.

Dr. Morrison accepted the nomination, was duly elected, and seconded the date amid the acclaims of the members present.

On motion of Mr. W. H. Moore, seconded by Mr. G. B. VanBlaricombe, Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie was elected vice-president.

On motion of Mr. Robert Fair, seconded by Mr. A. P. Poussette, Ald. W. H. Bradburn was elected treasurer.

On motion of Mr. J. Coyle-Brown, seconded by Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine was re-elected secretary.

The officers are:—
President—Dr. Morrison.
Vice-President—Geo. A. Gillespie.
Treasurer—W. H. Bradburn.
Secretary—T. Q. Quartermaine.

A. P. Poussette moved, seconded by W. S. Dodd,—That the president, Dr. Morrison, and Messrs. D. Hughes-Charles, R. E. Wood, and W. H. Moore be a committee to strike the council and standing committees, with instructions to confer with the members of the Board with a view to conforming to the principles advanced by the mayor.

Messrs. McFarlane Wilson and Dodds were appointed auditors.

A QUESTION OF FINANCE.

Mr. A. P. Poussette drew attention to the fact that at the end of February, 1907, the banks of Canada had the United States, where the gambling propensities of our American cousins returned a big dividend on money created by Canadian deposits. He thought it an outrage that the banks should be permitted to invest such large sums outside Canada, where they enjoy valuable franchises and then refuse safe advances for legitimate Canadian enterprises. Mr. Poussette accordingly gave notice that at the next meeting of the Board he would move the following;

That in the opinion of this Board the bank act should be amended as to provide that no bank shall employ out of Canada any greater proportion of its funds than an amount equal to the proportion of its capital stock and deposits held out of Canada; and that for greater certainty a definite percentage, certainty a definite percentage, having regard to the present status, be named as such proportion.

Mr. D. Hughes-Charles pointed out that the Board should give this question earnest consideration before taking definite action. It must be borne in mind that Canadian banks have to hold a large reserve fund, and hold the same where it is realizable at a moment's notice. This attitude is in the interest of Canadian trade which is not in a position to meet the short calls frequently necessitated by the fluctuations of the money market, and which fluctuations the United States commercial avenues are so peculiarly adapted to respond to without the crippling results that would be experienced by Canadian commerce under similar conditions.

The Board then adjourned.

FIND OUT

The Kind of Food That Will Keep You Well.

The true way is to find out what is best to eat and drink, and then cultivate a taste for those things instead of poisoning ourselves with improper, indigestible food.

A conservative Mass. woman writes:

"I have used Grape-Nuts 5 years for the young and for the aged; in sickness and in health; at first following directions carefully, later in a variety of ways as my taste and judgment suggested.

"But its most special, personal benefit has been a substitute for meat, and served dry with cream when rheumatic troubles made it important for me to give up the 'coffee habit.'

"Served in this way with the addition of a cup of hot water and a little fruit it has been used at my morning meal for six months, during which time my health has much improved, nerves have grown steadier, and a gradual decrease in my excessive weight adds greatly to my comfort." Exception to U. S. Laborers Under Contract

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—Referring to your report of Monday's police court proceedings, wherein an American contractor's agent was made liable for some $30 wages to an employe, whom the evidence showed he seemed to have hired under false pretences or at least without having concluded any definite arrangement as to his pay, I might say I admire the manly way you defended the working man.

Now my object in writing your paper is not so much to call attention to the "cheap skate" policy adopted by this contractor's agent as to ask whether this man, compelled to pay the wages he owed, as to ask whether the workman of Peterborough, is getting the protection of the laws of our country. I believe there is a law regarding "alien labor" in Canada. This American contractor's agent swore in court that he had brought some workmen from the United States to work on a certain building in process of construction in this city. Now Sir, does not the immigration laws of this country, as do such laws in the United States, forbid the importation of laborers of any degree, under contract made in the United States, to compete with Canadian labor.

Yours truly,
CANADIAN.

Goods Shipped by C.G.E. Co. Destroyed by Fire

The Canadian General Electric Co., of this city has received word that he five dynamos recently constructed by them for the Chatham Gas Co., and delivered to consignees, have been destroyed by fire. Their despatch is as follows;

Fire broke out in the auxiliary plant of the Chatham Gas Company last night at 12 o'clock and burned five dynamos, while two engines were damaged but not badly. The fire came from an electric wire, it is thought. The firemen put it out in about an hour. The damage will not interfere with the electric light service.

A COMING TREAT

The "Madam Butterfly" Grand Opera Season at the Princess Theatre, Toronto.

Brilliant in every respect will be the occasion when Mr. Henry W. Savage introduces to musical and social circles of Toronto, Puccini's "Madam Butterfly," the Japanese three-act grand opera which has created such a furore in Europe that it will be heard simultaneously in six continental music centers this season.

The coming of the opera to the Princess Theatre, Toronto, Canada, for four performances, commencing Thursday, April 11th, will be occasions of great musical moment, not only because they are the first productions of the opera here, but the first opportunities to hear the celebrated singers who have provoked such enthusiastic comment in the East.

The production is made by Mr. Henry W. Savage, who has enjoyed ten years of continued success with grand opera repertoire in English. As the climax of his activity in this direction, he has centered his efforts in the formation of a special company for the exclusive presentation of "Madam Butterfly." In its organization he was greatly assisted by Walter Rothwell, the Vienna conductor and pupil of Gustav Mahler, and by the composer, Puccini himself, who personally recommended several of the prima donnas. The organization is composed of nearly one hundred and fifty persons. It includes three sets of principals, a complete chorus and an orchestra of sixty musicians. This latter feature is notable in itself. Different casts on different performances are required for the interpretation of the opera on account of the different character of the music. Seven prima donnas and a half dozen leading male singers will alternate from evening to evening in the principal roles.

One of the prima donnas is of foreign birth, and the other six are native born American singers. The foreign artist is Elsa Szamosy whose success in the title role of Madam Butterfly, when offered at the Royal Opera at Budapest, Hungary, led to Puccini's recommendation that she be engaged by Mr. Savage for his American production of the opera. The five Americans include Miss Florence Easton, a native of Canada and one of the great colorature prima donnas of the opera at Convent Garden, London; Rena Vivienne, also strongly endorsed by Puccini; Estelle Bloomfield, from the Royal Opera at Dresden; Signora Dora de Fillippe, from the operas of Madrid and Paris; Harriett Behnee, from the court theatres of Berlin, and Ethel Dufre Houston, who was singing abroad before joining Mr. Savage's company—all American born but all successful abroad.

Many of our citizens and those of surrounding towns are taking a lively interest in the opera, and several large parties are being organized to visit Toronto especially to hear the beautiful Madam Butterly. Mail orders can be sent in now for seats for any of the performances. The box office sale of reserved seats opened on Friday morning, April 5th, at the Princess Theatre Toronto.

C.P.R. Officials Have Gone

Yesterday morning Mr. James Osborne, general superintendent of the Ontario Division of the C.P.R., from Montreal to Windsor, and Mr. J. R. Nelson, superintendent of this district, who arrived in the city Monday afternoon on their annual tour of inspection of the line, left for the west on the way freight. They made a thorough inspection of the company's property in this city, and expressed themselves as satisfied.

Grand Jury Present Their Regular Report

The Spring Assizes Grand Jury Report on the Public Institutions of the County.

The Spring Assizes grand jury's report on the public institutions of the county, was read to Mr. Justice Riddell.

The grand jury consists of Messrs. Wm. Hales, reeve of Chandos; J. J. Hannah, Smith; T. J. Johnston, Otonabee; J. C. Sullivan, city; Andrew Brayeau, Belmont; M. McFadden, city; T. Q. Quartermaine, city; John Cooper, Lakefield; Jas. Fennie, city; D. C. McIntyre, Otonabee; J. A. Fowler, Smith; Robert Allen, Douro.

The following was their presentment;

Peterborough, April 9, 1907.

To His Lordship
Mr. Justice Riddell,—

The grand jury of the County of Peterborough, beg to make the following presentment;

We beg to extend to you our congratulations upon the occasion of your elevation to the high court bench of this Province.

Your frequent attendances at the assize court of this county in past years, in many important cases, have caused us to feel a more than general interest in your appointment, and we trust that your brilliant career at the bar will be rounded out by many years of distinguished service as a member of the judiciary of the great Province.

We are very pleased that no criminal matters whatever have, on this occasion, to come before the grand jury for consideration, and trust that grand juries of the county in the future may frequently have an opportunity to note the absence from crime which the county enjoys.

We are very pleased to note that a house of refuge, for the care of the old and infirm, has been erected and opened recently by the county of Peterborough. We would recommend that arrangements be made by the city of Peterborough, with the county, for the care, in such institution of the old and infirm of thecity. At present there are confined in the county jail several who should properly be inmates of such an institution.

We have visited the public institutions situated in the city, namely, the county jail, the Nicholls and St. Joseph's hospitals, the House of Providence and the Protestant Home. We would recommend that a new bath and sink be placed in the county jail, but, apart from this, we have found all these institutions clean and well kept, and the sanitary arrangements satisfactory, and in the hospitals and homes above mentioned we found all the inmates apparently comfortable and well satisfied with their surroundings.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. HALES.
Foreman.

Work Has Begun on Collegiate Institute

The First Sod of Peterboro's New Educational Building is Turned.

Yesterday noon the first tangible proof that Peterborough is to have a grand new Collegiate Institute, so long promised by the Board of Education, and paid for by our taxpayers was in evidence when the first sod was turned and Messrs. Langford and Sheehy, started a gang of men at work upon the excavation. It is expected that it will require about a year to complete the building.

This building has been a subject of discussion of the Board for some years, and three times have the people been asked for money to carry out the work. In the first place, the Board asked for $50,000, which was thought sufficient to buy the site and build the school. Ten thousand dollars was expended on the site and the remaining $40,000 was found to be not enough for the building, so the people were asked to vote another $50,000. The by-law was, however, defeated when presented. Finally, after the plans had been cut down and modified as much as possible, they asked for $21,000 to finish the work, and the people approved of the measure.

Chinese Eating Bodies of the Dead

Washington, April 9.—To correct an erroneous report that has found general circulation, with harmful results, the Red Cross has issued the following statement in regard to the Chinese famine;

"The famine in China is unprecedented in severity, and the period of greatest agony is yet to come. Many weeks must pass before there will be relief from new crops, and hundreds of thousands—yes, millions—today are kept alive only through the contributions from America which has furnished over two-thirds of all relief supplies sent to China to succor the starving millions. The large amount of money and shipments of supplies already made have only partly relieved the situation, and, while hundreds of thousands of lives have been saved, hundreds of thousands of persons must yet die unless large additional sums of money and large shipments of food are immediately provided.

"The following cablegram received by the editor of the Christian Herald from the editor of the North China News, terrible as it may seem, speaks only the truth;

"Shanghai, China, April 6, 1907.

"Klopsch, New York: Approaching period of severest pinch. Authenticated instances of corpses exhumed; cannibalism. Foreign relief working effectively, maintaining whole districts until harvest."

To Tax Italians 10 Dollars to Work for Corporation

Ald. Morgan is out with his hatchet and wampum bet after Italian laborers unless they are taxpayers, or pay a tax of $10 a year, if the city father has his way they will not be allowed to be employed on municipal work. The alderman has expressed his opinion to the effect that Italians who want to work for the city, and who are not taxpayers, apply to the city clerk for a certificate, for which they will be called upon to pay $10. He proposes to deduct $10 for each such laborer who cannot produce his certificate, and should a contractor on municipal work employ them, he proposed to deduct $10 for each such one from the amount of the contract.

Ald. Morgan also suggests recommending to the council that the health inspector see to it that Italian laborers live like Canadians and not crowd together in one room to the number of twelve and sixteen, as the claims is customary with the sons of Italy, sanitary conditions demand attention in this respect, to say nothing of the unfairness of competition with Canadian labor by a class of people who contribute nothing to the public exchequer, and reduce by their submissiveness to congested and unsanitary conditions, the cost of living to a minimum figure utterly unattainable by the average British workman.

Ald. Morgan will probably introduce a by-law to this effect.

Price of Beef Is Sure to Rise

Winnipeg, April 10.—Pat Burns, the Alberta cattle king, in Winnipeg yesterday said; "The cattle ranchers of the West will do well if cheques through the present winter with no more than an average loss of 10 per cent. of their stock.

"That the price of beef will be affected there is no the slightest doubt. I anticipate not only a rise, but a very marked rise.

"The causes of this are perfectly natural, and are due to an increased demand and decreased supply. Even before the winter had started it was evident that there was a scarcity of cattle. The ranching districts of Alberta are in a state of transition, inasmuch as the largest ranches are being broken up into smaller ones. Some years ago the territory between Calgary and Macleod was held by probably thirty cattle.

"This scarcity is evident not only in cattle, but in all live stock. Buyers are unable to obtain hogs at 7 1-2 cents. A few years ago they could obtain all the supply they desired at from 4 to 5 cents. Sheep are also practically unobtainable unless imported."

Rush From U. S. Started too Soon

Regina, April 10.—The rush of settlers into the North-West from the States has unquestionably commenced too soon. Five hundred are stalled here, being cared for by the municipal authorities, because the northern line is blocked by the snowstorm of Saturday.

Snow and ice fall covered many portions of the prairies, and the season will be open very late.

A COSMOPOLITAN CROWD.

Winnipeg, April 9.—Saturday was a record day in the number of immigrants arrivals in Winnipeg this season. Between seven o'clock in the morning and four o'clock in the afternoon five trains arrived from the East, conveying in all 1,380 immigrants from Great Britain and continental Europe. Most of the new arrivals were passengers on three special immigrant trains.

Five hundred British, 490 Galicians, Austrians, and Russians, 130 Poles, 210 Scandinavians, and 30 Italians constituted the complete list.

Three Dead from Poison

Chicago, April 9.—A despatch to the Tribune from Evansville, Ind., says;

Mrs. Achariah Watson, the third wife of a farmer in Perry County, Indiana, died a few days ago, and yesterday it was discovered that her death was due to the wall paper on the walls and ceiling of the parlor that she cleaned two days before being taken ill. Physicians believed she had been poisoned, but were unable to ascertain the cause until the wall paper was examined and found to be impregnated with virulent poison.

Watson's first two wives died in the same way, their deaths occurring one and two years ago.

Hill's Lines in Canada May Equal U.S. System

President of Company Says the Railway Will be Built Far North of Other Lines--Will Spend ten Millions.

Winnipeg, April 10. — President Louis Hill of the Great Northern Railway Company, said yesterday; "The Great Northern system is endeavoring to secure mammoth terminals in Chicago, Minneapolis and Winnipeg. We have already secured all the land necessary for handling business for years to come in Portland and Seattle. If our Canadian plans do not miscarry I expect within the next ten years to have a railroad system there which will be almost an equivalent of the Great Northern system as it is today in the United States.

"In the Canadian West we will touch Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, probably Prince Albert, and it is very likely that we shall traverse the Peace River country with a line several hundred miles further north than any line contemplated by any of the present Canadians systems.

GET READY TO BUILD.

"I cannot tell you at this time when construction will actually begin. Our representatives in the Canadian territory at this time are quietly looking over the field, and their reports will determine more than anything else just what movements we shall make, and when. From three to five hundred men have been busy in the Minnesota woods this winter getting out ties which will be used by the Great Northern exclusively in building extensions in Canada. The right of way department of the Great Northern in St. Paul is one of the busiest in the great building devoted exclusively to the business of the company. From twenty to thirty surveyors, chainmen, and assistants are getting things in readiness for a trip in the north country."

WILL SPEND TEN MILLIONS.

Ten millions is the slice from the new sixty million stock which the Supreme Court of Minnesota has decided the Great Northern can issue, which will be spent in Canada. Winnipeg will be made the general Canadian terminus of the system, and a general office to conduct Canadian business will be established there.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Gathered From the Local Police Station.

Several local merchants at yesterday's police court were charged with obstructing the pavements by getting boxes and other packages in by the front entrance of their respective places of business, and leaving such on the pavements, on Saturday, April 5th, thus blocking the sidewalks. The magistrate said he did not wish to impose a hardship and reserved judgment. The merchants so charged each gave what looked like a satisfactory explanation of their alleged breach of the city bylaw.

After the court had adjourned the local police, together with the press representatives had an informal chat about the cases as above, and it was suggested that possibly the best way to settle this difficulty was to make a test case by summoning some carter that did or might deliver goods on the pavement within prescribed hours. It was suggested, as the local carters are all under city license which clearly includes a phrase to the effect that said licensees must not break certain city by-laws, that a test case might be made by summoning some city carter, who may deliver goods on the pavements in front of shops within (to the merchants) prescribed hours for placing such goods on the sidewalks, and having said carters indicted for being "partners criminis" as the lawyers say, in the transaction. If this were done, it was claimed, and should a prosecution and ultimate penalty be the result, this would have the result of merchants being saved from prosecution in many cases when the merchants are absolutely guiltless. Without criticising the by-law referred to, there is no doubt but what many a local merchant, particularly on Saturdays, in all innocence, and without malice aforethought, renders himself liable to a penalty for the result of carters, without, in many cases, the cognizance of said merchants. Placing goods on the pavement in prescribed hours.

Should such a test case be made it would either place the present by-law into innocuous desuetude or impel the passage of a more explicit and more easily understood and usable city ordinance.

Milkman's Side of Present Prices

Yesterday a Times representative interviewed one of the city existing milk dealers, and asked this gentleman as to the chances of the present 6-cent price for milk being reduced. This man promptly stated that owing to the high price of feed for cows, and the advanced price of labor, there is little chance for this price being reduced.

Our informant noted whilst the price of bran a short time ago was only $10 a ton it cannot now be bought for $20.

He added that the present increased demand for cattle for the meat market has also caused outside competitors who have previously supplied milk to sacrifice their cows, thus shortening the source of supply. He also noted, that hay is now 40 per cent. higher than a year or two ago.

After quite a long talk our informant, getting, to use a slang expression, "hot under the collar" exclaimed, "People don't know what the ——— they are talking about, a man can't sell milk at less than six cents a quart and make a decent living after paying his just debts."

Mr. Edward Clarke Is the Guest of Honor

Yesterday evening an interesting family re-union was held at the residence of Mr. F. R. Clarke, the George street jeweller, at 59 Bolivar street, in honor of Mr. Clarke's father, that old time and respected citizen, Mr. Edward Clarke, to celebrate the latter's 81st birthday.

There were present, among others, his daughter, Mrs. Job of this city, Mr. Job and their family, his nephew Mr. J. Johnston and family, of this city, also the family of his youngest son, Mr. F. H. Clarke, as above noted.

During the evening, after a fine menu had been disposed of, and the toast of the guest had been drunk, Mr. F. R. Clarke presented his father with a pair of elegant gold spectacles. A most enjoyable evening was spent in songs and music, Mr. F. R. Clarke singing the old-time favorite "Rule Britannia, accompanying the same in his well recognized style on the banjo. The evening was most enjoyable and the entertainment terminated at a late hour.

The venerable guest, 81 years of age has been 48 years in the city, and was for years engineer of the now defunct W. Helm's foundry, and afterwards with Mr. P. Ryan's tannery formerly located on Simcoe street, just back of the Snowden Block, now occupied by Mr. Alex. Elliott, the wholesale liquor merchant.

This octogenarian resident of Peterborough is one of the few remaining half century dwellers within the city's borders who has not an enemy or ill-wisher, and best wishes entertainment will be looked on with approval by all who know him.

Get Rid of Indigestion and Things Will Look Bright and Joyous.

After a few days use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets the headache, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, nervousness, sleeplessness, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach—will disappear and perfect digestion and a good skin will show that the vital machinery is once more running smoothly.

Mi-o-na is to be taken before each meal and it will stimulate the secretive and digestive juices and strengthen the whole of the digestive system so that the unpleasant full feeling will be absent and indigestion prevented.

Bilious Paleness, Now Easily Cured

If you are frequently bilious or have feelings of nausea, there is a reason.

When the liver action is normal the bile is secreted in the proportions necessary to ensure the digestion of fats.

When liver action is irregular it is an evidence of impairment of nerve force.

When these derangements occur an undue amount of work is thrown upon the liver and kidneys, they rebel—the whole system suffers, and ill-health follows.

Another dangerous result of derangement of the biliary function is constipation. Deadly disease results from this condition.

This is a hateful condition because it ensures two results—heavy dark rings under the eyes and a sallowness that's absolutely abhorrent.

These derangements if allowed to continue excite the formation of gall-stones, cause jaundice, catarrhal inflammation of the bowels, and indigestion.

If you wish to get better, the very root of the trouble must be reached.

This can be accomplished only by Ferrozone—a remedy that strengthens the system, the blood, the liver and kidneys.

Ferrozone is food for the nervous system.

It fortifies and strengthens it.

The nervous system controls all the functions of the body.

Improve its tone, you improve the tone of the whole body and this is what Ferrozone accomplishes.

Its first action is to fortify digestion—this means nourishment and more building material.

Ferrozone makes rich, red blood—lots of it, and this means the proper action of all the large and vital organs of the body.

Quickly there comes strength, vigor, endurance—that glow of feeling which we call health.

You are sure of robust health; sure of strong nerves, good appetite; sure to look and feel your best if you use Ferrozone; try this great tonic, sold everywhere in 50c. boxes.

New York, April 9.—Jacob Sohler Coxey, of the Coxey army of 1894, is planning another great national crusade on new and sensational lines, and he may commence operations the present year.

Mr. Coxey was in New York several days ago and said: "I am preparing to take up my campaign of education where I was forced to leave it several years ago. I shall conduct this campaign on new and original lines, and in a way that will be certain to attract the attention of the nation. I will travel with an entire train of cars and a tent capable of seating many thousands. This country is becoming ripe for just such a great movement."

"I'm sorry, miss," said the agent politely, "but there is not even a berth left."

"Perhaps I might get in the second cabin," suggested Madge, with a sudden accession of hope. The agent smiled.

"There are more persons going back second cabin than there are who want firsts," he explained. "You see, lots of those who come over first cabin only have enough for the second cabin on the way home. Some of them discount their return ticket for the little extra money they can get that way. Of course some one might decide not to go at the last moment, but there are 137 applications in ahead of yours, and there would have to be 138 passengers not going before I could fix you up on that boat."

"But the next?" she persisted.

"Just as bad, if not worse. I am afraid that I shall not be able to book you before the end of next month."

With a sigh, Madge turned away from the counter. She had lingered on in Europe after the rest of her original party had returned. She had joined the Worthingtons after that, but now they were starting for the Nile trip, and it was important that she should get home. There had been no hope of obtaining passage on the French and Hamburg liners, and she had run over to London supposing that there would be a better opportunity.

But everywhere the same story was told. The rush of westbound traffic was unexpectedly heavy and there would be no chance for a stateroom for weeks to come. Aunt Clara was fretting at the delay, her father had written her that he was not well and he wished her to return at once, and yet they would probably be forced to remain in London for five or six weeks.

Madge always thought better when she walked, so she dismissed her cab and started to walk back to the Cecil. The busy London streets quickened her thoughts, but these only served to show how unpleasant was her situation. It was a very blue face that crossed Tom Manning's line of vision.

"ISN'T THAT THE RICHEST JOKE?" HE CHUCKLED.

"Miss Howard!" he cried, starting forward. "This is indeed a surprise. I had supposed that you returned long ago."

"Returned," she laughed dismally. "Why, we are marooned here. We cannot get a berth for love or money."

"If misery loves company you have lots of it," he laughed. "Let's go and have some lunch. That may cheer you up a little. I'll telephone Mrs. Twomey."

Madge nodded gratefully. She had always liked Tom Manning, and they turned their steps toward the Carleton. She waited while he went off to telephone her aunt.

He ordered a capital lunch, for he had a rare sense of gastronomic proportions, and she really enjoyed the dainty meal, though she caught herself wondering how much more glad she would have been had it been Frank Roper whom she had encountered. He was a business man, where Tom was a mere society butterfly. Frank could have found some way of getting her out of the trouble; Tom was only a momentary diversion.

Almost as though in answer to her question Roper entered the dining room and came toward them. His alert bearing was in marked contrast to Manning's rather boyish pose, and yet somehow she did not feel so glad to see him as she had been to greet Tom.

He took a seat at their table in response to Manning's invitation and listened gravely to her recital of her troubles.

"I regret that I cannot be of assistance," he said when she had concluded. "I made every endeavor yesterday to arrange a similar matter for the relatives of some business friends, and the case is hopeless. Even the freighters are booked far ahead."

"Then you are marooned, too," she laughed gleefully.

"I never permit such a situation," he said complacently. "My interests are too large to admit of a delay. My room was booked before I came over. I am going day after tomorrow."

"I guess we exiles shall have to charter a steamer," laughed Madge. "If you are done, Miss Howard, shall we go?"

She left the table with relief. Somehow Roper's attitude of complacent satisfaction was positively hateful. She had always liked him before. Down in her heart of hearts she still vacillated between the two men ever since her coming out ball. Her preference had been for Roper until now, but at present Tom's mercurial temperament suited her mood better, and she was glad that she had met him first.

"Since Frank has refused the request, may I take it up?" he asked as they parted at the hotel. "I may be able to sandbag some unwary tourist and take his stateroom from him."

"If you only could!" she cried impulsively. "Father is in poor health, and I am so anxious to get to him."

"Can you sail at once?" he asked.

"I'd like to go this minute," she cried.

"Consider it done," he said, with mock dramatics. "I will work the sandbag persuasion this very day."

Madge went upstairs oddly comforted by the assurance, though her sense told her that Manning could not succeed where Roper with his influence had failed.

It was with misgiving that she opened the note he sent her that evening, but a delighted cry escaped her when a ticket fell out. She let it flutter to the floor when she read the letter. It ran:

Dear Miss Howard—I am called out of town and am mailing these to you. You can fix it up when I see you in New York. Hope you will have a pleasant passage. With regards to your aunt and yourself, THE SANDBAGGER.

Roper called that evening to explain that he had heard of a berth that she might obtain four weeks later and seemed much relieved to find that she had been provided for.

"I should have offered you my room," he said, "had it not been that it was imperative that I should be in town next week. We shall be fellow passengers."

Madge could not arouse great enthusiasm over this fact. A few weeks before she would have been glad. But since the luncheon she had changed. It was unreasonable to expect him to give up his stateroom, yet the complacent way in which he had dismissed that possibility had irritated her.

It was not as pleasant a trip as Roper anticipated. Madge was pleasant, but there was no chance to get a chat with her, and they were nearing home before the opportunity came to put his fate to the test.

He had regarded her acceptance as a matter of course, and her prompt and emphatic negative put him out of sorts with himself. He did not come near her again until they lay off quarantine and the steerage passengers were being transferred to the Ellis island boat.

The cabin passengers were hanging over the rail watching the odd characters as they trooped on board the little steamer. Roper leaned on the rail beside Madge.

Suddenly he grasped her arm and pointed to the gangway. "Isn't that the richest joke?" he chuckled. "There goes Manning. He probably got strapped and came over steerage because it was the best he could afford. This is rich."

In a flash Madge solved the situation.

"I am afraid," she said, "that we are occupying Mr. Manning's stateroom. That is probably his reason for coming third class. He knew how anxious I was to get home, and that is the way he solved the problem. Had I known I should never have consented."

Roper's mirth changed to a sickly smile. "I congratulate—Mr. Manning," he said as he turned away.

That evening Manning presented himself at the Howards' in response to Madge's note. "I was going to arrive officially in a couple of weeks from now," he explained sheepishly. "I did not want to see you two left alone in London, and I had to get back on a big deal I was working. I'm sorry you saw me, though."

"I'm not," she said decidedly. "I used to think you were just a society butterfly, and I'm glad to know differently."

"Oh, I work," he said lightly. "Only I don't bring my business to 5 o'clock teas, and I rather like the teas—that's all."

"Just—the teas?" asked Madge meaningly.

"Do you mean"— he stammered.

"Yes," said Madge. "Since you are afraid to appear to take advantage of your action I suppose I shall have to force you to propose."

"It won't take much forcing," he laughed. "Will you?"

"Gladly," said Madge.

A Profitable Inheritance.

The boatman, stolidly bending to his oars, looked up quickly and said, "Illustrissimo, my grandfather was the boatman of the Signor Shelley, drowned in this bay." Saying Shelley's name, he lifted his hat as if he had mentioned one of the saints.

The quick mist of emotion rose to Carducci's eyes at the boatman's simple gesture of reverence. "I salute thee, my friend," he said, stretching out his hand. The rower drew in his oars and, bending forward, shook hands with Carducci, then rowed quietly on, driving out into the blue waters.

I have since been told—but I refuse to believe it—that every boatman in Spezia tells the same grandfather story when Shelley's name is mentioned by visitors to the bay. "It is our little story for the English," they say, with a gleaming, irresponsible smile. "They like it much. It is worth a lira or two lira—sometimes five." In our case, I remember, it was worth five and a clasp of Carducci's hand.—Fortnightly Review.

Foster Speaks Today on Insurance Report

Ottawa, April 9.—Taking into consideration the amount of unfinished business, it is scarcely possible that prorogation can take place before the 20th.

There are estimates to pass; the iron and steel bounties and railway subsidies to put through, and several important government measures to be dealt with, although, perhaps, two of the most contentious—the land bill and the Patent Medicine Act—may be dropped.

The Senate is in no mood, either, to be rushed at the finish.

Besides the purely formal and set business of the session, two important subjects remain to be taken up and threshed out. Today the report of the insurance commission will be dealt with by Mr. Foster, and a prime debate may be expected to ensue upon his speech.

Then there is the Hyman case still in a state of suspension. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is on record as holding that Mr. Hyman must resign his seat, and the question asked daily since that deliverance is, "Why the delay?"

One thing certain is that Mr. Hyman is not retaining public sympathy by the course he sees fit to pursue. This will be made dramatically clear when the subject comes up for review in the House, as it doubtless will some day this week.

What HON. H. G. EWART, Former Congressman, Circuit Court and U. S. Judge, Western District, North Carolina, Has to Say of NEVADA MINING INVESTMENTS:

Nevada's past history was written by the Comstock. Its present history is being written by Goldfield, Tonopah and Bullfrog.

The great Comstock Mine at Virginia City, Nevada, produced $630,000,000. It added hundreds of millions to the world's supply of precious metals, it built transcontinental railroads, great steamship lines and telegraphic cables across the ocean, it financed some of the world's greatest newspapers, it endowed universities and colleges, and galleries of art, it built multitudes of towns and cities, it completed that splendid metropolis, San Francisco, it made United States senators, railroad and bank presidents, it fixed in history the names of Mackey, Fair, Flood, O'Brien, Shaw, Jones and Sutro.

Tonopah was discovered in 1900. Her Mizpah is probably the greatest silver-gold mine of the world. This camp has paid $2,200,000 in cash dividends.

Goldfield came next, and is producing today $190,000 every twenty-four hours, or at the rate of $50,000,000 per annum.

It is Bullfrog now, the baby among her wonderful camps, that Nevada is holding forth to the world like a doting mother. Unlike Goldfield, Bullfrog is essentially a great milling proposition, there being literally mountains of ore, assaying from $5 to $250 per ton. When other mining camps in Nevada will be deserted, Bullfrog will be known as the "Camp of Confidence and Endurance." It will take centuries to exhaust its great ore deposits. This is the reason why Schwab, McKane, Oddie, Clark and other millionaires have quietly acquired nearly every foot of available mineral ground in this great district. This is the reason why four great railroads have already completed, and are rapidly extending their lines into the Bullfrog district. This is why Rhyolite has in the short space of three years changed from a habitation of coyotes and side-wheelers into a modern up-to-date city of 7,000 people. This is the reason why the Montgomery-Shoshone is building upon its properties a great reduction mill which will handle its thousands of tons of ore and which will cost over half a million. This is the reason why all Bullfrog stocks have steadily advanced in the face of the savage and unjustifiable attacks made by Wall street and their paid newspaper emissaries.

The South Bullfrog district, which includes the Keane Wonder, Big Dell, Cliff, California Bullfrog, Death Valley Mining & Milling Co., and others, is looked upon as one of the coming camps of importance. The ore found in this district are quartz and talc, carrying iron oxides, the principal values being in gold, with silver and copper traces.

It is in this district that the Bullfrog-Comstock Mines Company (Inc.) properties in part are located. The company owns 80 acres of highly mineralized lands within two miles of the California Bullfrog Mine. Its assays show rich gold, silver and copper values, and being a tunnel proposition, can be economically and quickly developed. The other property of the Bullfrog-Comstock Mines Company is splendidly located right in the very heart of this great gold-bearing camp, consisting of 160 acres within 1 1-2 miles of the great Montgomery-Shoshone Mine owned by Charles M. Schwab, the Pittsburg steel magnate, and his associates. It is only two miles from the City of Rhyolite with a fine road leading to the mines, and within one mile of the water pipes leading from Indian Springs to the City of Rhyolite. Its ledges are bold and well defined, and expert engineers declare it as the ir opinion, that the same rich veins of the Montgomery-Shoshone traverse this property.

Kansas City, Mo., February 20, 1907.

J. H. MORELAND.

Mr. Moreland is one of the most expert and reliable assayers in the United States. He is a graduate of the State School of Mines of Colorado, and has had fifteen years practical experience as assayer of leading mines and smelters. For many years he was the official Government assayer for the United States Custom House at Kansas City, Mo. The large proportion of all ores shipped from Mexico is received at Kansas City.

The Bullfrog-Comstock Mines Co. is officered and managed by gentlemen of the highest character and standing in this city. The company has secured the services of Mr. J. E. Lindstrom, of Rhyolite, Nevada, as general manager, whose years of experience in Alaska, Colorado, and California, peculiarly fit him for this position.

After the most careful and personal examination of the properties of this company, its officers, and its possibilities, I have accepted the position of Fiscal Agent of the company and offer to the investing public, 250,000 shares of its stock at 10 cents per share. With the knowledge I have of the tremendous possibilities of this company, and its valuable properties, and the high character of its officials, I do not hesitate to urge my friends in the south, and the investing public generally, to buy this stock, satisfied as I am that they will realize enormous profits on their investments.

It will give me pleasure to mail to any inquirers, prospectus, maps, and full information as to the properties of this company. Highest references given.

This stock can be purchased either for cash, or on the installment plan as follows:

$500.00	buys 5000	shares, payable	$50.00	cash, balance $90.00 per month.

This stock is being rapidly taken and I would advise my friends to send in their orders at once. Thousands of investors are making fortunes out of comparatively small amounts in Nevada Mining propositions. Why should you not do so?

Monkey With Glasses.

In the zoological gardens of Breslau, Germany, there is a spider monkey which was operated on for cataract and now wears glasses. For more than a year after it was received at the zoo it was very healthy and lively. Then it became very quiet, ceased to play and crouched in a corner. It was examined and found to be suffering from cataract, so it was immediately taken to the eye hospital and operated on. In less than a month it was fitted with a pair of spectacles, which it wears with becoming gravity.

Men-of-war on Paper.

Each warship now is built upon paper some months before a plate of steel is forged. Not only are the length and breadth of a ship decided upon, but the naval constructor can tell to an ounce how much water she will displace when her armor and guns are mounted upon her, how many times her propellers will revolve in a minute with a given pressure of steam and how many tons of coal an hour must be consumed to attain a certain rate of speed.—London Graphic.

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1896, by HARPER & BROTHERS

Oscard looked puzzled. Having risen, he did not sit down again, and presently he took his leave, feeling convinced that Jocelyn was about to faint.

When he was gone the girl sat wearily down.

"Millicent Chyne," she whispered. "What is to be done?"

"Nothing," she answered to herself after awhile. "Nothing. It is not my business. I can do nothing."

She sat there alone, as she had been all her life, until the short tropical twilight fell over the forest. Quite suddenly she burst into tears.

"It is my business," she sobbed. "It is no good pretending otherwise; but I can do nothing."

* * * * * * *

Four months elapsed and the excitement created in the small world of western Africa by the first dazzling success of the simiacine expedition began to subside. The thing took its usual course. At first the experts disbelieved and then they prophesied that it could not last. Finally the active period of envy, hatred and malice gave way to a sullen tolerance not unmixed with an indefinite grudge toward Fortune who had favored the brave once more.

Maurice Gordon was in daily expectation of news from that faroff favored spot they vaguely called the plateau. And Jocelyn did not pretend to conceal from herself the hope that filled her whole being, the hope that Jack Meredith might bring the news in person.

Instead came Victor Durnovo.

He came upon her one evening when she was walking slowly home from a mild tea party at the house of a missionary. Hearing footsteps on the sandy soil, she turned and found herself face to face with Durnovo.

"I was coming along to see you," he said, and there was a subtle offense in his tone.

She did not trouble to tell him that Maurice was away for ten days. She felt that he knew that.

"When do you go back?" she asked carelessly.

"Almost at once," in a tone that apologized for causing her necessary pain. "I must leave tomorrow or the next day. I do not like the idea of Meredith being left too long alone up there with a reduced number of men. Of course, I had to bring a pretty large escort. I brought down £60,000 worth of simiacine."

"Have you had any more sickness among the men?" she asked at once in a tone of half veiled sarcasm which made him wince.

"No," he answered; "they have been quite all right."

"What time do you start?" she asked. "There are letters for Mr. Meredith at the office. Maurice's head clerk will give them to you."

She knew that these letters were from Millicent. She had actually had them in her hand. She had inhaled the faint, refined scent of the paper and envelopes.

They had reached the gate of the bungalow garden. She turned and held out her hand in an undeniable manner. He bade her goodby and went his way, wondering vaguely what had happened to them both. The conversation had taken a different turn from what he had expected and intended. But somehow it had got beyond his control. He had looked forward to a very different ending to the interview. And now he found himself returning somewhat disconsolately to the wretched hotel in Loango—dismissed—sent back. The next day he actually left the little west African coast town, turning his face northward with bad grace. Even at that distance he feared Jack Meredith's half veiled sarcasm. Durnovo had only been allowed to come down to the coast under a promise, gracefully veiled, but distinct enough, that he should only remain twenty hours in Loango.

Jocelyn avoided seeing him again. Four days later she was riding through the native town of Loango, accompanied by a lady friend, when she met Victor Durnovo. The sight of him gave her a distinct shock. She knew that he had left Loango three days before with all his men. There was no doubt about that. Moreover, his air was distinctly furtive—almost scared. It was evident that the chance meeting was as undesired by him as it was surprising to her.

"I thought you had left," she said shortly, pulling up her horse with undeniable decision.

"Yes, but I have come back for—for more men."

She knew he was lying, and he felt that she knew.

"Indeed!" she said. "You are not a good starter."

She turned her horse's head, nodded to her friend, bowed coldly to Durnovo and trotted toward home. In the forest she applied the spur, and beneath the whispering trees, over the silent sand, the girl galloped home as fast as her horse could lay legs to ground.

CHAPTER XV.

ON nearing the bungalow Jocelyn turned aside into the forest where a little colony of huts nestled in a hollow of the sand dunes.

"Nala," she cried, "the paddlemaker. Ask him to come to me."

In a few moments a man emerged from a shed of banana leaves. He was a scraggy man, very lightly clad, and a violent squint handicapped him seriously in the matter of first impressions.

"I came to you," said Jocelyn, "because I know that you are an intelligent man and a great traveler."

"Where do you wish me to go?"

"To Msala, on the Ogowe river. When can you leave?"

"Now."

"You can hire a dhow," she said, "and on the river you may have as many rowers as you like. You must go very quickly to Msala. There you must ask about the Englishman's expedition. Some of the men are at Msala now. They were going up country to join the other Englishmen far away—near the mountains. They have stopped at Msala. Find out why they have not gone on, and come back very quickly to tell me."

She gave him money and rode on home. Before she reached the bungalow the paddlemaker passed her at a trot, going toward the sea.

She waited for three days, and then Victor Durnovo came again. Maurice was still away. There was an awful sense of impending danger in the very air, in the loneliness of her position. Yet she was not afraid of Durnovo. She had left that fear behind. She went to the drawing room to see him full of resolution.

"I could not go away," he said after relinquishing her hand, "without coming to see you."

Jocelyn said nothing. The scared look which she had last seen in his face was no longer there, but the eyes were full of lies.

"Jocelyn," the man went on, "I suppose you know that I love you. Will you marry me?" he asked.

MILLIONS UNDER OCEAN.

Expedition Searches For Treasure On African Coast.

There is a fascinating air of romance and adventure about the expedition which recently left the East India docks in the steamer Alfred Nobel, to search for sunken treasure worth £6,000,000 off the coast of Africa.

According to Capt. C. A. P. Gardiner, of Bloomsbury, who heads the expedition, the African coast is lined with bullion sunk in every kind of vessel from old Dutch galleons to modern liners. Here is an alluring list of a few of the treasures which, it is hoped, will be brought to the surface:

Rich Treasures.

Immensely rich treasure captured from pirates and sunk in the Wilhelm der Segunda.

Priceless china, bullion, tin, lead, and silver, sunk in the Dutch galleon Middleburg, which was scuttled off Hoetje's Bay 192 years ago to avoid capture.

Valuable cargo lost in the Dutch Government's armed merchantman Crazenstein in 1698.

Copper, tin and silver of great value, which went down in the Aberdeen White Star boat Thermopylae.

Captain Gardiner has served in the British and Chinese navies, and is an officer of the Royal Navy Reserve. His attention was drawn to the records of the many wrecks which have occurred along the African coasts, and he spent several years in endeavoring to locate them.

Wrecks Discovered.

He was rewarded by the discovery of twenty-nine wrecks, which could be reached, and the result of his discoveries was the formation of the South African Salvage Company, Limited, with a capital of £25,000.

The steamer Alfred Nobel, once the Oromea, a pleasure yacht, and more recently employed in carrying dynamite, was chartered, and no pains or money was spared in equipping her as a salvage vessel.

There will be twenty hands, including two divers, all ex-navy or naval reserve men. They will sign on for five years, and will be given 5 per cent. share of all treasure found.

"We are not going only to look for wrecks; but we shall do salvage work permanently," said the captain. "There is at present no salvage company in South Africa, and eight or nine valuable boats are wrecked there every year."

The Cape Government claims 15 per cent. of the value of all silver raised, 25 per cent. of the value of gold and precious stones, and 10 per cent. of the value of other articles, but Capt. Gardiner is quite satisfied that there will be enough left to please everybody concerned.

Killed by a Lion.

A young naval surgeon, belonging to a gunboat on Lake Nyassa, has recently lost his life after a severe struggle with an infuriated lion. Going out in search of elephants, which had been reported in the neighborhood, he came upon two lions, a male and a female, sleeping under the shade of a large mopani tree. With a double .500 express he fired at the male, wounding it severely, whereupon both retreated into high grass. Without taking the precaution to reload the discharged barrel he sounded the horn, followed them, and in a few yards almost stumbled upon the one he had hit. Taking a hurried aim at the massive looking head, he fired one deflectoral shot, the bullet, as it was afterward ascertained, mortally penetrating the root of the animal's spine.

"With the roar and a bound the lion was upon him, and, fixing his teeth in his shoulder, endeavored to bear him to the ground. The surgeon, however, a man of very powerful physique, pluckily endeavored to keep his antagonist at arm's length, and, maintaining its hold on the now useless shoulder, the lion with the hind claws literally tore the flesh from the opponent's lower limbs. They finally sank down together, and the lion, suddenly very sick from the effects of the first wound, staggered off a short way and lay down. The subsequent surgeon, rapidly bleeding to death, now called up his native shikari, or gunbearer, and, making him kneel to form a rest for the second rifle, actually shot the lion dead, succeeding himself almost immediately after the appalling hemorrhage from his own arteries. The two dead bodies were found lying within a few yards of each other.

"Boots Wha Hae."

Some exceptionally rare books and manuscripts were recently sold at Sotheby's, the famous London auction mart, and most of them brought high prices. A second folio Shakespeare, Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies, brought $1,100. King Charles' Eikon Basilike, one act only, sold for $5. Lessons by Thackeray sold for $60.

"A Prayse and Reporte of Maister Martyne Frobisher (Sir Martin Frobisher) on a Voyage to Meta Incognita," date 1578, fetched $5,650. The only other known copy is in the British Museum. A rare first edition of Frobisher's second voyage, dated 1577, brought $3,800. The third and last voyage, dated 1578, brought $4,000.

A sixteen century manuscript of "Precea Piae" was bought by Mr. Stevens for $5,950, and the same purchaser paid $1,775 for an autograph manuscript of Burns' "Scots Wha Hae," sold as the original copy.

Ranji's Message.

Prince Ranjitsinhji, the famous cricketer, and who is now the new Jam of Nawanagar, has sent the following message to the editor of The Birmingham Gazette and Express:

Many thinks for your congratulations. My message to the British public is: "God bless the Emperor King, his Empire, and his people. I hope still to retain the regard, affection, and esteem of my British friends and the British public, by playing the game on another field."—Ranjitsinhji, Perbander, India.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in fact, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these Nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

is recommended

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 32. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 20 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 20 acres of J. B. 32 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $150,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 30 feet, and in it shows 6 inch nicolite, 12 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1235-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 60 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

New Liskeard, 17th November, 1906.

Manhattan Gold Field

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 6300 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assay. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

"Respectfully submitted,

CLEAR-HEADED

Head Bookkeeper Must be Reliable

The chief book-keeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the harm coffee did for him:

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum Coffee a little over two years ago, and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and the old kind of coffee. It happened in this way:

"About three and a half years ago I had an attack of pneumonia, which left a memento in the shape of dyspepsia, or rather, to speak more correctly, neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum Food Coffee a trial.

"Next day it came, but the cook made the mistake of not boiling it sufficiently, and we did not like it much. This was, however, soon remedied, and now we like it so much that we will never change back. Postum, being a food beverage instead of a drug, has been the means of curing my stomach trouble. I verily believe, for I am a well man today and have used no other remedy.

"My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co.'s branch house here is of a very confining nature. During my coffee-drinking days I was subject to nervousness and 'the blues' in addition to my sick spells. These have left me since I began using Postum Food Coffee, and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Prize Fighter's Brother Here

Yesterday Mr. Geo Pappas, of Terra Haute, Ind., a nephew of Mr. M. Pappas, the George street cigar and confectionery owner, was in the city. It might be noted that Mr. George Pappas is a brother of the celebrated middle weight prize fighter generally known as "The Greek" who has won many, in fact almost every, fight he has entered. This champion of the American ring fights at about 160 pounds.

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers. Even the untutored Indians had discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information, imparted freely to the whites, led the latter to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests abound in most valuable medicinal roots for the cure of most obstinate and fatal diseases, if we would properly investigate them; and in confirmation of this conviction, he points with pride to the almost marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulator, and blood cleanser known to medical science. Dyspepsia, or indigestion, torpid liver, functional and even valvular and other affections of the heart yield to its curative action. The reason why it cures these and many other affections, is clearly shown in a little book of extracts from the standard medical works which is mailed free to any address by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., to all sending request for the same.

Not less marvelous, in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar affections, weaknesses and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of unsolicited testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of catarrhal pelvic drains, painful periods, irregularities, prolapsus and other displacements, caused by weakness, ulceration of uterus and kindred affections, often after many other advertised medicines and physicians had failed.

Both the above mentioned medicines are wholly made up from the glyceric extracts of native, medicinal roots. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr. Pierce, and they are carried on by skilled chemists and pharmacists with the aid of apparatus and appliances specially designed and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs. A full list of their ingredients is printed on each bottle-wrapper.

Rev. Currie Gets Call to Dummer

A call has been extended to Rev. P. W. Currie, of Port Colborne Presbytery of Hamilton, at Presbyterian meeting of Dummer and Warsaw Presbyterian churches held Monday night to succeed Rev. W. L. Atkinson.

The call was practically unanimous, Rev. S. S. Burns, of Lakefield, interim moderator of session, presided. Mr. Currie is an able preacher, and it is believed that he will accept.

The city treasurer's office floor is in bad shape. This should be attended to when the fire brigade vacate their present premises on Simcoe street to take up their (sic) residence in the new Aylmer street fire hall. Possibly the property committee has plans for extensive alterations to the building and the city treasurer may have a new office.

Simple Way to Kill Catarrhal Germs in Nose, Throat and Lungs.

The only natural and common sense method known for the cure of catarrhal troubles is Hy-o-mei. It is breathed through an ingenious pocket inhaler, so that its medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells of the nose, throat and lungs, killing all catarrhal germs, soothing the irritated mucous membranes, and restoring a healthy condition.

If you suffer from catarrhal troubles, such as offensive breath, raising of mucous, frequent sneezing, husky voice, discharge from the nose, droppings in the throat, loss of strength, spasmodic coughing, or a feeling of tightness across the upper part of the chest, you should begin to use Hy-o-mei at once. It will destroy all disease germs in the nose, throat and lungs, and provide the blood with additional ozone.

We do not want anyone's money unless Hyomei gives relief and cure, and we absolutely agree that money will be refunded unless the remedy gives satisfaction.

All druggists should be able to supply you with Hyomei or we will send it by mail on receipt of price, $1.00, and every package is sold with the distinct understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures. Booth's Hyomei Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

North Monaghan Council Meets

Held a Regular Session on April 8th and Transacted Business

The township council of North Monaghan held a regular session on April 8th, with all members present and the reeve in the chair.

A communication read from D. W. Dumble, of this city, enclosing a petition from A. Cummings and seven other ratepayers in the township, asking the township to open a street through his property, as he proposed to set it off in small building lots. Mr. D. Carnwright, secretary of the Board of Railway Commission of Canada, enclosed a copy of an order of the Board in addition to the Grand Truck Railway siding crossing Lansdowne street to the property of the Toronto Real Estate Co., and the Brinton Carpet Co.

It was moved by Messrs. Hunter and Marrow, that the clerk examine the plan referred to by Mr. Dumble showing Cotteswore avenue to be assumed by the township as a public thoroughfare and to report thereon to the council.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. May and Morrow that the clerk inform Mr. T. Hurley, that upon the production by him for the use of the council of a plan, by an Ontario land surveyor, showing the proposed subdivision of his property and all streets thereon, then the council will consider the advisability of assuming those streets as public thoroughfares.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. May and Morrow, that the clerk is hereby directed to acknowledge the receipt of the order by the Board of Railway Commission of Canada in reference to the railway siding on Lansdowne street.—Carried.

Other business of minor importance received due attention.

CANADIAN HORSE SHOW

The Grand New Exhibition is Toronto, on May 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

The first Canadian National Horse Show will be held in Toronto, on May 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th. This is the successor of the famous Canadian Horse Show, which is now divided into two parts, consisting of the Spring Stallion Exhibition in March, and the Canadian Horse Show in May. As it was also the thirteenth year of the Show, the unlucky number was avoided by a new organization representative of the whole Province, as well as for the City of Toronto.

The Show promises to be greater and far better than ever, and the St. Lawrence Arena, the new building erected by the City, is admirably suited for the purpose. There are no less than seventy-two classes devoted to the Harness, Saddle, Hunter Horses and Ponies, and the sum of $7,000 is distributed.

The principal Officers of the new Association are: Mr. George W. Beardmore, M.F.H., President; W. J. Stark, Secretary; Stewart Houston, Manager. Reduced rates equivalent to a single fare for the round trip are offered on all railways.

American Girl to Wed a Prince

Paris, April 10.—Yet another American girl is to wed a prince and a Russian. Miss Stackelburg is betrothed to Prince Orhoff, their intimate friends report. She is the daughter of a wealthy lumber merchant and lives with her mother and her uncle, Mr. Saurez, in a handsome residence on the Avenue Lena.

Prince Orhoff is colonel in the Czar's army, and is attached to the Russian embassy here as aid-de-camp. He was at one time one of the liveliest and one of the stoutest foreign noblemen in town; a figure as familiar in the wings of boulevard theaters and on the race tracks as in much more aristocratic places.

Orhoff has an ample fortune. He is related to Prince Sergius Belosselsky Blosserak, who married Miss Whittier of Boston, General Whittier's daughter. The Orhoffs are prominent in St. Petersburg and Paris.

This prince, perhaps with his kinsman's example before him, has always greatly admired American women.

Miss Stackelburg is not the first trans-Atlantic beauty to whom he has been attentive, but she and he motor together in the Bois de Boulogne almost daily, and their intimates are certain it will be a match.

Deposed Priest Sings in Cafe

Paris, April 10.—Abbe Onouf, who was suspended by his bishop for having founded an association for worship under the church separation law of France, has found himself thrown on the world. Being without means, he advertised for a position as a secretary, but, failing to get such employment, he took a place as a car conductor. Now he is using his fine tenor voice, which delighted his congregation at the reading desk and the altar, and has signed to sing at a cafe concert.

Wanted to Die

Monro, Mich., April 10.—James Hickey, aged eighteen, from near Quebec, was picked up by the crew of a Detroit, Monro, and Toledo electric car, who found him lying on the track, with his head on the rail. He is believed to be insane.

The case is of considerable interest here because of the fact that the motorman was able to stop his car in time to save the boy's life, whereas last week, when a little boy was killed, the motorman claimed that he was not able to stop the car quickly enough to save him. Hickey said he had heard of the other boy's death, and wanted to die in the same way.

Two Thousand are Awaiting Burial

Montreal, April 10.—Owing to the severe winter the inhumation of bodies placed in the large charnel house in the Cote des Neiges cemetery during the winter will not begin for another fortnight, which is about two weeks later than usual.

More than 2,200 await burial, and the same number of families have again to go through the scenes of bereavement, and re-open all the sorrows of heart that they experienced during the past winter.

This is one of the results of Montreal's severe climate, as with three efet of snow in the low-lying parts of the cemetery, and three feet of frost in the ground, it would be impossible to proceed with the daily interments of a city like Montreal.

From December till April, therefore, grave-digging is suspended, but it will begin again in a few days with greater activity than before, till the big stone vault has been emptied of the toll that death claims every winter.

Peterboro People in New Lead Mine

It will interest our readers to learn that in Pittsburg, Pa., a new mining company has been formed, in which to our knowledge some twenty odd local citizens have already taken stock. The mine in question is located in the southern part of the State of Illinois, and samples of the ore shown The Times, by Mr. M. Smith of this city, president of the company, show a large preponderance of lead with a large amount of zinc in combination.

The mine in question is situated within eight miles of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. An adv. of this company will shortly appear in this paper.

—Fruit dishes, salad dishes, fern pots, biscuit jars, pickel cruits, flower stands and cheese dishes on sale this week at greatly reduced prices. Times Bookstore.

Emperor Will Take Sea Trip

Berlin, April 10.—After having been for two years in the builders' hands, Emperor William's steam yacht Hohenzollern is being fitted out for a cruise. More than $500,000 has been spent on new boilers, interior decorations, furniture and wireless telegraphy. The emperor's study is decorated with panels on which are painted the most famous war ships of all nations. It is said that the emperor will first cruise the Mediterranean, and then visit Cowes for the regatta in August.

To Forbidden City

London, April 10.—A railway from Damascus to Mecca, connecting the forbidden holy city of the Mohammedans with the outside world, will be, perhaps, the most picturesque achievement of the world during the year 1907. Already this line is completed as far as Medina, the second holy city of the followers of Islam, and the end is in sight. While the line is built under direct order of the Sultan, and while it is intended exclusively for the use of Mohammedans, especially for the convenience of pilgrims to Mecca at the time of the great annual pilgrimage, it will undoubtedly be patronized by European tourists, and it seems only a question of time before Mecca, the last of the forbidden cities, now that Lhassa has been opened, will be free of access to travelers of every nationality and religion.

Quebec, April 11.—Alexina Carrier, a 15-year-old girl, is held responsible for the death of her brother at St. Charles de Bellechasse. She had a quarrel with the boy the morning he disappeared, and later returned to the house with blood on her hands, and said he struck her when the two met in the woods. When the body was later found she was the only one of the family who would not go out to see the remains, and suggested that the lad's pockets be searched for the knife which he might have fallen on. The knife was found in the lad's pocket.

JEROME MAKES HIS SPEECH TO THE COURT

In a Blast of Feroolous Oratory He Declares the Guilt of the Prisoner--Thaw and His Wife Sat Aghast.

New York, April 11.—Fighting and struggling against the bluecoats who blocked their path, more than two thousand persons stormed the police lines drawn up outside the court house yesterday, in an endeavor to gain admittance to the trial of Harry K. Thaw. In anticipation of listening to a fierce arraignment of the prisoner from District Attorney Jerome, the crowds collected early, until an hour before the court room doors opened the corridors and passages of the Criminal Courts Building were blocked with people. Sergeant Kelleher, in charge of the police arrangements, soon realized that the force of twenty policemen under him would be inadequate, and he sent for twenty more. Even with this additional force the policemen were forced several times to draw their clubs to keep the mob away from the entrance to the court room. It was by far the largest crowd ever seen at any murder trial in the Criminal Courts Building.

JEROME BEGINS.

Jerome began speaking at 11.35 His address in part was as follows;

"If it pleases your honor and gentlemen of the jury, it seems, so farm I can judge, you have been wandering through a romance day by day. Issues here cannot be determined by quotations from ancient people. That is not what we are here for. For weeks you have been kept under a terrific strain. It has been a hard task for you; also for the learned judge. It hasn't been an easy time for counsel.

Mr. Jerome then discussed the task which had been assigned to everybody concerned.

"This case is not a conflict between the executors of Stanford White and this defendant. It is not litigation over a blackened memory. That is not what we are trying. We are not trying a rape case. It is not whether the friends and relatives of White come and ask for vengeance. It is an issue as to whether Harry Kendall Thaw is guilty or not of the murder of Stanford White. And the issue to determine is whether what the defendant did, in law, was justifiable.

"For the protection of life and law in this community, the defendant must be punished.

"You must try this case, not on the hypothesis of counsel, but on the evidence given to you under oath. Therefore, I shall endeavor to appeal to your reason to show you the evidence in this case plainly manifests the defendant was not justified in taking life."

Mr. Jerome then cautioned the jury that they were not to consider the indictment of the grand jury in determing the guilty or innocence of Thaw. "This accusation means something, and it means that the law says that the killing of a human being is murder in the first degree.

NOT DEMENTIA AMERICANS.

The district attorney then talked on a definition of the charge of murder in the first degree, touching particularly on the time allotted for premeditation and deliberation. He was brief on this subject, however, and said he had no desire to talk exhaustively on questions of law which the court would discuss. Justifiable homicide doesn't mean "dementia Americana," justifiable means self-defence.

"There can be logically but one of four verdicts here;

"Murder in the first degree;
"Murder in the second degree;
"Manslaughter in the first degree; or
"Not guilty on the grounds of insanity.

"An effort to inflame your passions and to turn your real views aside is not the [illegible] way on the Atlantic seaboard to present a case. Your oath binds you, and they appeal [illegible] you to do or not to do, because of your sympathies. Are you, who have been interrogated as to whether you would allow appeals to passion to sway you, going to decide this case on sympathy? Should your sympathies be aroused? You have at home a loving young wife, a loving mother, a loving daughter. You have that noble boy, Stanford White's son, you yourself saw as a witness on this stand, while the mother stayed in Cambridge educating that boy. You were going into sympathy. It seems we can have sympathy on both sides.

LEAVE SYMPATHY OUT.

"I point that out to you to call your attention to the fact that it is not a part of this case. You cannot allow your sympathy to be aroused.

"Who in believing the girl's story could help but have his passions aroused, when he realized that this same girl who sacrificed herself on the stand was haunted around the capitals of Europe by this defendant as his mistress?

"Remember that you have all sworn you would consider the real facts in this case; that you would take the law of insanity from the court, and you were told then when you swore that you would accept it, that that was the only kind of insanity known to the law of this State. You were interrogated upon the "dementia Americana," about the so-called higher law, and you have sworn that there would be no law higher to you than the law as laid down by the courts of this State.

Anglo-Saxons Asked to Save Dying Millions

London, April 11.—Dr. Kennard, commissioner of the Society of Friends, who was sent to investigate the Russian famine, writing from Samara, April 3, says;

"There are 20,000,000 peoples distributed in the South-Eastern provinces of Russia who cannot live to see another harvest without aid."

In Samara, he adds, thousands are dying and 750,000 are starving. Of the latter only 372700 are getting relief, one meal in 24 hours. As a meal is only two pounds of bread and a bowl of soup, this, according to the commissioner, means dying by degrees. Even this meager dole, in countless instances, is divided among many mouths. There are only sufficient funds on hand to last until May 1, whereas money would be needed until the end of July, when the harvest will bring relief.

The commissioner especially appals for canned milk. He says there are 300,000 children in Samara province who have no milk and are forced to eat coarse bread made of acorns, powdered wood, and cucumbers, resulting in thousands of deaths and much disease.

In conclusion the commissioner appeals to the Anglo-Saxons for $2,500,000 to save "twenty millions of human beings who are dying lingering deaths from starvation."

Ottawa, April 11.—A deputation of three Doukhobors headed by Simon Reiken, who is one of the leaders of this people in Western Canada, waited upon the Minister of the Interior yesterday asking that 1,100 Doukhobors now settled in the district of Prince Albert be allowed to join their compatriots in the Yorkton district, and that the Government give them fifteen acres per heard around the villages in which they make their homes.

Proper Medicine For The Blood

Drives Away That Tired Feeling; Makes You Feel Brisk.

To every one is sure to come that tired, exhausted feeling.

When the blood is weak, thin and debilitated, circulation is slow, and in consequence the system is congested with poisons and wastes that should be driven off.

The sensible person acts on the teachings of experience and cleanses his system with a course of Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

No medicine can be more certain to quickly cure. Convenient to take, just one pill at bedtime; safe, because entirely vegetable; unfailing, because proved by thousands that Dr. Hamilton's Pills set you up in a few days.

From Okeboque Pt., N. S., comes the following from Mrs. W. A. Reynolds; "A year ago my health began to fail, I lost appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became thin, hollow-cheeked, and had black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the charm of life had left me and when springtime arrived I was in the "Blues." I read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and got five boxes at once.

"Within a month my appetite and color were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do this should be in every home."

Good health means much to you. Success and happiness depend upon it. The maintenance and source of health is found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson and Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

WHERE WEALTH EXISTS

Manhattan, Nevada, Literally Honeycombed with the Precious Metal.

("The National Banker," December 26, 1906.)

Edwin W. R. Laurence, the noted writer, in speaking of Manhattan, Nevada, in a late issue of the Pacific Monthly, says that the rocky and barren wastes of Nevada are fairly alive with gold. Land upon which nothing but sagebrush could grow, and arid stretches so barren that they could not support even sagebrush, are found to be richly mineralized. The number of gold camps is increasing every month, so rapidly does one discovery crowd upon another.

Manhattan is a most remarkable camp, all things considered, and for the brief time that the ground has been worked, the most surprising discoveries have there been made. It has developed faster than any of the older camps.

Within a year from the date of the first important discovery by the Humphreys, the Manhattan district has been the scene of incessant explorations, remarkable developments and colossal enlargement. So that, today, an area has been blocked out in claims over six miles wide by ten miles long, stretching from beyond Central on the west to beyond East Manhattan, and from Round Mountain to Rye Patch.

Within this marvelously mineralized region, such values are being taken as have rarely been known in any other mining camp in the history of man's digging for gold. There lie stacked up today at the mouths of mines millions of gold. Also discarded upon the dumps as profitless trash—in view of the charges for freight—higher values than many mines bear which pay their owners dividends without ceasing.

The blocking out of high value ores continues beyond precedent, beyond belief. Not one of the older Nevada gold camps has ever demonstrated so much richness within sight and reach in so few weeks as Manhattan. The average value of ore shipped to smelters up to a recent date was $400 a ton. It is a fact that the ore discarded upon the dumps at Manhattan mines is more valuable than most of the ore shipped from California mines.

Among the numerous mining properties in this wonderful district The National Banker has been informed by expert miners and mining engineers that the Manhattan Independent Mining Company possesses one of the most valuable properties, information that has been confirmed by reports from those we have authorized to investigate this property. Mr. Wm. R. Payne, the president, and J. Rogers Brown, the secretary of this company, have just returned from the Manhattan gold field, and have made a thorough examination of the Manhattan Independent Mining Company's property, and find it far better than outlines in their previous statements. If we were permitted to give publicity to facts regarding the marvelously rich discoveries of the precious metal and the high values in the Manhattan camp which have been confided to us under the pledge of secrecy, we would stagger the credulity of even the most optimistic miner and investor who have pinned their faith to that camp. This property is within three-quarters of a custom stamp mill, recently completed, the work on the Manhattan will soon be under thorough headway, and judging by the fact that Messrs. Payne and Brown knocked off at numerous places on the ledge crossing this property specimens of the ore which average over $400.00 per ton, indicates unmistakably that the Manhattan Independent Mining Co. will be one of the great mines of this famous district. Stock has already advanced 100 per cent. since first placed on the market and will be advanced again, we learn, by February 1st, 1907. The National Banker looks for a sensation in mining and investing circles when this company's property is thoroughly exploited.

Further information regarding the Manhattan Independent Mining Company may be obtained from Messrs. Thos. Patterson & Co., fiscal agents, Peterborough, Ont.

Farmers Fought Over a Hired Man

Toronto, April 10.—A second section of the special train bearing the passengers of the Virginian came to Toronto last night at 5 o'clock, loaded with immigrants. Nearly all have been placed and forwarded to their destination this morning.

Scores of farmers who haunt the immigrant offices are becoming desperate. Yesterday morning a farmer who had come 30 miles every day for several days in search of a man thought he had corralled the proper quality. The Englishman was willing to go, but sought a place close by for his comrade, from whom he did not care to part. Another farmer, hearing the conversation, butted in, and said; "Come with me, both of you. I'll hire you both at the same wages."

For his pains he got a left-hander in the jaw from the first irate agriculturist, which effectually stopped the bidding for a time. The difficulty was settled by each taking a man.

An old gentleman from near Port Hope was very anxious to get a man, and tried to hire a wealthy farmer from near Burlington, who carried the joke along for a time, and then passed him on to a neighbor, who in turn decided not to farm, and pointed out another who was known to be short-tempered, who when approached exclaimed; "Go to blazes! I'm not an immigrant, I'd get you $5 I've got more land than you ever had or ever will have."

An Ungallant Actor.

A well known American actor, who is old enough not to consider himself a matinee idol by any means, was somewhat surprised and pleased in a St. Louis hotel a short time ago when a pretty girl stopped him in the corridor and presented him with a rose, without saying a word. He was more surprised and less pleased to receive a note the following day reminding him of the incident and asking him to send the giver of the flower two seats at the theater in which he was playing "as a memento of the occasion."

"My dear young lady," the actor replied, waxing sarcastic as he realized what had been the object of the attention he had been paid, "I would be glad to send you the seats you ask for, but, on consultation with the manager of the theater, I have been informed that the seats are all fastened down and that he is opposed to having them sent away as souvenirs in any event, so that you will have to be contented with an autograph for a souvenir of your benevolence of yesterday instead."—Harper's Weekly.

Beats Radium For Cost.

If you object to paper money, but wish to carry big values in small compass, you might do worse than lay in a stock of best lenses for microscopes. Weight for weight, gold is not nearly so valuable as glass in the form of powerful lenses, and an ordinary purse filled with such lenses might easily represent a fortune. The record increase in the value of the manufactured article over the raw material is probably made by this variety of glass, which multiplies itself 50,000,000 times. The front lens of a micro objective instrument costing about £1 weighs no more than about .0017 of a gram; hence the value of such lenses to the weight of about two and a quarter pounds would be about £000,000. The cost of making this weight of glass is 1½ pence to 3 pence, and thus when worked up into the shape of a lens the glass has increased in value about 50,000,000 times.—London Express.

The English of It.

An English actor of some prominence was dining with some friends in this country. One of them asked him if he had found any American plays that he thought he could use in England. "Oh, yes," he replied, "I have seen one or two that I fawncy will be on the other side. In fact, I have entered into negotiations for several. One that appeals to me strongly is a play called 'Ten Evenings in a Public House,' where I shall play John Morgan, and another is named 'Uncle Thomas' Residence,' which has a fine part for me in Marks, the barrister."

"THE KING'S NAVEE."

More Efficient and Readier Than Ever Before.

The Chronicle's naval correspondent says: The taxpayer may estimate the value of recent Admiralty administration by contrasting the state of things prevailing at the time of the Kaiser's telegram to Mr. Kruger and the instant readiness for war that now exists. After the Kruger telegram it was resolved to mobilise a flying squadron. The squadron was composed of units which Parliament were assured were ready for war. Five days and nights of heavy work were consumed in effecting the mobilisation. At that time the only sea-going force in home waters fully manned was the Channel fleet of seven or eight battleships, and this fleet was the training school for young seamen.

Superb Fleet.

To-day the Channel fleet combines the eight battleships of the King Edward VII. class with six other modern battleships and four armored cruisers. The Atlantic fleet, based upon Berehaven, will have six battleships and four armored cruisers, while the first division of the new home fleet is a battle squadron comprising six ships, with the Dreadnought carrying the flag, and a group of armored cruisers, known as the fifth squadron, fit to be in the line of battle with the German fleet.

The skilled men on board will be carried throughout the commission, a number exceeding three-fifths of the crew; the unskilled men shipped on board will not be moved more often than every eight months. In addition to these squadrons are four flotillas of destroyers, forty-eight-craft in all, and about thirty submarines.

Ready For War.

It stands to reason that so great an addition to the actual fighting strength of the navy, instantly ready for war, is only obtained by extracting from the whole navy greater exertion, longer hours, and more work than was thought necessary ten or even three years ago. This, coupled with the cessation of foreign battleship-building for eighteen months, is the true reason why a stronger navy at a smaller cost is possible at the present time.

REGIMENT OF GIANTS.

Famous Corps Did Good Service at Kingston During Earthquake.

Policemen as a rule think they are some inches, but they ought to see the members of the Royal West Indian Regiment who were doing police duty in Kingston, Jamaica, during the earthquake. Many of these men are three inches above six feet, and built like giants. All are negroes, the flower of the dusky population, being selected by the British Government for this famous corps of colonial troops. It is more than a fine looking body of men, it is imposing. Every member of it feels pride in every inch from heel to helmet. As they swung down from their barracks, lapped in the hills, twelve hundred strong, towering like Gullivers above the little brown men, the small soldiers and other citizens of the town, they seem like house warriors of another age—colossal, overpowering, devoid of fear.

And they do more than look the part. Their officers tell great tales of their deeds of strength, bravery and endurance in Africa and in other hard stations where they showed in deeds done for old England's glory, without thought of self.

Thus is a more peaceful mission in Jamaica. Here they rest in the cool hills, to be called in great emergencies to police the town, as on earthquake time. One of their duties was to stand at the depots where food was given out, to preserve order. The passing of the poor through the tunnel in passages from street to counter was terrific. One of these West Indian giants in uniform had but to raise his hand and the half-starved mob in sight of food stood still, and perfect order and quiet reigned, without words or even shadow of weapons.

Ghosts Explained.

Telepathy, ghosts, and other occult phenomena were explained on a natural basis by Dr. Bernard Hollander at the London Lyceum Club recently.

Nobody denies misery, whether objective or not—we do not know, said the lecturer, that man suffers hideous mental agonies. That such misery could be improved by experiments in supernatural powers, who in a perfectly darkened room can see a glow at the fingertips of the hypnotiser, and sensitive objects rubbed by the latter acquire a luminously strong enough to make their surroundings visible.

Supposing a person to be the victim of such play, his mind-misery will be unbearable almost, and in projecting it with such a force that it will echo in the room or place in which he dwells his life, if, then, some person of a sensitive nature, and not pre-occupied, pass through that room, his brain may receive such a stimulus as to engender some more or less defined image, which will appear real to him, and the vision of a "ghost" will be the result.

The same theory, said Dr. Hollander, makes it possible that sensitive subjects when in the hypnotic state, and holding an object belonging to the dead or the living, or being in a room once inhabited by them, may have visions of and be able to describe them.

Sir Redvers Buller's Story.

Sir Redvers Buller is a strong advocate of temperance. He tells of a young fellow who was left a legacy which made him a drunkard all his life. A friend of his, by way of warning, read him a spontaneous combustion story—a story of a man so saturated with liquor that once, when he went to blow out a candle, his breath took fire from the flame, and he was burnt to death. At the end of his story the speaker looked at the reprobate young man, and said solemnly—"There, Jim, let that be a warning to you." "It will," replied Jim, in an awed voice. "I'll never blow out a candle again as long as I live!"

The China Hall Company.

Moths and Butterflies.

Some moths look very much like butterflies, but there are two ways in which you can always tell the one from the other. Each has little slender feelers growing from the head, but the butterfly's feelers, or antennae, as they are called, have knobs on the ends. The antennae of the moth sometimes have tiny feathers on them and sometimes little spires, but thy are never knobbed. Then, too, in alighting the butterfly always holds her wings erect, while the moth's droop or are nearly flat.

No Longer Worried.

"I thought," said the visitor, "I'd drop in and tell you what your hair restorer did for a friend of mine. When he started to using your elixir there were only a few hairs on his head, but now it's completely covered."

"Indeed?" explained the patent medicine man.

"Yes; by six feet of earth."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Tamed the Box Office Man.

A theater box office man whose seats were all sold days ahead was turning away disappointed patrons more than gruffly when a man who had watched the process with glowing ire reached the window. "Selling any more seats this season?" he began. The ticket seller answered with a stare. The question, quietly but firmly repeated, finally received an affirmative answer. "Give me two." "When?" growled the seller, recovering. "Any time," said the man. The seller was almost too crushed to ask "Where?" "Anywhere," replied the man. "How much?" whispered the seller, his voice deserting him. "Any price," said the man. The tickets were transferred in an awed silence, and the line of purchasers that had overheard smiled benevolently at the noticeably tamed man in the cage.

Antiquity of Proverbs.

Proverbs existed long before books. In the earliest times they served as the unwritten language of morality and have been passed down through the generations. In Africa there are numerous quaint proverbs. Among them are: "He who dives on dry land will scarify his face," "Two people cannot sit down upon the point of the same thorn at the same time." In the Transvaal the proverb, "Beware of a silent man; he has a brass band in his mouth," is often heard.

Holmes on Shelley.

Shelley vaporized everything in his glowing crucible, but there was gold at the bottom of it. When I look at him spreading the starry wings of his fancy over his chaotic philosophy he seems like a seraph hovering over the unfathomable chasm, whose blackness is the abode of demons.—"Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

"No!"

"Why?"

"Because I not only do not care for you, but I despise and distrust you."

"Then," he said, "I will be candid with you. I intend you to marry me. I have intended it for a long time. I am not going down on my knees to ask you to do it. That is not my way. But if you drive me to it I will make your brother Maurice go down on his knees and beg you to marry me."

"I don't think that you will do that," answered the girl steadily. "Whatever your power over Maurice may be, it is not strong enough for that. You overrate it."

"Suppose," he said in a low, hissing voice, "that I possess knowledge that I have only to mention to one or two people to make this place too hot for Maurice Gordon. If he escaped the fury of the natives it would be difficult to know where he could go. England would be too hot for him. They wouldn't have him there. I could see to that. He would be a ruined man, an outcast, execrated by all the civilized world."

"What is your knowledge?" asked Jocelyn in a coldly measured voice.

"If you will have it, your brother, Maurice Gordon, is a slave trader."

She drew back as she might have done from some unclean animal. She knew that he was not telling the truth. There might be extenuating circumstances. The real truth might have quite a different sound, spoken in different words, but there was enough of the truth in it as Victor Durnovo placed it before her to condemn Maurice before the world.

"Now will you marry me?" he sneered.

"Supposing," said Jocelyn, "for one moment that there was a grain of truth in your fabrication, who would believe you? Who on this coast would take your word against the word of an English gentleman? Even if the whole story were true, which it is not, could you prove it? You are a liar as well as a coward and traitor! Do you think that the very servants in the stable would believe you? Do you think that the incident of the smallpox at Msala is forgotten? Do you think that all Loango, even to the boatmen on the beach, ignores the fact that you are here in Loango now because you are afraid to go through a savage country to the simiacine plateau, as you are pledged to do? You were afraid of the smallpox once. There is something else that you are afraid of now. I do not know what it is, but I will find out. Coward! Go! Leave the house at once, before I call in the stable boys to turn you out, and never dare to speak to me again!"

He heard her close the window after him as he walked away beneath the trees.

Jocelyn went out by the open window, and presently Nala came grinning toward her. He was evidently very much pleased with himself—held himself erect and squinted more violently than usual.

"I have been to Msala," he said, with considerable dignity of manner.

Nala squatted on the chunam floor and proceeded to unfold a leaf. The operation took some time. Within the outer covering there was a second envelope of paper, likewise secured by a string. Finally the man produced a small note, which showed signs of having been read more than once. This he handed to Jocelyn with an absurd air of importance.

She opened the paper and read:

To Marie, at Msala.—Send at once to Mr. Durnovo, informing him that the tribes have risen and are rapidly surrounding the plateau. He must return here at once with as large an armed force as he can raise, but the most important consideration is time. He must not wait for men from elsewhere, but must pick up as many as he can in Loango and on the way up to Msala. I reckon that we can hold out for three months without outside assistance, but after that period we shall be forced to surrender or try to cut our way through without the simiacine. With a larger force we could beat back the tribes and establish our hold on the plateau by force of arms. This must be forwarded to Mr. Durnovo at once, wherever he is. The letter is in duplicate, sent by two good messengers, who go by different routes.

JOHN MEREDITH.

When Jocelyn looked up, dry lipped, breathless, Nala was standing before her, beaming with self importance.

"Who gave you this?"

"Marie, at Msala."

"Who is she?"

"Oh, Mr. Durnovo's woman at Msala. She keeps his house."

"But this letter is for Mr. Durnovo!" cried Jocelyn, whose fear made her unreasonably angry. "Why has he not had it?"

Nala came nearer, with upraised forefinger and explanatory palm.

"Marie tell me," he said, "that Mr. Meredith sent two letters. Marie give Mr. Durnovo one. This—other letter."

Jocelyn Gordon rose to the occasion.

"Can you go," she said after a moment's thought, "to St. Paul de Loanda for me, at once—now?"

"Oh, yes," with a sigh.

Already Jocelyn was writing something on a sheet of paper.

"Take this," she said, "to the telegraph office at St. Paul de Loanda and send it off at once. Here is money. You understand? I will pay you when you bring back the receipt. If you have been very quick I will pay you well."

That same evening a second messenger started northward after Maurice Gordon with a letter telling him to come back at once to Loango.

Guy Oscard was dining alone in Russell square when a telegram was handed to him. He opened it and read:

Meredith surrounded and in danger. Durnovo false. Come at once.

JOCELYN GORDON.

In due time Guy Oscard landed on the beach at Loanda. He had the telegram still in his pocket, and he went, not to Maurice Gordon's office, but to the bungalow.

Jocelyn greeted him with a little inarticulate cry of joy.

"I did not think that you could possibly be here so soon," she said.

"What news have you?" he asked, without pausing to explain. He was one of those men who are silenced by an unlimited capacity for prompt action.

"That," she replied, handing him the note written by Jack Meredith to Marie at Msala.

Guy Oscard read it carefully.

"Dated seven weeks last Monday; nearly two months ago," he muttered half to himself.

"But you will go?" she said, and something in her voice startled him.

"Of course I will go," he replied. He looked down into her face with a vague question in his quiet eyes, and who knows what he saw there? Perhaps she was off her guard. Perhaps she read this man aright and did not care.

With a certain slow hesitation he laid his hand on her arm. There was something almost paternal in his manner which was in keeping with his stature.

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. CROMWELL'S HORSES.

An Accident That Befell the Protector in Hyde Park.

"As Cromwell rose in power and rank his love of horses began to be more conspicuous," says a writer in Blackwood's. "When he started from London in 1649 to reconquer Ireland he went forth in that state and equipage as the like hath hardly been seen, himself in a coach with six gallant Flanders mares, reddish gray." In 1655, when the Spanish ambassador took his leave of the lord protector, Cromwell sent him "his own coach of six white horses" to convey him to and from Whitehall. "Certain it is," adds the narrator, "that none of the English kings had ever any such."

The protector was not much of a whip, however. In 1654 the Count of Oldenburg sent Cromwell a present of six horses, and the protector's anxiety to make trial of their quality led to his well known adventure in Hyde park. On Friday, Sept. 29, he went with Secretary Thurloe and a few of his gentlemen to take air in the park, ordered the six horses to be harnessed to his coach, put Thurloe inside of it and undertook to drive himself. "His highness," said a letter from the Dutch ambassador, "drove pretty handsomely for some time, but at last, provoking three horses too much with the whip, they grew unruly, whereby his highness was flung out of the coach box upon the ground. His foot getting fast in the tackling, he was carried away a good while in that posture, but at last he got his foot clear and so came to escape. He was presently brought home and let blood and after one rest taken is now well again. The secretary, being hurt on his ankle with leaping out of the coach, hath been forced to keep his chamber hitherto and been unfit for any business."

The royalist Scrogys, afterward chief justice, writing of this incident, hoped that the next fall would be from a cart hinting at the gallows. As to Cromwell's views on the burning question of horse racing it is difficult to arrive at a positive conclusion. His constant aim was to possess as many good horses as he could afford. Whether he entered his horses for races or had the satisfaction of owning a winner history does not say.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The only thing some people always have ready is an excuse.

Almost any one can be induced to lie if you ask enough questions.

The better you behave the better you get along. It's old, but it's true.

A man nobody can quarrel with has the life problem reasonably well solved.

Lack of opportunity has to stand as an excuse for a lot of general shiftlessness.

The trouble with some people lies in the fact that they consider their faults their misfortunes.

Are you among those who treat their new acquaintances better than they treat their old friends?

If a man has plenty of money to back up a lot of fool notions, people call him eccentric, but if he only has the notions he is a crank.

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 32. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 30 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 80 acres of J. B. 32 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 6 inch nicolite, 18 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1233-493-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

Agility of Hares and Rabbits.

Interesting figures on the relative agility of hares and rabbits are given in a volume by J. G. Millais. "When running at ease," he says, "the length of the hare's stride is about four feet, but under conditions of fear its leaps extend to ten and twelve feet, while some authors claim that it can jump ten ditches twenty to twenty-five feet in width. Perpendicularly a hare can jump on to a five foot wall, but seems to be nonplused by one about six feet. The stride of the rabbit is about two feet. When necessary it can make leaps of six or seven feet horizontally. About three feet is the highest that a rabbit can attain to even when helped by the asperities of a stone wall." Mr. Millais tells how rabbits swim—when compelled to: "They swim with the head held as high as possible, while the hocks of the hind legs appear above the element at each stroke. The shoulders and front part of the body are buried beneath the water, while the rump and tail are high and dry."

Tyranny of Clothes.

Place a man in a silk hat and frock coat and transport him to a farmyard. Agricultural pursuits may be the one passion of his life, but clad in these garments he feels in such surroundings miserable, out of place, essentially urban. Clothe him, conversely, in flannels or knickers and place him in a church, and it is utterly impossible for him to assume a fittingly devotional frame of mind. Unlimited autocracy itself cannot impose such tyrannies on the subject. Civilization is the slave of its clothes, and there is no prospect of freedom. — London Graphic.

Her Reasoning.

Wife (at the costumer's)—Which shall I have—this coat at 40 marks or that one at 70? Husband—I have only 40 marks with me. Wife—Oh, well, then, we'll buy the seventy mark coat on credit, and then you can buy me a hat with the 40 marks.

Crushed.

"If I could only die and leave you well off," he said after they had had their first quarrel, "I would be glad to go."

"How," she cruelly asked, "could you die and leave me otherwise than well off?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Bunkoed.

The elephant trumpeted loudly.

"What's the trouble?" asked the chimpanzee.

"Somebody's worked the shell game on me," replied the pachyderm as he threw away the bag of empty peanut shells which had just been handed to him.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.

We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5300 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assayays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

PIMPLES

Facial Blemishes, Blackheads, Eruptions.

They Have One Common Cause An Impure Condition of the Blood.

Make the blood normal and you cure the pimples.

But unless elimination is perfect the blood can't be normal, can't be anything but foul.

In elimination nothing plays a more important part than the skin, and if it gets too much work it becomes diseased, and pimples, blotches and eruptions are the result.

Not a bit of use to try external applications. The fountain of life, the blood, must be purified.

More than that, the blood must be supplied with the elements necessary to furnish the organs with increased power to do their work.

Ferrozone supplies exactly these constituents, and it does more.

It stimulates through the nervous system all the eliminative functions of the body.

By stimulating the kidneys and liver the skin is relieved of an excessive work, and it soon resumes its normal mode of action.

Ferrozone destroys the poisons in the blood, gives it new and rich material through the thorough digestion of food.

The skin resumes its normal, rich color.

Every vestige of blotch, pimple or eruption then disappears.

You see then that Ferrozone is not only a blood purifier, but a blood fortifier, and when your blood is pure and strong, not only will the skin be freed from blemishes and pimples, but the whole body will be rejuvenated and fortified, and given the power of endurance, viz. the natural outcome of health. Ferrozone is sold by all dealers in 50c. boxes.

Lady Watches a Passing Car

Taking of the alleged inconsistency of women, yesterday afternoon a good example was seen at the corner of George and Simcoe streets. A lady, with a small child was about to cross George street. She saw a southbound car approaching, and taking the child's hand in one of her own and her skirts in the other fairly flew across the street narrowly escaping a collision with the car. When the car had passed by, after scolding the little one for the danger they had run, the lady stood by, an approximate count fully five minutes watching the car speed on its way.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. Major, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. They were unattended. The bride was becomingly attired in a travelling gown of blue.

After the nuptials a wedding dejeuner was partaken of at the home of the bride's parents. Numerous friends will join in wishing Mr. Little and his bride every happiness and prosperity in their future home in Toronto.

Mr. Regan at C.L.A. Meeting

Mr. A. Regan, who is a member of the C.L.A. council, will be in attendance tonight in Toronto, when the preliminary grouping of the clubs will be settled, subject to change at the final grouping, which will be made about two weeks' hence. It is expected that the Peterborough intermediates will be grouped with the Toronto Junction Shamrocks, Young Torontos, and Maitlands, the new north end team in Toronto.

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them Remedies of Known Composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same. From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, over-worked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians.

As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

MISS SADIE HOLMES IS NOW A DENTIST

By Vote of 44 to 35 in Non-Partizan Division of the Ontario Legislature---The Cabinet Was Not a Unit.

Toronto, April 12.—With the Prime Minister the Provincial Treasurer, the ministers of public works and agriculture voting against the attorney-general, the provincial secretary, and the ministers without portfolio, the bill to license Miss Sadie Holmes to practice dentistry at Woodstock was given its third reading at the Legislature yesterday morning. The vote was on the general principle of making professional people by Act of Parliament.

The Opposition was likewise divided against itself. Among the leaders, Mr. McKay voted in favor of the bill, and against his colleagues. The amendment was to give the bill a six months' hoist was lost on the standing vote of the House, 44 to 35.

MOVED THE HOIST.

Mr. Downey, of South Wellington, on behalf of Mr. Craig of East Wellington, moved the six months' hoist.

Prime Minister Whitney said that personally, he held the opinion that, except under extraordinary circumstances, no bill of this kind should be allowed to pass. So far as the members of the Government were concerned, they had an open mind on the subject. It was not a matter of Government policy.

"I am pleased to note the disposition of the House to wake up on this subject," said the Premier.

UNFAIR TO GRADUATES.

Mr. May, of Ottawa, also opposed the bill. He thought it was unfair to people who had spent years in college that anybody should be railroaded into a profession without going through the mill and the grind.

Mr. Studholme, East Hamilton, admitted a change of front on the question. (When the matter was brought before the committee, he was rather in favor of the bill.

The member from Hamilton had recalled several things since the bill went through the committee stage. One of these was that it had cost him considerable money to send his own children through college. In addition to this, three of his constituents who are of the dentist profession have reminded him of his duty to protect them.

DEFENDED THE LADY.

Like a gallant knight of old, Mr. Dunlop of North Renfrew, rose to the defence of the lady and her bill. He pointed out that the bill as passed by the committee was a compromise. The lady would have to pass her examinations before getting the degree. The bill simply licensed her to practice for two years in the meantime—without her diploma. Then she must pass her examinations.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

Sarcastic references were contained in a letter read by Mr. Pratt, South Norfolk, from a lady of his constituency. This lady said she had "watched her father pulling teeth," and thought she might as well apply to be made a dentist on that slim qualification.

Mr. Lucas, chairman of the Private Bills Committee, defended the course of the committee, and Mr. Donald Sutherland, South Oxford, reiterated his arguments made before the committee in favor of the bill.

Mr. McKay, North Grey, also put in an earnest plea for the lady, whose application, he said, was endorsed by all the people with whom she would work.

Mr. Harcourt, Monck: "My honorable friend on my right, Mr. McKay, speaks warmly, as he always does when he speaks from the heart." (Laughter.)

Mr. Harcourt said there was no precedent for the course the Private Bills Committee desired the House to take.

The former minister of education, said that one privilege which should actuate the House was the maintenance of Ontario's high standard of education.

SAM CLARKE, THE JOKER.

"I am surprised," declared Mr. Clarke, Northumberland, the chronic joker of the House, "that the older the members get their hearts show more evidence of whitening.

This legislature has made doctors, lawyers, veterinaries, who could not be broadminded, liberal-minded enough to make a lady dentist, when the applicant was really qualified for it.

"I understand," said Mr. Clarke, "that the young lady has already acted up her office, on the strength of the decision of the Private Bills Committee, I say it would be inhuman, unjust, for the House to turn down the bill at the present time."

GAMEY TALKS.

Mr. Gamey called the members' attention to the fact that there had been fourteen applications for persons for dentists' licenses from the House. Seven of these had been rejected. He ventured to say that most of these had less qualifications than the lady who had applied—and the public had not suffered generally.

The member for North Toronto, Mr. McNaught, said he would oppose the bill.

Mr. Downey declared that sentiment had carried the bill through committee.

The attorney-general said he intended to support the committee as a matter of principle, not being aware of the merits of the particular case.

"BLUE DEVILS"

Get Rid of Indigestion and Things Will Look Bright and Joyous.

Even in the present era of prosperity and good times everything appears black to those people who are suffering wretchedly from some form of indigestion. Where digestion is quick, complete and easy there is a joyous and hopeful outlook, but indigestion causes depression.

The want of a safe, effective cure for sick headache, indigestion and stomach troubles, was always felt until the prescription known as Mi-o-na stomach tablets was put up in popular form and proved its invariable success in the many forms of indigestion.

After a few days use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets the headache, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, nervousness, sleeplessness, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach—will disappear and perfect digestion and a good skin will show that the vital machinery is once more running smoothly.

Mi-o-na is to be taken before each meal and it will stimulate the secretive and digestive juices and strengthen the whole of the digestive system so that the unpleasant full feeling will be absent and indigestion prevented.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c box of Mi-o-na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c.

Sanitary Inspector Geo. Ball's Duties

Yesterday a Times representative interviewed Sanitary Inspector Geo. Ball, and asked him if it were true, as rumored in some quarters that he will be asked to assist the police during the absence, by illness, of P. C. McGinty. Mr. Ball noted that whilst the bylaw appointing him sanitary inspector does carry a clause to the effect that his duties shall include assisting the police in an emergency, this clause was only left in the bylaw by an oversight. In any case the appointment of the police rests with the commissioners not with the aldermen who appointed him sanitary inspector.

It would be absolutely impossible for Mr. Ball to perform the dual functions of sanitary inspector and policeman as his duties in the former position involve his whole time. For instance Mr. Ball yesterday before dinner time covered over six miles on a tour of inspection, and almost as much during the afternoon. His route this morning covers from a trip from the extreme west, including the south and the far eastern limits of the city, inspecting the various slaughter houses. He says that people often send in most unreasonable requests to have yards cleaned that are still frozen solid. With such duties to perform it is ridiculous to consider any "side lines" added to his now efficiently performed duties.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Gathered From the Local Police Station.

At yesterday's police court a G.T.R. conductor named Dubois, was charged with having obstructed Charlotte street for more than the legal time of five minutes. Mr. H. Fowler, a street car conductor, swore he had timed by his watch the period during which Charlotte street was blocked by a freight train. It was 6 1-2 minutes, during which time the gates were down. Several of the train hands testified to the train only being across the street for two or three minutes.

The G.T.R. operator produced his report to the despatcher at Lindsay, showing the time of arrival of Dubois' train. He did not time how long Charlotte streets was blocked but thought less than five minutes.

The magistrate said as there was such a clash in the evidence he could not make a conviction but warned the conductor he would be watched hereafter.

Samuel Kennedy was called but not present. His wife had laid an information charging him with assault. She remarked, when Sam did not show up, "I guess he has skipped out."

A SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

GRAND PROGRAM BY NOTED ARTISTS.

Entertainment in St. Peter's Hall Enjoyed by Large Crowd.

Last night the fine hall of the new St. Peter's school was comfortably filled with an appreciative audience, who came to hear the fine program rendered under auspices of Peterborough's skilled musician, Mrs. W. J. Morrow. The concert was under the patronage of some of the best known ladies, of the city, viz., Mesdames, (Hon.) J. R. Stratton, O'Sullivan, W. J. Hollywood, R. R. Hall, A. Elliott, Alex. Grant, Standly Pentland, (Rev.) J. G. Potter, A. G. Loch, T. H. G. Dee, D. O'Connell, J. Mahoney, (Dr.) McNulty, Jas. Lynch, T. F. Matthews, H. LeBrun, H. Phelan, R. A. Morrow, B. Morrow, Dean, Aaron Cox, J. Crane, R. Neill, R. F. McWilliams, W. Leeds, Jas. Kendry, E. S. Davidson.

St. Peter's Hall, which is reached by way of the main entrance of the fine new Separate school, is a credit both to the school trustees and to the city. It is commodious and could be made to accommodate an audience of possibly 800 people. The walls are plain white relieved by a three-foot high wainscoting of varnished wood, and well lighted by electric lamps. The chairs are provided with tip back seats to allow the storing away of one's hat. The stage, of modern construction, is provided with a pretty drop curtain, surrounded by multi-colored lamps. Ventilation is provided by a dome shaped air shaft. Several of the men in last night's audience appeared in full dress, and taken altogether Mrs. Morrow's enterprise was rewarded by an evident and tangible appreciation.

THE PROGRAM.

The program of last night was of good length and better quality. Mr. Gilbert Shorter the celebrated English dramatist and reciter displayed a wide versatility dis-playing the gauge from humorous to exceedingly pathetic were delivered in a well modulated and highly trained voice, markedly English in accent. Madame Irvine Adams in her piano solo displayed the possession of a sympathetic touch, coupled with finished execution. Miss Mollie Young, in sweet voice gave, "In the Chimney Corner," with good effect, whilst Mrs. Morrow played the accompaniments in her inimitable style. "Little Beryl," a charming real child actress, of pretty face and grace for actions, gave several recitations that were well received. The music accompanying Beryl's recitations is the composition of Madame Adams. Mrs. (Dr.) Archer in a contralto voice of broad compass was particularly effective in "Happy Songs."

In "King Robert of Sicily," by Longfellow, Mr. Shorter, although handicapped by the loss of the costume he usually wears, gave a most dramatic and powerful interpretation of those strong lines. Madam Adams accompanying him in most appropriate music. This was followed by "Deep in the Mine," sung in a deep mellow voice by Mr. John King, who had to reappear in an encore. Miss Levina Hallighen, who rendered the "Jewel Song" from Faust has a clear bell like soaring voice which displays careful training, particularly in the high notes and trills; the audience insisted on an encore.

Rev. Father McCoil before the last part of program was put on, addressed the audience thanking them, to Mrs. Morrow's name for their large attendance. He called attention to the new hall and assured those present that all entertainments held in this hall would be of equally high character. The rev. gentleman also thanked Mr. Shorter and Madam Adams for their enjoyable entertainment, saying that little Beryl is "A perfect wonder."

The entertainment concluded with 'God Save the King."

A Successful Year in Life Insurance

Splendid Progress Made by Royal-Victoria Life Assurance Co.

The annual meeting of the Royal-Victoria Life Insurance Company, held in Montreal on March 27th, demonstrated that this progressive and secure company last year added greatly to their former prestige, and the Directors' Report was most satisfactory both to policyholders and shareholders.

During the year the company wrote up $640,175 of new business, out of a total of $962,675 applied for, thus showing the conservative care taken to promote policyholders' interests, as well as displaying a strenuous reaching for increased business. Whilst the business of the past year was not quite as large as that of the year preceding, the well known unsettled state of the insurance world considered, last year's business was practically better.

One feature of last year's management of the Royal-Victoria Company was a reduction of 7-1-2 per cent in expenses over those of the year before. The cash income from premiums and interest amounted to $470,833.23, being despite the troubled state of matters appertaining to insurance, an increase of $10,515 over the preceding year. The ledger assets increased during last year to the sum of $46,619, which now brings the total security to policyholders to $1,333,456. During the past year $56,454 was paid for death claims, including $6,500 which was shown as a liability in the former annual statement; $5,364 was paid for annuities and $3,648 in cash surrender values. Loans on stocks and bonds at December 31st amounted to $150,600, an increase of $40,000, the company holding as collateral security gilt-edged stocks and bonds worth $180,000. $40,175 was loaned to their holders on policies, an increase of $8,868, whilst there was $188 of reserve against each $100 of policy loans.

Taken as a whole, the record of the Royal-Victoria Life Insurance Company is one that reflects great credit upon its directorate and one which is calculated not only to inspire faith and credit in the minds of all its policyholders, but to effectually raise the company above all possible suspicion during the present troublous state of the insurance market.

Mr. Wrighton Will Retire from Business

Dean of the Grocery World of Peterboro to Take Rest.

One of, if not the oldest merchants, as regards years in business in this city, in the person of Mr. W. H. Wrighton, grocer, 421 George St., after a semi-centenary in trade is going to retire and take life easy.

Mr. Wrighton first entered the grocery business in March, 1857, in the old American Hotel block, which stood at the corner of Brock and George streets in those days.

About thirty years ago Mr. Wrighton removed to his present stand. He is now in his 75th year and feels that he has earned a well-deserved rest.

In conjunction with the grocery trade, Mr. Wrighton is an expert in furs in pelts, and has handled large quantities of such goods. He has also been a prominent figure on the Peterborough Chinese Board. He bought for Agens & Co. of Montreal, and other firms, retiring a few years ago. His store which belongs to Mrs. Pearse, will after his tenure them in July next, be leased by a new tenant.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"When the Harvest Days are Over."

Mr. Neil Twomey presented the comedy-drama, "When the Harvest Days are Over," at the Grand Opera house last night. The piece is an American rural story, affording special opportunities for the comedy of Felix Haney, who admirably sustains his character of a simple good natured country swain. As Hez Hutkins, Felix Haney is very acceptable, and he keeps the house alive with his humor. Neil Twomey as Robert Travers, the hero of the peice has a good conception of his character; his delivery is splendidly clear and effective, and his action suited to this part. The remainder of the cast gives good balance to the leads.

Will the Grand Trunk Use Electric Power?

Toronto, April 11.—The difficulty that has arisen in connection with the expropriation of the Electric Power Company's plant by the City of Toronto and the holding up of the company's application to the Ontario Legislature for power to increase its capital has caused a lot of talk. The effort of the Niagara Power Company and other corporations to secure long contracts at cheap rates has been watched with interest by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. The Government officials say that matters are in better shape now than they ever were, and that no contracts of any account are being made with the power companies by consumers of power. Contracts will be ready in a day or so and forwarded to the municipalities where the bylaws have been passed, so that contracts for power may be made at once.

The Hydro-Electric Commission and Government have been working along quietly and negotiations have been under way for some time with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, who will be very large consumers of power. It is understood that the railway anticipates the adoption of electricity as motive power in the near future between Toronto and Niagara Falls and all contiguous points that can be conveniently served.

To Copy Canada

London, April 11.—In the House of Commons Colonel Herbert, defending Mr. Haldane's national army scheme said; We are going back, not to feudalism, but to the principles which once underlay the whole military system of the colonies. It has been said it is impossible to voice under one system all volunteers unless we had compulsion. The difficulty has been got over in Canada, where each class of the community performed training in the way best suited to their ordinary occupations. Many of his own predecessors in Canada urged dependence on the English principle of the permanent staff, but he received the impression it was against the feeling of the people to introduce this permanent element. He took the view that every unit should maintain itself in every particular. It was the only way esprit de corps could be maintained. They, therefore, were trying no new experiment in this bill.

NO VERDICT YET IN THE THAW CASE

Up to a Late Hour Last Night the Jury Had Failed to Agree---Many Rumors Were Prevalent.

Up to an early hour this morning sure of the young woman.

The jury in the Thaw murder trial had not reached a verdict; and many rumors are rife as to the possible outcome of their long review-ing of the mass of evidence before them.

New York, April 12.—Jerome is quoted as saying the jury stands six for murder in first degree, four for acquittal, two black.

New York, April 11.—"I will be a free man today," was what Harry Thaw said to his keepers when he was called in his cell before breakfast.

While dressing Thaw was cheered by a report that during the night the jury had stood ten to two for acquittal, and that a verdict of acquittal was expected before court convened.

The fact that the jury was taken to breakfast an hour earlier than expected led to a report that they had reached a verdict on a ballot taken just before seven o'clock.

Several of the jurymen were smiling and jovial although they had been sitting up all night, and this was taken to indicate that they had done nothing as depressing or serious as convicting a man.

It was a night of worry and uncertainty which the Thaw family spent. Especially was this true of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. Almost the minute the case had been given to the jury last night the child wife of the prisoner seemed to be a deserted, lonesome wanderer.

From the time the case went to the jury until Lawyer Dan O'Reilly took her to dinner at a restaurant near the building young Mrs. Thaw seemed on the verge of hysteria. She wept bitterly.

Mr. O'Reilly, seeing her plight, took her, hurried her out into the brisk air, escorted her to the restaurant, and there, while they ate, he restored the courage and composure.

The rest of the family returned to the hotel Lorraine for dinner, where they dined in their private apartments. They went back to the court room later and remained until after eleven o'clock, when Justice Fitzgerald ordered the jury locked up for the night.

CAME IN AUTOMOBILES.

The side door of the court room was opened by Captain Lynch of the court squad at 10.30 o'clock and counsel and reporters were admitted. The judge arrived a few minutes later and went to his private room adjoining the court.

The entire Thaw family arrived at 10.20. They came in automobiles. Mrs. Thaw seemed looked extremely well, but there were traces of anxiety in the pale face of young Mrs. Thaw.

Edward Thaw was approached by a reporter, and asked if he cared to make a statement. Thaw threw back his elbow, striking the reporter in the chest. He then walked on without a word.

THAW ARRIVES.

Thaw was brought over the Bridge of Sighs and with his sheriff guard was taken to a room adjoining the court. The Thaw family conversed in a room next to this one.

District Attorney Jerome arrived at 10.30, and with his assistant, Mr. Garvan, talked earnestly.

The jury was brought in at 10.55 a. m., and Justice Fitzgerald ascended the bench shortly after.

REVIEW COHEN'S TESTIMONY.

After being in the jury room for a few minutes the jury returned and asked that the testimony of Meyer Cohen, one of the eye witnesses to the shooting, be read to them. Justice Fitzgerald ordered Stenographer Moynahan to read from his notes and Cohen's testimony in full was read.

When court opened the clerk, called, "Harry K. Thaw to the bar."

Thaw entered with a large bundle of newspapers under his arm. Justice Fitzgerald said; "I have received from the jury a request for some exhibits."

"I have no objection to you having them," said Jerome.

Bonilla Ready to Renew the War

Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, April 11. —After the battle of Namasique, in which the forces of Honduras were defeated by the Nicaraguans, President Bonilla withdrew and occupied Amapala, which place is fortified and defended by a strong force of Hondurans.

President Bonilla's forces occupy all the cities and towns on the north coast of Honduras except Trujillo, and the principal ports of the republic, Amapala and Puerto Cortez. The Honduran forces also occupy the railroad and the departments west of Comayagua, containing the principal fighting population of Honduras. President Bonilla's line of defense extends from Amapala along the frontier of Salvador, thence north to San Pedro Sula and Puerto Cortez. He will establish his new capital at Comayagua.

Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, was considerably weakened by forces being sent to Generals Barahona and Christmas, who were defeated after eight days' fighting at Namasique, and a mutiny occurred in the garrison at the capital. President Bonilla sent instructions from Amapala authorizing General Saturnine Medal to evacuate Tegucigalpa if he was unable to defend it and save the city from bombardment and looting. The city was evacuated.

The forces of President Bonilla and General Medal are now uniting with the army of President Figueroa of Salvador on the frontier, where the combined armies are being massed for continuing the war.

General Solomon Ordonez, the Honduran minister of war, arrived at Puerto Cortez yesterday and has taken command of the coast defenses.

THE RAILROADS UNPREPARED

There are bitter complaints of the inability of the American railroads to handle the freight that is pressed upon them. Railroad men have many explanations. Some of them say the engine and car works are unable to fill the orders for rolling stock that have been given them. Others talk of the need of more trackage and better terminal facilities.

It is interesting to observe that the conditions complained of by American shippers exists in other countries. They are found in England. A correspondent of the London Times says: "So inadequate are the resources of some of the English railway companies that many collieries are losing time, the steel works are being shut down in the Midlands, notwithstanding heavy order books, because the railway companies are unable to move the output from the pits or to supply the furnaces with fuel." Matters are not quite so bad as that in the United States. The officers of the overworked English roads say the locomotive plants cannot provide the additional engines that are needed.

Only a short time ago there was serious traffic congestion on the Italian roads. These roads are partly operated by the government, which helps to explain their inability to handle freight satisfactorily, but the French lines, which are operated by private companies, were also unable to meet the demands of the shippers.

In view of all the facts it must be admitted that the men who manage the American railroads are not the only sinners. They seem to have been to a certain extent the victims of conditions which obtain in both Europe and the United States. There as well as here there has been a rapid expansion of manufacturing energy which has suddenly outrun the carrying capacity of the railroads. That there has been great expansion in this country is proved by the increased imports of materials for use in manufacturing and by the increase in the exports of finished goods.

In a measure the American railroad men are to blame for not foreseeing the growth of manufacturing, which makes freight, and not making arrangements to take care of that freight. They ought to have seen that the productive industry of the country was under a full head of steam. But the men who control the railroad systems of England, France and Italy were blind to what the manufacturers of those countries were doing, and were taken unawares like their American brethren. Perhaps there will be more foresight hereafter on both sides of the Atlantic. —(Chicago Tribune, April 1, 1907.)

LAMA WAS KIND TO HIM

Calcutta, April 10.—Sven Hedin, the Swedish explorer, has succeeded in getting through a report in which he says under a Shigatse date line:

"The country between the Ngangtse-tso and the Brahmaputra is one of the most interesting portions of Thibet. The plateau stretching to the south, hitherto unknown, is one of the highest on earth. The watershed between the Ngangtse-tso and the Brahmaputra is situated further north than has been believed, and the country consists of the most complicated labyrinth of ranges and ramifications of rivers. Big rivers flow from this district to the Brahmaputra. At Shigatse there are great villages, with temples and gardens low down on the north side of the river.'

From Stanagbo the explorer traveled by boat. The river was full of floating ice, and there was a constant stream of boats with pilgrims on their way to the festival at Tashi Lempo. Dr. Sven met with a very hearty welcome. The Tashi Lama who was there overwhelmed him with kindness, giving him presents of caravans and provisions and allowing him to sketch and photograph everywhere. He describes the Tashi Lama as a most wonderful and sympathetic man.

Cartagena, April 11. — The royal meeting terminated yesterday. The British squadron escorting the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, with King Edward and Queen Alexandria on board, departed early yesterday morning, and King Alfonso and the Dowager Queen Christina later left Cartagena for Madrid. The Kings conferred absolutely alone for over an hour previous to separation, and it is assumed they went over the question for the discussion of which the meeting was arranged.

The system must be relieved of its burden, if you are to enjoy a happy, healthy summer.

Physicians who have examined the formula of Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills say no medicine could be better.

Whether ill or not, thousands rely on Dr Hamilton's Pills which are truly marvelous in preventing debility and sickness.

Begin Dr. Hamilton's Pills without delay. You'll feel stronger, eat better, digest better, sleep sounder, and gain more in weight.

Mr. Ed. Maynard, an old resident of New Westminster, B.C., writes; "I don't say Dr. Hamilton's Pills will cure everything, but they made a quick job of building up my run-down system. I had kidney disease and constipation and was wholly unfitted for work. Pains shot through my limbs and lodged in my back. Headaches often made me desperate. I had no appetite, an awful color, and felt despondent. Sometimes I was a little rheumatic. After a few days I began to mend, and kept up Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I was restored to my present tip-top condition."

Can you afford to miss the benefit of this marvel-working medicine. Think of it. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from N. C. Poison and Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

WOMEN AND NEWSPAPERS

Woman, as everybody is aware, are close students of the birth column and death column in the newspapers; while men, except undertakers and lawyers, seldom pay any attention to the news of who has just entered and who has just quit the world.

Give the average woman a full birth column, a long death column, a gossipy society column and plenty of fashion notes and she will be satisfied with a newspaper. She cares very little about the news of the day: the rise and fall of stocks, the fortunes of political parties, the doings of governments, the results of sports. Does this mean necessarily that women are intellectually inferior to men? Not at all. It simply means that their interest lies in a different direction.

To a philosopher, politics, the stock market and the prize ring are not intrinsically so important as the births and death of human beings. The events of a ball are in themselves quite as noteworthy as the events of a Thaw trial. The man who chatters about the Thaw trial has no right to sneer at his wife for chattering about the gowns of other women.

Men are no deeper philosophers than women; and few of either sex are philosophers at all. But men have a serenely patronizing trick of assuming that the only things worth while are the things in which they themselves, noble lords and paragons of creation, are interested, and that the things in which women are interested are trivial.

The truth is that the gossip in a man's club is just as idle, frivolous and unprofitable as the gossip at a sewing club; although it deals usually with matters of peculiar concern to men, but not, for that reason, any more lofty, dignified or intellectual than matters of peculiar concern to woman.

Peary Prepares for Dash to the Pole

New York, April 11.—The application of Robert E. Peary, U.S.N., for leave of absence of three years, which was approved yesterday by the secretary of the navy, has uncovered the fact that Commander Peary definitely purposes to make another attempt this summer to reach the North Pole. His three years leave of absence expired last Sunday, and the new leave begins at once.

Preparations for another dash toward the pole have been well under way all winter. June is the month in which the start is to be made, but the exact day has not been settled. Funds necessary for the next trip to the North Pole have not yet been obtained in adequate quantity, but it is stated that there is no uneasiness as to that.

Captain Robert Bartlett, of St. John's, Nfld., sailing master of the Roosevelt, has been applied to come to New York in May to supervise the fitting out of the vessel. Commander Peary will pick every man to be taken. Roy Marvin, naturalist, and Dr. Louis Wolff, as surgeon, will accompany the expedition.

A FINE PROPERTY

Chicago Business Men Adopted a Conservative Policy of Careful Investigation before Investing, and as a Result Get Four Splendid Claims in the Famous Manhattan District of Nevada.

("Mercantile and Financial Times," March 2, 1907.)

A party of Chicagoans well known in business circles in this city have bought a fine mining property in the Manhattan mining camp in Nevada. The gentlemen interested include the following officers and directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Company, as the corporation is named: Wm. R. Payne, President and Treasurer; J. W. McMillan, First Vice-President; M. Baumgartel, Second Vice-President; J. Roger Brown, Secretary, and L. B. Drew, Assistant Secretary. All these gentlemen are well known Chicago business men. The office of the Manhattan Independent Mining Company is at Room 1212, 153 La Salle street Chicago.

The plan of this company in entering into the mining business was radically different from the usual plan. The representatives of the company went personally to Manhattan and inspected the claims before buying them. They spent six weeks on the property and tested it in every possible way. They made numerous assays on each claim, which averaged more than $400 to the ton. They finally secured 4 claims, thoroughly tested, namely, the Independent, American Flag, Anglo-Celtic and Peerless, lying about 2 1-2 miles southwest of Manhattan, Nevada, and about one mile southwest of Central, in the Toquima Range of mountains, in the heart of the Manhattan District.

By the examination and assays made the Manhattan Independent Mining Co. knows exactly what to expect from its properties. The gold is three in large values, and all that now remains to be done is to open up the mines and ship the ore. For this purpose stock is now being sold. Particulars can be had by addressing the company as above.

A Battle of Butterflies.

"A battle of butterflies," said the Japanese viscount firmly.

"Impossible!" cried the lady on his right.

"Oh," the viscount insisted, "the thing is authenticated. It happened on Aug. 20, 1889. Tales and poems without number have been written on it. On the evening of Aug. 20 two opposing armies of the butterflies fought an aerial battle between Nojima and Kawasaki Mura. The fight continued till sunset, when the smaller army turned and retreated, the victors pursuing it till all were lost in the rosy sunset haze. The ground beneath the combat was thickly strewn with wounded and dead warriors. The battle drew a thousand people. It occurred about thirty feet up in the air. The spectators were amazed and horror stricken to see these gentle blue butterflies grappling and struggling furiously and silently in a blue blizzard above their heads."

The Bookplate.

An ex libris, or bookplate, is a small piece of paper whereon is printed the owner's name and pasted on the inside cover of a book—in other words, it is a printed slip to denote the ownership of books. A proper ex libris should have, first of all, the name, boldly and plainly printed, and a space left for the number of volumes contained in the library; then, to make it more interesting and personal, some decorative device of the owner's peculiar and individual choice as well as some favorite motto, if desired. In Europe those who have the right use family crests or armorial bearings for their ex libris. Every well regulated library should have some mark of ownership, and the ex libris takes the place of the owner's signature.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help use as well

Doctors prescribe very little, if any, alcohol these days. They prefer strong tonics and alteratives. This is all in keeping with modern medical science. It explains why Ayer's Sarsaparilla is now made entirely free from alcohol. Ask your doctor.

Petty Criticism.

Cyrus Small's time was largely spent in discovering the faults and shortcomings of things animate and inanimate, while Mrs. Small, as it seemed, was equally vigilant in attempting to bring forward something of which she could say, "There, you can't pick any flaws in that!"

Once she thought this happiness would be hers. A certain man in the town inherited large wealth under peculiar circumstances. It was his under the law, but when the court awarded it to him he stood up and said that, in view of all the facts in the case, he believed that the property belonged of right to another heir. His action was generally looked upon as a noble one.

Mrs. Small was loud in her expressions of praise.

"Yes, I know," said her husband, "'twas a fine thing. Few men would have done it, and that's why he felt so awkward to stand up there and say what he did. He showed that he felt embarrassed by the way he stood."

"Cyrus Small, I should hope you would not find fault with his attitude when he was doing such a grand thing!"

"Oh, no; I have no wish to criticise," said Cyrus, "but if I had been on the platform, facing all those people, I should have tried to toe out a little more."

Deposed Priest Sings in Cafe

Paris, April 10.—Abbe Ozouf, who was suspended by his bishop for having founded an association for worship under the church separation law of France, has found himself thrown on the world. Being without means, he advertised for a position as a secretary, but, failing to get such employment, he took a place as a car conductor. Now he is using his fine tenor voice, which delighted his congregation at the reading desk and the altar, and has signed to sing at a cafe concert.

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN

Copyright, 1896, by HARPER & BROTHERS

"Moreover," he went on, "I will get there in time. I have an immense respect for Meredith. If he said that he could hold out for four months I should say that he could hold out for six. There is no one like Meredith once he makes up his mind to take things seriously."

"Le' go!" he gasped.

It was not very well done, and she probably saw through it. She probably knew that he was as anxious as she was herself. But his very presence was full of comfort. It somehow brought a change to the moral atmosphere.

"Where is Durnovo?" Oscard asked suddenly.

"I believe he is in Loango. It is not likely," she went on, "that he will come here. I—I rather lost my temper with him and said things which I imagine hurt his feelings."

"I'm rather afraid of doing that myself," he said; "only it will not be his feelings."

"I do not think," she replied, "that it would be at all expedient to say or do anything at present. He must go with you to the plateau. Afterward—perhaps."

Oscard laughed quietly.

"Ah," he said, "that sounds like one of Meredith's propositions. But he does not mean it any more than you do."

"I do mean it," replied Jocelyn quietly. There is no hatred so complete, so merciless, as the hatred of a woman for one who has wronged the man she loves. At such times women do not pause to give fair play. They make no allowance."

Guy Oscard smiled.

"I think I will go and look for him," he said.

At dusk that same evening there was a singular incident in the barroom of the only hotel in Loango.

Victor Durnovo was there, surrounded by a few friends of antecedents and blood similar to his own. They were having a convivial time of it, and the consumption of whisky was greater than might be deemed discreet in such a climate as that of Loango.

Durnovo was in the act of raising his glass to his lips when the open doorway was darkened and Guy Oscard stood before him. The half breed's jaw dropped; the glass was set down again rather unsteadily on the zinc covered counter.

"I want you," said Oscard.

There was a little pause, an ominous silence, and Victor Durnovo slowly followed Oscard out of the room, leaving that ominous silence behind.

"I leave for Msala tonight," said Oscard when they were outside, "and you are coming with me."

"I'll see you cursed first!" replied Durnovo, with a courage born of Irish whisky.

Guy Oscard said nothing, but he stretched out his right hand suddenly. His fingers closed in the collar of Victor Durnovo's coat, and that particolored scion of two races found himself feebly trotting the one street of Loango.

"Le' go!" he gasped.

But the hand at his neck neither relinquished nor contracted. When they reached the beach the embarkation of the little army was going forward under Maurice Gordon's supervision. Victor looked at Gordon. He reflected over the trump card held in his hand, but he was too skillful to play it then.

CHAPTER XVI.

IT was nearly dark when the little coast steamer secured by Maurice Gordon for the service turned her prow northward and steamed away.

"The truth is," Durnovo took an early opportunity of saying to Oscard, "that my nerve is no longer up to this work. I should not care to undertake this business alone, despite my reputation on the coast. It is a wonderful thing how closely the nerves are allied to the state of one's health."

"Wonderful!" acquiesced Guy Oscard, with a lack of irony which only made the irony keener.

"I've been too long in this country," exclaimed Durnovo. "That's the fact. I'm not the man I was."

Guy Oscard smoked for some moments in silence, then he took his pipe from his lips.

"The only pity is," he said judicially, "that you ever undertook to look for the simiacine if you were going to funk it when the first difficulty arose."

Without further comment he walked away and entered into conversation with the captain of the steamer.

"All right," muttered Durnovo between his teeth—"all right, my sarcastic, grand gentleman. I'll be even with you yet."

In due time Msala was reached. As the canoes suitable for up river traffic were by no means sufficient to transport the whole of the expeditionary force in one journey, a division was made. Durnovo took charge of the advance column, journeying up to the camp from which the long march through the forest was to begin, and sending back the canoes for Oscard and the remainder of the force. With these canoes he sent back word that the hostile tribes were within a few days' march, and that he was fortifying his camp.

This news seemed to furnish Guy Oscard with food for considerable thought, and after some space of time he called Marie.

She came, and, standing before him with her patient dignity of mien, awaited his communication. She never took her eyes off the letter in his hand. Oscard noticed the persistency of her gaze at the time and remembered it again afterward.

"Marie," he said, "I have had rather serious news from Mr. Durnovo. It will not be safe for you to stay at Msala. You must take the children down to Loango. I will send two men down with you, and will give you a letter to Miss Gordon, who will see to your wants at Loango."

FAITH.

When I am dead—when I am dead—
Well, won't the same red roses blow
And won't the paths I joy to tread
As glad and lightsome footsteps know?
And won't the birds sing just as clear
And won't the streams sing just as sweet
And won't the ways of yesteryear
Still coax the laggard's wayward feet?

Why should I muse—"When I am dead?"
Who give to death a thought or care?
Whose blossoms of last year lie dead
This year spreads newer ones, and there
The same birds come to lilt and sing,
And sweethearts tell old tales anew,
And children, too, will come and swing
'Neath trees whose shades knew me and you.

And other men will dare the sea
For other loves, as I have done,
And fight—aye, lie, too—and will be Another me, and they will run
The selfsame course for the same thing
My heart holds dear, and love shall be
Their splendid spur, their lifting wings,
As it is mine, to win me thee.

So let the years come down and snuff
Me out from this abiding place;
Beyond all earthly paths and rough
I yet shall win and see your face.
And we shall, poised in our own star,
Whence God's own lights are flung and furled,
Look back to now where we two are
And know this for a good old world.

STATISTICS OF MURDER.

Deductions Drawn By an Eminent British Law Officer.

A remarkable analysis of the crime of murder for the last twenty years by Sir John Macdonnell, Master of the Supreme Court, is the principal feature of the criminal statistics of England and Wales for 1906, which was issued the other day. The number of people sentenced to death for murder from 1887 to 1906 was 488 males and 64 females. In the last decade the actual number of cases in which execution followed the death sentence is shown in the following table:

	Sentenced.	Executed.
1904	28	16
1903	40	27
1902	33	22
1901	28	15
1900	20	18
1899	29	15
1898	27	11
1896	33	20

Sir John writes: "The first fact to be noted is that murder, as might be expected is a crime of men. Murder means murder by men in a great majority of cases. Out of 539 sentenced to death since 1866 488 were men. The figures are more remarkable because as regards women they include cases of child murder, to which they are of course much more prone than men.

"The next noticeable point, which is rarely mentioned, is that a great majority of the persons murdered are women. They are as three to one.

"A great majority of the murders are committed by persons between the ages of 21 and 40, that is, during the period of greatest physical vigor.

"A further notable point in regard to murders committed by men is the very large proportion of murders of wives. Out of a total of 488 murders for which men were sentenced to death in the twenty years under consideration, no fewer than 124, or about 1 in 4, were murders of wives by their husbands. Most of the men convicted of murder belonged, like the women, to the laboring classes.

"The principal causes or motives for murders during this period were Jealousy and intrigues, 197; drink, 90; quarrels or rage, 63; revenge, 70; robbery, 50; extreme poverty, 39; illegal operations, 13, and for insurance money, 3. Saturday is a favorite day for murder, 108 cases having been ascertained to have taken place on that day."

Sir John Macdonnell makes this remarkable declaration of the relation of drink to crime:

"Drunkenness is no doubt the cause of many crimes, and is the accompaniment of many others, but the theory of the close correspondence of crime and drunkenness must be viewed with caution."

Early Celtic Christianity.

Lecturing at the Manchester University recently on "Early Celtic Christianity," Prof. Kuno Meyer spoke of the monastic institutions in Ireland during the seventh and eighth centuries, when the island was the high school of learning of Western Europe. He combated the idea that St. Patrick founded the monastic See at Armagh, principally because the work of the saint did not go beyond the missionary stage. The ancient Irish Church was of a strong national character. The reasons why many of the old Irish manuscripts had not survived were that they were written in Irish, and, for that reason, after the conquest by the Vikings in 795 A.D. they were of little use on the continent, and also many of the Latin works were written in a peculiar irregular character difficult to understand on the continent.

His Idea of a Wife.

Discussing with a representative of an Irish paper the qualities a wife should possess, a tramp said the other day that she should be "an all round woman," between forty and fifty years, not handsome, but temperate. "If there is any drinking to be done," he said, "I can see to it. She should be able to walk twenty miles a day and be good at begging bottles and potatoes and also at ballad singing. She should be able to fight a round or two to defend her husband when in action."

The Scallop.

The scallop can anchor itself as well as any ship. It never fails to drop its anchor on the approach of rough weather. The scallop, lying in its bed of shoal water, foresees a storm in true sailor fashion and at once puts out a tough and elastic little cable from a point near its hinge. This cable it fastens firmly to the nearest rock. It is then secure in the vilest weather. He who wades through scallop haunted shoals as a storm approaches may see the tiny shellfish mooring themselves on all sides with silent bustle.

Salt For Cattle.

The only way in which salt should be given to cattle is in lumps, big enough for them to lick handily, with no danger of their swallowing them.

KENNEDY COBALT, Ltd.

is recommended

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 12. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 39 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 39 acres of J. B. 12 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 5 inch nicolilite, 18 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1283-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $460.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5300 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $460.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 59 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

Archibald Carey, of St. Paul's church, Kingston, has sued that congregation, per the westeryman for $3,000 of back stipend. This covers a period of some thirty years. The rev. gentleman has been accustomed to take what surplus remained after meeting liabilities of that well endowed church. It seems the vestry was considering the reversion of certain benefactions from the rector to other uses, hence the suit.

Thaw Not Yet Acquitted

Some excitement was created yesterday when an evening contemporary placed in front of their premises a bulletin, saying that Thaw had been acquitted. This report came from Pittsburg, Pa., in which city two of their local papers issued extras conveying the unfounded rumor. The jury had not yet agreed, when the bulletin was issued here, opinions seemed about divided as to the righteousness of the verdict, but it was amusing to hear one or two men who are known to have held strong opinions that there should be a conviction, turn round and declare, "I told you so, I knew the jury must acquit that man."

Mr. King Denies the Charges

Mr. (Wm. King, a well known South Monaghan farmer, is much vexed over the charges made by an Englishman a few days ago before County Magistrate Geo. Mr. King made a bargain with him to work for $10 per month and free house and board, not $18, and in condition he could earn that much. This was satisfactory. His family was moved down to the farm and a great deal was done by Mr. King to make them comfortable. Mr. King says the man did not earn the price of his board alone. He owed Mr. King some $30 for milk, fuel, etc., of which he only paid $10, and after deducting his wages still owes him $10.

Mr. Nugent Entertains Hockey Team

Last night Mr. John Nugent, the George street druggist, was host at a most pleasing function, when in Long's Palm Parlors he entertained the members of the Peterborough hockey team to a banquet. The tables were charmingly set and decorated, and Mine Host Hooper had prepared a tasty and well served repast. After the viands had been done justice to a very pleasant evening with songs, music and chat was spent.

Guesses as to the Cut Glass

Considerable interest was caused yesterday by a card in the window of the recently installed China Hall, in their new quarters, formerly occupied by Mr. A. Rountree as a grocery store. The China Hall window is filled with a high grade lot of pressed glass articles that closely resemble cut glass. These glass articles run in value from 10c to 40c each. In the window are two genuine cut glass pieces worth $8 a piece. A card in the window challenges the onlooker to pick out the $8 articles. It would take an expert quite a time to select the right goods. It was amusing to see the satisfied air with which people would point to a 25c. or 75c. article, and say confidently, "Why any one would know that is one of the pieces of cut glass."

Royal-Victoria Life Insurance COMPANY

ANNUAL MEETING

Montreal, March 27th, 1907

The Directors' Report was Unanimously Adopted and Retiring Directors Re-elected.

DIRECTORS' REPORT

The Directors beg to submit the following report of the Company's operations for the year 1906, together with the financial statement and the auditor's report.

New Business Satisfactory

The new business amounting to $962,675.00 in applications for Insurance, of which $849,175.00 was accepted and policies issued therefor, was not as large as in the previous year, owing to the unsettled conditions in Life Insurance that existed in Canada during the past year. The amount of new business obtained, however, under the conditions referred to is considered satisfactory.

Management Expenses Reduced

The expenses of the year show a further reduction of 7 1-2 per cent. on the previous year. Compared with the sum of expenses in the previous year the actual reduction amounts to $4,600.00.

Cash Income Increased

The cash income from premiums and interest amounted to $170,823.23, being an increase of $10,514.58 over the previous year. The balance of premium revenue (premiums outstanding and deferred) amounted to $40,666.46, as shown in the assets under that heading.

Invested Assets Increased

The Ledger assets have increased during the year in the sum of $46,618.73, which now brings the total security for holders of insurance and annuity policies (including the capital) up to $1,333,456.06.

Legal Reserves Increased

The Legal Reserves on policies in force, according to the valuation made by the Canadian Insurance Department, at December 31st last, amounted to $479,456.06, which covers the Reserve liability under each policy in force from the date of its inception to its anniversary date in 1907.

Payments Under Policies Increased

The payments made under policies during the year amounted to $56,454.23, being for death claims $42,451.45 (of which $6,500 was shown as a liability in last annual statement); for cash surrender values $5,648.80; and for annuities $5,954.28, making an increase in the total of such payments of $9,125.93 over the previous year.

Loans on Stocks and Bonds Well Secured

The loans on stocks and bonds at December 31st, amounted to $150,000, being an increase of $40,000.00; the company holding as collateral security first-class bonds and stocks, having a market value of over $180,000.00.

Loans on Policies Secured by Large Reserves

The loans to policyholders made in cash and to pay premiums on the security of their policies amounted to $40,171.24, being an increase of $3,801.62. The reserves held under such policies, included in the liabilities, amounted to over $75,000.00, showing an average of $185.00 of Reserve as security against each $100.00 of policy loans.

Interest Promptly Paid

The interest on investments has during the year, as usual, in every instance been promptly paid when due, not one dollar being overdue in the accounts on the 31st of December.

Adjustment of Capital Shares

As intimated at the last Annual Meeting of the Company, the Directors have taken the necessary steps to obtain from Parliament powers under the Company's Act of Incorporation to adjust the capital shares. In due course a by-law will be submitted to the shareholders for their consideration, at a special meeting, which will be held during the year for that purpose.

Investigation by Royal Commission

As a result of the investigation of Life Insurance in Canada during the past year by the Royal Commission, it is believed the conditions under which the companies have been doing business will be improved, and that necessary amendments will be made to the Insurance Act, providing for a broader and equally safe range of investments, and also for an adjustment of the standard of valuation of policy Reserves in the initial years of insurance.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

DAVID BURKE, General Manager.

JAMES CRATHERN, President

TEN MILLION DOLLARS NEEDED FOR CHINESE

One Dollar Will Keep a Chinese Sufferer Until the Harvest Time---The Situation is Desperate.

Shanghai, April 13.—Telegrams received here from 20 points in the famine district report that the conditions are growing worse. The Chinese Government and people up to date have contributed over $4,000,000 for famine relief, and the sums received from all foreign sources, total half a million dollars, including the supplies on their way here from America.

There are 50 missionaries with the higher class of Chinese engaged in overseeing the relief distributions. Confucianists, Catholics and Protestants working together. The telegraph officials are carrying free all messages to and from the relief works, and the steamship companies are furnishing free transportation for supplies of food, etc., intended for the victims.

Twenty thousand famine sufferers are employed in building dams and canals to prevent a recurrence of the floods.

The Relief Committee here is promptly sending supplies to the front, but the funds are nearing exhaustion. All the relief measures up to date are inadequate. Ten million persons are suffering from inadequate supplies of food, and three millions are nearing starvation.

The members of the committee at the front report that they find the bodies of the sufferers bloated, and that their faces turn green or black as the result of starvation. The people are pulling up the growing crops for food. Whole families have been found dead in their houses, and corpses are seen lying by the roadside. Probably 5,000 persons are dying daily from starvation. A few cases of rioting for food have occurred, and cannibalism is beginning to be reported. Newly made graves have been rifled of the bodies, and parents are exchanging their children to be eaten.

A dollar, the Relief Committee reports, will save one life until the harvests, June 25, and $10,000,000 is needed. The whole amount cannot be raised in China. The situation is desperate, and Americans are urged to give three million dollars in the next three weeks, not for Christian, but for humanitarian work.

Great Opportunity to Secure Land

Farms and City Lots Offered on Good Terms.

Now that so extensive an immigration is being made into the great wheat growing countless acres of far Western Canada, it will be of interest to intending settlers in that part of the Dominion to learn where and how to secure land for farming purposes at reasonable rates, or for those seeking investment in well paying city lots in the wonderful City of Winnipeg.

The Farmers' Colonization and Supply Co., of Winnipeg, whose advertisement appears in this issue, have both improved and virgin soil prairie farms for sale to buyers of quarter half or whole sections at $8 to $12 an acre. They have over 100 improved farms in the West for sale on crop payments.

One feature of their holdings are lands suitable for poultry, dairy and market gardening within easy access of Winnipeg. For full particulars address Farmers' Colonization and Supply Co., 6 Stanley Block, Winnipeg, Man.

W. Anglesey Pleaded Not: and, Later, Guilty

A Young's Point Man Steals a Lady's Chatelaine with $15.

In the police court yesterday, a young man, some 6ft. 3in. in height, and well dressed, named W. Anglesey, was charged with stealing a chatelaine purse, containing $15.10. Prisoner pleaded not guilty and decided on a summary trial. The case was enlarged until Monday. A few minutes after the court had been adjourned and the prisoner locked up, before the magistrate left the station, the prisoner decided to plead guilty. The court again sat and Anglesey acknowledged stealing the money. He said the chatelaine was in the yard of a local hotel and offered to show the police where it was. Out of the $15.10, (three $5 Bank of Commerce bills) he had paid $4 for board, and otherwise, there only being left $6.87.

It seems that Miss Lily Graham of Selwyn, came into a local hotel, left her wraps and chatelaine on a chair and went up stairs. On her return the purse and money was gone. The magistrate stated it was very sad to think of a respectable looking man like the prisoner, stealing money and leaving the poor woman in the lurch. He remanded him for one week to investigate prisoner's record."

Later on the prisoner, accompanied by P. C. Newhall, went to the yard mentioned by Anglesey, and showed where he had hidden the chatelaine. When arrested prisoner had $6.87 in cash and a brass counterfeit American half dollar in his pockets. The bogus half he claimed to have carried for some years as a pocket piece. This coin was not only mutilated and worn, but when thrown on a table gave about as much "ring" as would an iron washer.

Mr. L. Spry Must Remove His Fence

Our readers will remember that a few days ago before Mr. Justice Riddell, the case of Rustach vs. Spry, was tried, and that the judge reserved his decision.

In Osgoode Hall news of yesterday was the following:

Before Riddell, J. — Rentsch vs. Spry—Judgment (G.A.B.) In action tried without a jury at Peterborough. Judgment for an injunction restraining defendant from continuing the fence erected by him, in such a way as to interfere with the comfortable and reasonable enjoyment of the premises conveyed; ordering defendant forthwith to remove the same or so much thereof as interferes with such enjoyment. Defendant to pay the costs of the action on the high court scale, including the costs of examination and all interlocutory costs, which the trial judge has power to impose with $5 damages for the deprivation of light and $20 through snow and ice. No stay of proceedings. D. O'Connell & G. N. Gordon, Peterborough, for plaintiff. G. Edmison, K.C., for defendant.

Cheap Groceries for Sale Today

In order to obtain permanent premises, China Hall has purchased the large and well assorted stock of groceries, etc., of Mr. A. Rountree, No. 394 George street. This stock, which is one of the finest grocery stocks in Peterborough, will, together with the balance of the China Hall stock, be thrown on the market at cost price, commencing March 2 and continuing until both stocks are entirely disposed of, but no longer than the 15th of April, after which date the store will be re-fitted, and opened about May 1, with an entirely new stock of crockery, china, glassware, cut-glass, plated ware, fine china ornaments, etc. China Hall, after that date, will be beyond a doubt one of the finest and most complete china stores in Canada. The China Hall Company.

Improvements on Windsor Hotel

The Windsor Hotel of which Mr. Arthur Johnston, the local baseball and all round sports patron, is proprietor, is getting a spring suit built. Ald. Robt. Duncan and a staff of his men are treating the complete front of the building to a fresh coat of paint and doing it well. The Windsor now looks fine.

A Hen Works Overtime

Whilst the Dominion hens may not have a union it seems that their output per diem exceeds that of the ordinary hen. The Norwood Register says; Mr. Thos. McQuiggie, of Dummer, brought to this office on Tuesday a half dozen hen's eggs, the largest of which measured 7 3-8 by 6 3-4, and the smallest 6 3-4 by 5 3-4 inches—an eggstra good sample we think.—Norwood Register.

An Old Time Relic

In addition to the many human remains found in Central Park, one of peculiar interest was discovered yesterday by Mr. Alfred Cooney. As the men were digging Mr. Cooney found a well preserved eight-inch knife blade, enclosed in a thick leather sheath, held together with old fashioned copper rivets. The handle of the knife had rotted away with age. On the blade is clearly legible, "Providence Cutlery Co." Possibly this old-time relic, were it able to speak, could tell of a bygone tragedy. Mr. Cooney will try to sell the relic.

Mr. Jayes' Nephew Praised

Yesterday Mr. Jack Jayes might not have, but he should have, grown about an inch in stature when it became known that the Buffalo Enquirer referring to his nephew, Walter Jayes, said; "Young Jayes is one of the best second basemen in Buffalo and last year played with the Starrs, one of the crack amateur teams of this city. This season he will play professional ball, and has been signed by the Syracuse State League team." The local citizen referred to, is a popular member of the Munro House staff.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Gathered From the Local Police Station.

Hector Baker was charged with vagrancy at yesterday's session of the police court. P. C. Newhall said he has known the prisoner for three years, he has worked a few days during the past year. He is a drunken, idle, worthless fellow. At 10.25 p.m. on the 4th of April, he found Baker in a dark spot on Hunter street with a drunken man. Baker had both hands in the man's pockets. When accused by him, Baker said, "I am looking for "tin." Mr. Goodwell objected to this evidence, but the objection was overruled. The policeman put his hands into the drunk's pockets, and found a round tin box. He caught the prisoner's wrist, but the latter had nothing in his pocket. The drunk gave his name as McCarthy, and said he had lost nothing, adding, "No, he don't take anything from me." After the arrest on the way to the station, Baker said he was looking for a bottle of whisky. When searched at the station, Baker had no money on him.

To Mr. Goodwell, he had seen Baker with McCarthy earlier that evening in front of a Simcoe street hotel. Baker had been drinking, but was not drunk.

To the chief, he has seen Baker several times hanging about with drunken men, in dark places.

Mr. Ed. McCarthy knows the prisoner by sight, remembers the night on Hunter street. He and prisoner had a drink together. Prisoner knew he had no money as he, witness bought a drink on credit. He suggested going into an alleyway, and asked prisoner to feel if there was anything in his pocket, and as prisoner felt, the officer arrested him.

Chief Ramsay then went into the box and noted that Baker has been in court several times, has served time in jail. He drinks and when drunk is not accountable for his actions.

The magistrate said under the evidence he would have to discharge the prisoner, but he had a bad reputation in the court, and it will only be a matter of time when they land him.

Daily Warnings at Central Park

Skulls and other nerve shaking samples of man's mortality keep dropping up daily during the excavations for the new Collegiate Institute. This should make people seriously meditate upon the solemn admonition they afford, and see that they keep their advertisements up to date and their subscriptions paid, ere they fade away and join their kindred dust.

Mr. Miles in a Bad Condition

Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Wm. Miles, 109 Weller street, a foreman with the C.G.E. Co., was painfully injured. Mr. Miles was riding down Park street on a bicycle returning to work and was passing a wagon, when in some manner his wheel was upset, throwing him under the wheels which passed over his legs, bruising them painfully.

Kirkfield Lock to be Tested

Arrangements are being made to have a test made of the hydraulic lift lock at Kirkfield, within the next few days. The lock was completed last fall, but too late in the season to test it. Now, however, a test will be made within a few days. It is expected that the lift lock will work satisfactorily.

DIZZINESS

Relieved by Simple Change of Food

A very common cause of dizziness is the poisonous matter that results from imperfect digestion.

When the stomach is unable to digest the food because of its being eaten too fast or because it is of the indigestible sort, part of it lies in the stomach and ferments, producing acid and bacteria.

These bacteria (microbes) then manufacture more or less poison which is absorbed into the blood along with what little food is already digested, and the result is a bad headache, irritability, dullness of intellect and lack of energy.

Don't get into the habit of taking medicine for such a condition, or if you've formed the habit, quit it.

Look to your food as a N.Y. man did. He says:

"For six years I suffered with acute attacks of indigestion and dyspepsia, which usually affected me directly after eating or within an hour. I would become dizzy with a sensation of being about to faint.

"These attacks usually lasted two or three minutes, sometimes accompanied with vomiting. (The effects of poison produced by undigested food and bacteria.) Between these acute attacks I suffered much pain from indigestion and belching.

"I tried about every known remedy for my troubles but got only temporary relief. Then I tried Grape-Nuts. This food certainly commends itself to a delicate appetite with a goodly measure of relish that is peculiar to itself.

"Grape-Nuts food agreed with me from the first. I am now entirely cured and I most heartily recommend it to all who suffer from stomach trouble.

"The nutritive value of Grape-Nuts is shown by the fact that, as an electrical Machinist I eat nothing but Grape-Nuts and a piece of toast for breakfast, then keep on my feet all day without excessive fatigue.

"I consider this food has more hard work in it; more strength-giving quality; more satisfaction to the eater, and more every day health, than any other cereal food made today." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Invest Your Money in Western Land

50,000 Acres of Choice Western Lands for Sale.

In the face of the strenuous emigration to the broad acres of our Western prairies it is interesting to learn that a well known Winnipeg firm, D. W. Harvey & Co., have some 50,000 acres of select wheat lands for sale, 25,000 acres in Saskatchewan and 25,000 in Manitoba, at prices ranging from $6 to $10 per acre.

This land is all from four to eight miles from a railroad, thus enabling purchasers to control an easy outlet for their products. The company is offering their land in six blocks of 500 acres each, and two blocks of 10,000 acres each, to those desiring to purchase.

This is a good chance for speculators or syndicates to acquire a large acreage to hold for certain future sale. Still any one with, say, $1000 can get in on the ground floor and secure as good a bargain as any syndicate.

This seems to us one of the best opportunities yet offered for private or corporate acquisition of North-West lands, with a title beyond dispute, yet placed on the market. For full particulars address D. W. Harvey & Co., 428 Main street, Winnipeg, Man.

"Anti-Coffin-Nails" Against Cigarettes

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Some local bylaw should be passed, as both the Provincial and Dominion governments are blind to such matters, to prevent the use of cigarretts by immature bobble-de-boy youths under, say, 18 years of age. It is saddening to walk along our streets and see callow yellow-faced cadaverous featured boys complacently sucking paper covered tubes filled with the refuse of cuspidors and streets, dried down, cut up and made into "cigarettes" at five cents per packet. These boys who fondly imagine the use of so called tobacco make men out of them, should remember that this cigarette evil affects others than themselves to pass one of these hardy candidates for the title of manhood, whilst he is smoking a "cigarette," is somewhat calculated to recall one's memory to the first visit one made to a medical dissecting room in hot weather. I will admit that there are degrees of grossness in cigarettes, but from personal experience in the stench caused by these growing boys trying to stunt their growth and stultify their future prospects, I cannot but think the majority of the cigarettes are rank. I am not a crank against tobacco, but, should these boys decide they must learn to smoke to show their manhood let them do as I did, viz., start on a pipe (if cigars are too dear or too strong) and use tobacco. The involved illness will not cause the beginner half the sickness that these filthy "coffin nails" give those within smelling distance.

Yours truly,
ANTI-COFFIN-NAILS.

Local Boys Might Take Note

The Millbrook Reporter says: Some four young men are becoming too boisterous on the streets and such cowdyism must be suppressed. One of them got a lesson to the effect of $6, and more will be in the same boat, if an improvement is not made. The authorities are determined to see that law and order are observed.

Mr. Clarry Noted

The engineering staff of the Trent Valley Canal, Peterborough, reported to Mr. J. D. Thornton, that a side-wheel steamer would be on the water just as soon as the ice was gone. Mr. Clarry, an old Millbrook boy, is on the staff, and is showing himself to be very much interested in the undertaking.—Omemee Mirror.

A Local Lapsos Naturae

Campbell Herald says: Dr. S. West, veterinary surgeon brought to our notice a freak of nature which came under his observation in his professional work. A cow belonging to Mr. Wm. Waters, who resides on the Bulivan farm, gave birth to a rather strange creature, the hind parts of which resembled a pig, and the front part a calf, the weight of it being 120 pounds.

King Edward School Almost Ready

The King Edward school building on the south end of the city is about ready for use and pupils may be admitted just as soon as the desks are installed. All the contractors have practically finished their work and the last touches will be completed in a day or two. It is probable that the Board of Education will make arrangements for the formal opening at an early date.

Orillia Must Get Busy

In view of the recent Oddfellows' meeting in this city, it is interesting to learn that the Orillia Packet says: It is time the townspeople were beginning to realize that there is a big task before Orillia in entertaining the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, which is to meet here early in August. It is anticipated that there will be from eight hundred to a thousand visitors in town for two or three days of that time.

Angry Jurors Disagree New Trial for Thaw

After Two Days and a Half Deliberation on the Famous Murder Case, Twelve Good Men and True Fail to Reach a Verdict.

New York, April 13—1 a.m.—After eighth, despite the nerve-racking suspense, were considered not far short of marvelous. He sat in the prisoner's pen for many hours, but as the night went on and no word came from the jurors, he did not lose any of the sanguine air which characterized his demeanor almost from the time the jury began its deliberations. It was he who comforted his wife and mother, although admirably it was they who were by his side to help him bear the anxiety. They stayed with him until midnight, when there was no further hope of a verdict, notwithstanding they had suffered a dreary, tumultuous day as a result of anxious waiting.

FORMER JURIES.

District Attorney Jerome said today that the longest period of confinement he had ever known a jury to endure in this jurisdiction was 48 hours. The court of appeals approved the course of the court in that instance because there was no attempt to coerce the jury. It was persistently reported this morning that the members of the jury are divided 9 to 3, but just what grounds the division is based on could not be determined. Some said nine were for conviction of manslaughter with three for acquittal, while others declared it was three for conviction and nine for acquittal on the ground of insanity.

THE THAWS ARRIVE.

Mrs. William Thaw and Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw arrived at the Criminal Court Building at 10.30 a.m. Mrs Thaw, the younger, went to the sheriff's office where her husband was in charge of a deputy. They greeted each other and chatted a few minutes before the opening.

Young Mrs. Thaw showed plainly the effects of the strain she is undergoing. Her face was unusually pale today.

Mrs. Wm. Thaw, however, kept her composure and seemed to be the most optimistic of the Thaw relatives.

Edward and Josiah Thaw, Mrs. George L. Carnegie, the Countess of Yarmouth and Mrs. Edward Thaw arrived long before the opening of court and took their usual seats in the courtroom.

New York, April 12. The room in which the jurors were confined is small and contains only a long table and some chairs. This, of course, meant added sleeplessness and fatigue. Now and then the doors were unlocked by the guards to allow one or another of the jurors to take some exercise in the hallway, but this was all the relief extended from the burden of deciding for or against the prisoner's life.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"Kerry Gow"

Joseph Murphy's famous Irish comedy-drama, "Kerry Gow," was presented to a big audience at the Grand Opera house last night. The offering is one that can come again and again in the hands of the present company, and always be welcome, inasmuch as it is a piece which retains one's intense interest from start to finish. It is a presentation replete with proverbial Irish wit and humor, and affords ample scope for histrionic effort, which was very acceptably made the most of by last night's cast. The play is being staged with a perfection of detail which gives a charming realism to the drama, even to the making of horse shoes, the presence of carrier pigeons and attendance of horses, to say nothing of the much abused donkeys. Mr. Allen Doone, in the leading character of Dan O'Hara, the "Kerry Gow," is proving himself to be a worthy successor of the late Joe Murphy, the greatest Irish comedian the American stage ever produced. His conception of his character is irresistibly pleasing, and his impersonation is free from stage mannerisms and true-to-life. Miss Edna Keeley, as Nora Drew, Dan's sweetheart, is deserving of considerable credit as an actress of high standing. She has mastered her part with a completeness and finish that leaves very little, if anything, to be desired in the way of stage presentation. The two make a charming combination of pathos and humor and they carry their audience through every emotion of Irish life until the climax is reached in a perfect uproar of enthusiasm. Their combined efforts in the first act, where the boastful son of Erin is seeing from the perplexed father the hand of his daughter in marriage, is perhaps the best offering of the whole piece. The varied emotions of such a situation are so faithfully portrayed as to mentally transport their audience from stage surroundings to those of real life.

Seth Smith, as Nora's father, is a strong character, and deserves commendation for his splendid impersonation. J. H. Huntley, makes a very creditable Irish human vulture, and gives acceptable weight to the company. In fact, the whole cast is nicely balanced, and are handling "Kerry Gow," in so pleasing a manner as to render a return engagement in Peterborough a welcome number on the season's program for the Grand Opera house.

Retail Merchants Association Meets

Council Will be Asked to Rescinde the Sign and Pavement Bylaws

As noted in our issue of yesterday the Retail Merchants' Association of this city held their annual meeting in the Y.M.C.A. parlors on Thursday night, and that by request the local press were not present.

However, it was ascertained that when the council meets on Monday night to discuss the sign bylaw they will be waited upon by a delegation representing the merchants who will ask them to allow the old bylaw to stand and also lay before them reasons why they think the bylaw with regard to the blocking of the sidewalks with packing boxes, etc., should be changed. The following committee was appointed to wait upon the council on Monday night:—Messrs. E. F. Musson, W. E. Conway, A. W. Cressman, Jas. Coons, R. Fair, R. M. Roy, R. A. Dutton, Jos. Maher, Walter Oke, Geo. O'Brien, G. Kingdon, Minicoke Bros. and W. Buller.

With regard to the sign bylaw the merchants could see no reason for making a change.

It was decided unanimously that the packing box bylaw was an injustice to the merchants, especially to the fruit dealers, and that the council had no right to impose such a law upon a large number of men who provide 45 per cent. of the revenue of the city. Mr. W. Buller, of the Peterborough Lumber and Cartage Company, stated that his company was handicapped by the measure and hardly knew where they were at.

It was decided to ask the council to modify the bylaw so that the merchants may be allowed to unpack their goods up to three o'clock in the afternoon of every day in the week but Saturday, and on that day that they be given until 10 o'clock.

About Female Ailments

Not Hard to Cure if Properly and Promptly Treated.

Ask any intelligent physician what causes nine-tenths of all female disease, even including anaemia, nervousness and consumption.

Back comes the answer quick and sharp "Constipated Bowels."

There is scarcely a single female ailment that had not in its earlier stages symptoms of constipation.

How much better off the system is without the poisonous accummulations caused by constipation. How much clearer the complexion, how much fresher one feels when the system is pure and clean.

Think it over yourself.

Isn't it apparent that a bowel regulator and liver stimulant like Dr. Hamilton's Pills is sure to do good?

Gay spirits, good looks and happy health have returned to many a sick woman through Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Better get a few boxes today; purely vegetable, free from injurious ingredients, healthful and antiseptic. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will assist you in a thousand ways.

As delay is always dangerous, your plain duty is to follow the example of Mrs. F. Rowe, who sends the following letter from Gravels, Port Au Port, Newfoundland: "Four years ago I got kidney and bladder trouble. I thought it was 'female trouble' and treated it accordingly. Even my doctor in St. John said it was so.

"In reading about Dr. Hamilton's Pills I noticed symptoms like mine and I bought six boxes. These pills went right to work on my sick condition and helped me from the first. My supposed female trouble, which was bladder disease, was cured. My weight increased eight pounds and never before was I as well as today. Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., or Kingston, Ont.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 12, 1907

IMMIGRATION INTO CANADA

According to the reports of railway officials and other authorities on the subject, the immigration into Canada this year is likely to be greater than in any similar previous period. The greater part of this immigration seems to be of a desirable character and such as is likely to be of benefit both to the newcomers themselves and to the country in which they desire to make their homes for the future. Now that the tide of immigration appears to be fairly started to Canada, it is to be hoped that the Government and its agents abroad will take every precaution in their power to prevent an undesirable class from coming to this country. We have the experience of the United States to guide us in this matter. For many years there was an inflow of all sorts of people into the Union, no attempt being made by the Government to regulate it. The social and other evils which resulted from that state of things became ultimately so apparent that very stringent methods were adopted. It is now too late for the Dominion to guard against such an evil; at the same time there should be no delay in taking the necessary steps, although from some quarters, interested more in the quantity than in the quality of the immigration, protests may come against any measures of the kind.

Does Coffee disagree with you? Probably it does! Then try Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. "Health Coffee" is a clever combination of parched cereals and nuts. Not a grain of real Coffee, remember, in Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, yet its flavor and taste matches closely old Java and Mocha Coffee. If your stomach, heart, or kidneys can't stand Coffee drinking, try Health Coffee. It is wholesome, nourishing, and satisfying. It is nice even for the youngest child. Sold by J. D. Tully.

Read of Her Death

Chicago, April 11.—After reading an account published in a newspaper of her supposed death, Mrs. Louisa Duley, aged 49 years, expired last night at Evansville, Ind. Through an error the death of a woman of the same name was reported as having occurred in Mrs. Duley's home, and as she read the story she fell from her chair to the floor. A physician was called, but was unable to learn the reason for Mrs. Duley's collapse. She became rational later and after talking a few minutes began to cry, "I am dead, I am dead, I saw it in the paper," and died in hysterics.

Chased Across Atlantic

Halifax, April 11.—An eloping couple were captured on board the Allan Liner Carthagenian, which arrived yesterday afternoon from Liverpool. They are William H. Black, grocer, and Mrs. Frederick Anstey, who are now in custody of the immigration authorities, and will be deported by the next steamer sailing from this port for Liverpool. Frederick Anstey, the husband of the woman, was on the pier when the steamer tied up, waiting to confront her.

When his wife disappeared Anstey looked over passenger lists of steamers bound for Canada, and upon finding the name of F. Anstey and wife on the Carthagenian for Halifax, he boarded the Virginian, which is a faster steamer and passed the fleeing pair in mid-ocean. He arrived last Friday, and when his wife came ashore he pointed her and Black out to the officials. The woman positively refused to recognize Anstey, and denied that he was her husband, or that she had met him before Black. The woman and her two little boys were detained, and the whole party will be deported, and Mr. Anstey will also go on the same steamer.

Arsenic Caused the Death of Mrs. Gregg

Saltfleet, April 12.—The coroner's jury on the death of Mrs. Hiram Gregg, an aged lady, who died on March 15 shortly after drinking a cupful of porter taken out of a demi-jar, found that death was the result of arsenic in the beverage. By what means it came there is unknown.

The verdict was based on the evidence of Prof. Ellis of Toronto, the analyst, who declared that he found arsenic and copper in one of the jars of porter sent him, and that his conjecture as to the poison in the stomach was that it was Paris-green.

Officers of the Cosgrave Brewery, Toronto, testified that it was impossible for arsenic to have got into the porter while being bottled.

Mrs. Gregg was over 80 years of age. She lived with her daughter and son-in-law, John T. Dible, a prominent citizen, about two miles from here.

The case is causing a lot of talk, and County Constable McCully is investigating.

A SAFE INVESTMENT

A Successful Mining Company Must Operate on the Same Safe Lines that Make Other Enterprises Succeed.

That the Manhattan Independent Mining Company, of Manhattan, Nev., with local offices at 1213, 153 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill., has pursued a course worthy of note is to be seen by canvassing their work from the beginning down to the present time. With experienced men, under the supervision of Mr. J. W. McMillan, vice-president of the company, its four claims were tested by—delving into the ledges at numerous places, and assays were made from hundreds of pieces of ore taken from as many places, thus testing the entire property, and very high average assays being obtained. This work was all done before the property was purchased. After the purchase of the property further test work was done, all proving that the company is in the right place. Now actual developments show that the richness of the property increases, and that what they have is some of the best in the great Manhattan field.

We congratulate the officers of this company upon the course of business which they have followed, and the fact that many parties are seeking leases on this property shows that others are impressed with the fact that the company has not only good management, but splendid holdings. Companies who pursue this course have no trouble in selling their stock and making their stock valuable. A square deal and good, sound management always bring success.—National Banker, February 26, 1907.

Ptolemy's Big Boat.

Ptolemy (Philopator) was fond of building big boats. One of these is said to have been 420 feet long, 57 feet broad and 72 feet deep from the highest point of the stern. This vessel had four rudders or what some would call steering oars, as they were not fastened, each forty-five feet long. She carried 4,000 rowers, besides 3,000 marines, a large body of servants under her decks and storps and provisions. Her oars were fifty-seven feet long, and the handles were weighted with lead. There were 2,000 rowers on a side, and it is supposed that these were distributed into five banks. That this extraordinary vessel ever put to sea is doubted, but that she was launched and used at times, if only for display, several historians are agreed.

Getting Round It.

A famous mountaineer said of mountain climbing at a dinner in Brooklyn:

"Peaks that seem inaccessible may be climbed by turns and twists. Mountain climbing is a question of getting around the bad places. Getting around your difficulty—that is the secret of mountain climbing. Lieut. the great musician, had the ability to get around things; hence I am sure he'd have made a good mountaineer. Once at a dinner Lieut's hostess cried in a horrified voice that there were thirteen at table.

"'Don't let that alarm you, Madame,' said Lieut, with a reassuring smile, 'I'll eat for two.'"

If a lion and a strong horse were to pull in opposite directions, the horse would pull the lion backward with comparative ease. But if the lion were hitched behind the horse and facing in the same direction and were allowed to exert his strength in backing he could easily pull the horse down upon his haunches or drag him across the ring, so much greater is his strength when exerted backward from the hind legs than in forward pulling.—Chambers' Journal.

KING EDWARD AT BIARRITZ.

His Majesty Is Getting Rest and Quiet Enjoyment.

A correspondent writes: I am told by one who has just returned from Biarritz that King Edward is keeping much more to himself than on his former visit. The fact is that though he looks very well, he has been overstrained by his recent arduous labors and now is taking a "quiet recuperation."

Of course, it is no secret that the King does not possess what insurance offices term "good life." In view of the uncertainty of all human existence and the King's prolonged absence abroad the contingency of the sudden demise of the Crown, I am informed, has recently been under consideration in order that so lamentable and improbable an event should not find the authorities unprepared.

His Majesty is not far from the allotted age of man, and his sojourns abroad are indispensable to the efficient discharge of his onerous duties. Some feeling has been aroused on the subject of the King's absence while Parliament is sitting, but nobody who knows the facts can fail to admit that His Majesty owes it to himself and to the nation to omit no precaution which his medical advisers declare necessary for the preservation of his health.

But there is no denying that the King preserves wonderfully high spirits. The other evening at dinner with Princess Frederika of Hanover the King narrated a couple of stories about Mr. Haldane, the Minister of War:

"I notice," said he, "that when any of my present Ministers have something particularly democratic to bring forward they always propose to ask my advice. When Mr. Haldane came with a pat phrase to usher in his army scheme, I replied:

"'Of course, I am sure you have anticipated my opinion on the very point; now let me hear all about it.'"

The other tale concerns the Kaiser. His Teutonic Majesty, with bland imperturbability, invited the English Secretary of War to inspect the manoeuvres or whatever he pleased, whereas if the average Britisher approaches a fort it becomes a job for the British Embassy.

The Kaiser had been talking with candid affability and openness, which would have rendered any one suspicious except a sound forensic brain. Finally the German War Lord remarked:

"You will be going in for army reform yourself soon, I suppose. The next time you are at Windsor ask my uncle to find you a scheme I prepared one wet morning for my grandmother. It was too good ever to be adopted. I am glad that your country has never heard of it, for once it were embraced England's supremacy would be unshakable. I made it."

In the guttural Germanic tones of King Edward this must have sounded delightfully quaint.

An Egyptian Custom.

More than 1,000 years ago Herodotus observed a remarkable custom in Egypt. At a certain season of the year the Egyptians went into the desert, cut off branches from the wild palm and, bringing them back to their gardens, waved them over the flowers of the date palm. Why they performed this ceremony they did not know, but they knew that if they neglected it the date crop would be poor or wholly lost. Herodotus offers the quaint explanation that along with these branches there came from the desert certain flies possessed of a "vivifiv virtue," which somehow lent an exuberant fertility to the dates. But the true rationale to the incantation is now explained. Palm trees, like human beings, are male and female. The garden plants, the date bearers, were females, the desert plants were males, and the waving of the branches over the females meant the transference of the fertilizing pollen from the one to the other.

The Dangers of the Mines.

Great and mystically dreadful is the earth from a mine's depth. Man is in the implacable grasp of nature. It has only to tighten slightly and he is crushed like a bug. His loudest shriek of agony would be as impotent as his final moan to bring help from that fair land that lies like heaven over his head. There is an insidious silent enemy in the gas. If the huge fanwheel on the top of the earth should stop for a brief period there is certain death, and a panic more terrible than any occurring where the sun has shone ensues down under the tons of rock. If a man may escape the gas, the floods, the "squeezes" of falling rock, the cars shooting through little tunnels, the precarious elevators, the hundred perils, there usually comes to him an attack of "miner's asthma" that slowly racks and shakes him into the grave.—Stephen Crane.

JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT

Was Alarmingly Afflicted With La Grippe., Cured by Pe-ru-na.

The Grip Is Properly Termed Epidemic Catarrh.

As Pe-ru-na Relieves Every Form of Catarrh, It Has Probably Relieved More Cases of Grip Than Any Other Remedy

The Fear of Grip Makes People Nervous.

There is no remedy in the world that meets the conditions produced by the grip better than Peruna.

Peruna strengthens as it renovates, soothes while it stimulates, heals as it expurgates.

It reaches the source of all diseases of the mucous membranes by its action on the vaso-motor system of nerves.

After-Effects of the Grip.

Every person who has had la grippe during the last year should take a course of Peruna.

The grip has produced catarrhal inflammation of the whole mucous membrane, and good health is impossible until these are restored to a normal condition. This Peruna will do.

A great many remedies have been suggested for this condition from time to time, but Peruna is the only remedy that has gained great popularity in these cases.

It has seldom failed to give satisfaction during forty years' experience and still occupies the unique position of being the leading and most generally used remedy for the after-effects of la grippe.

W. H. Parsons is Ex-State Senator and Ex-Special Judge of the Supreme Court of Texas, and was also Brigadier-General in Confederate Army. In a recent letter from 925 H street, N. W., Washington, D. C., this prominent gentleman says:

"Upon the recommendation of personal friends and many strong testimonials as to the efficacy of Peruna in the treatment of the numerous symptoms of the grippe with which I have been afflicted for four months past, I have been induced to undergo a treatment with this justly celebrated formula. I feel a decided change for the better after using it only one week.

"It is especially good in toning up the stomach and has had a decided effect upon my appetite. I therefore feel much encouraged that I am on the road to complete restoration.

"My numerous friends in Texas, where I have had the honor to command a brigade of her Veteran Cavalry in a four years' war, may accept this voluntary testimonial to the merits of Peruna as a sense of obligation on my part for its wonderful efficacy."—W. H. Parsons.

No Time Like the Present.

If you are suffering from the after-effects of la grippe—if you have become discouraged in your attempts to cure yourself with other treatments, take a bottle of Peruna now.

A bottle of Peruna taken during the beginning of the disease is worth more than a dozen bottles after the trouble has become deep-seated.

La Grippe Affected Lungs.

Mrs. Olive Cushman, Fonda, Ia., writes:

"Two years ago I was taken very sick with la grippe. It started on my lungs. Our home physician did all he could for me, but it did me but little good. I then wrote to Dr. Hartman and he prescribed for me. I followed his advice and my cure is permanent, I am sure. I have a good appetite, sleep well and enjoy life. I am so happy to be well once more. 'A friend in need is a friend indeed,' and such a friend has Peruna been to me."

Pe-ru-na, a Good Medicine for La Grippe.

Mrs. Louisa Eastman, Lancaster, Wis., writes:

"I am all right. I do not think I need any more treatment. I am able to do my own work which I could not do at the time I wrote you. My cough is gone, my appetite is good, I sleep good, and my bowels are all right. I think Peruna is a good medicine for the grip."

Knives Are Tiny Saws.

Knives, no matter how carefully sharpened, are little saws. The grinding away of the steel, done by the stone, is not an even work, but when the edge gets thin is a process of tearing away tiny bits of steel by the grit of the stone. This tearing makes the teeth. A fine stone makes fine teeth, a coarse stone coarse teeth. A carving knife used on meat is sharpened on a coarse stone or a steel and has coarse teeth, although its edge is thick. Its action in parting the meat is more that of a saw than a fine wedge. No matter how soft it may be it will not cut easily unless it is drawn over the meat and not simply pressed down. A razor, however, with its paperlike edge, will cut into flesh with a simple pressure. It is a wedge dividing the fibers of flesh just as a wedge of iron divides the fibers of the log it splits. But a razor is a saw, too, only as it is ground on the finest stones and later finished with a leather strap, its teeth are very fine indeed—hundreds and hundreds to the inch of blade.—C. H. Claudy in St. Nicholas.

Origin of Curtain Calls.

The first curtain call took place on the evening of Feb. 26, 1743. On that memorable evening Voltaire's "Merope" was performed for the first time in Paris. The author was known to the Paris public, but nothing that they had seen of his had pleased them so much as "Merope," and the enthusiasm found expression in noisy demands to see the author. In a letter Voltaire says this of the incident: "They dragged me out and led me by force to the box occupied by the Duchesse de Villars and her daughter-in-law. The whole theater seemed to have gone mad—all shouted to the duchesse to kiss me. The noise became so great that the lady finally obeyed. So I was, like Alain Chartier, publicly kissed, but he was asleep, while I was wide awake." Now authors answer similar calls by appearing before the curtain. They gain in so far that they can be seen better by their audience, but they must dispense with the duchesse's kiss—at least in public.—Berliner Tageblatt.

Pronunciation of "Theatre."

If "theatre" was originally written "theater" in English, has its pronunciation also varied among the orthodox—that is to say, was there ever a time when correct speakers said "theayter," as many of the incorrect still do? There is no direct evidence in verse of a serious kind for such pronunciation so far as we know. Shakespeare certainly pronounced the word as we do now, says a London journal. But since "theayter" does really represent a long "a" of the original Greek and Latin it is not easy to understand how the vulgar could have blundered on to it of their own accord. It would have been more comprehensible if they had turned an orthodox "theayter" into "theater," just as the second "a" in "Amasis" goes too often popularly shortened now. The French language has had to mark the length of the "a" in "theatre" by giving it a rather irregular circumflex accent.

Luck in Falling.

"It's a peculiar thing the tricks that luck will now and then play a chap," said a prominent physician recently. "Take, for instance, the breaking of bones in one's body. Did you ever stop and think how very many hard and high falls a man can have, light on rocky ground with half his body twisted under the other half, so to speak, and come off with not even a scratch? Then, again, a fellow will just trip over his own foot and, falling to the ground, break a leg or an arm. A good many will say it all depends on how one alights, but that seems to have absolutely nothing to do with it, as I have seen a man alight in a certain way from a high fall and never injure himself, and then again have I seen a second chap alight in the same identical way and break a leg and an arm."—Columbus Dispatch.

Diplomatic Reticence.

The social reformer was paying a visit to the convicts in the penitentiary and asking them various questions.

"And what are you doing here, my friend?" he said to a good looking man in the shoeshop.

"Making shoes," was the reply that discouraged any further inquisition in that direction.

Discharging the Cook.

"Well, cook's gone at last, John," said Mrs. B.

"Good. You must have had more courage than I gave you credit for to discharge her."

"I didn't do it. She discharged herself. I flattered her so about her cooking that she thought she was too good to stay with us, and off she went."

Music Hath Charms.

"Waiter!" called the customer in the restaurant where an orchestra was playing.

"Yes, sir."

"Kindly tell the leader of the orchestra to play something sad and low while I dine. I want to see if it won't have a softening influence on this steak!"—Tit-Bits.

Shifting the Blame.

Husband—Where did I leave my spectacles last night? Wife—Let me see! I saw them somewhere, but I can't remember where it was. Husband—That's just like a woman—can't remember anything.—Exchange.

Coming Forth.

Stage Manager—Why didn't you go on when you got your cue, "Come forth?" Super—Oi was waitin' for the other three to go on first. Sure, an' how could Oi come fourth if I wint first?"

CATCHING THE TROLLEY.

By TAYLOR WHITE.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

Colbrook glanced at his watch and started to run. The Chester trolley started from the public square on the half hours. He had just time to make the 11:30. Could he do that there would be just time to speak to Enid and get back in time to take the western express that would connect in Chicago with the Overland. That would get him in San Francisco just in time to catch the Empress of China.

He wanted to tell Enid that his chance had come at last and ask if she would wait. An unexpected turn of affairs had put him in a position to speak of marriage, a thing he had not dared to even think of for at least a year yet.

He slipped down the foggy street with the easy stride of a cross country runner and smiled as he heard behind the soft patter of other hurried footsteps. The man behind would never reach the car first if that was what he was running for.

Then suddenly the steps ceased, and a moment later a mob came tearing around the corner, raising the hue and cry. Colbrook kept on. He felt no interest in a thief with Enid in Chester and the car about to start. Then suddenly a blue coated form started up before him, and he almost ran into the policeman's arms. An instant later he had been scientifically collared and the mob had come panting up.

The last to arrive was a fat policeman, still violently puffing from his exertions. He took a fresh grip on Colbrook's collar and, with a flourish of his club, entreated him to come quietly. For the first time Colbrook realized that he was under arrest.

"Look here," he said, "you are making a mistake. I'm not the man you're after."

"I know it," agreed the officer pleasantly. "I was after a man in green pants and a red coat, but I guess you'll do." He took a fresh grip on his club as though anticipating trouble and looked at his brother officer.

"I'M SO SORRY!" SHE GASPED.

"But see here," insisted Colbrook. "I was running to catch the Chester trolley. I had to make the 11:30, and I was sprinting. I heard some one running behind me, and suddenly he must have dodged into a doorway. That was probably your man."

"Quite likely," was the cheerful response, "but all the same you can tell that to the sergeant."

"But I have to get to Chester and back in time to catch the western express," he pleaded. "I am leaving on that for China."

"Through train?" laughed the officer appreciatively. He evidently regarded Colbrook as a humorist.

"I am Jennings Colbrook," he said patiently. "I am with the Fontellen company. You can call them on the phone. Perhaps I'll have time to go out on the train if you will drop this nonsense."

"You drop yours," was the sharp command. "I know you fellows. Look out that he doesn't throw nothin' away, Rafferty." Rafferty nodded his understanding, and the trio headed a procession for the police station.

The desk sergeant was a newly promoted roundsman impressed with a sense of his dignity. Something in Colbrook's manner offended him, and he refused to listen to his plea that the Fontellen company be notified.

"What's the use of botherin'?" he demanded. "Sure I recognize you as Boston Mike. What have they to do with the likes of you? Tell that to the judge when you're arraigned."

At a motion of his head Colbrook was led back to the cells, and, this being his first arrest, he did not know that he could bribe the officers to get word to his employers.

His threats to have the whole matter shown up only added to the doggedness of the sergeant, and in answer to his third threat he was told that the sergeant would be back in the cells with a night stick presently if things did not quiet down.

After that he could only sit in silent despair and wonder what the outcome could be. If he did not catch the next steamer, the agents of the English company would be on the ground first. It was through his old time friendship for Garson that he had gained the early tip that led to his being promoted to be foreign salesman at more than double his old salary.

Now this mistake would cost him not only his promotion, but probably even his position, and he could only sit helpless in his narrow cell and rail at fate.

Then the grated half of the cell door was darkened by a form, and he sprang to his feet.

"I'm the bull in this precinct," announced the newcomer. "Don't throw that bluff," he added as Colbrook's eyes went up in inquiry. "You know what a bull is."

"I was always under the impression that they possessed four feet and horns," he said.

"That's a good bluff, but it don't go," said the visitor. "I guess you know what plain clothes men are by any title."

"The precinct detective? I see," said Colbrook.

"The fairy what had her leather swiped wants to know what you did with it."

"I'm sure I don't know what became of the lady's purse," he said pleasantly. This slang was more understandable.

"Stow that," admonished the detective. "I think she'll let you off, and it's a ten spot to me if you tell."

"But I tell you there is a mistake," he insisted. "Your men picked up the wrong man."

With a snort of disgust, the ward man turned away. Here was a chance to make $10 gone through the thief's stubbornness. He was back in a minute, though, and Colbrook caught the echo of a lighter step on the stone flagging.

"The dame wants to give you the third degree herself," he said. "Don't you give her no lip of your lip or I'll come in there."

"I am at the lady's service," said Colbrook hopefully. He understood from the previous conversation that she could free him by refusing to make a complaint. It should not be very difficult to convince her that he was not the thief.

He started as she spoke, but some impulse restrained the exclamation that sprang to his lips.

"What was in the purse that was so valuable?" he demanded, making his voice harsh and unnatural.

"I cannot explain," she said, with embarrassment — "some keepsake of which I am very fond. The purse was a keepsake. I am most anxious about that."

Colbrook's heart gave a leap. It was the purse he had given her that she sought, and it was Enid Sangston who was pleading with him to restore her property.

"I'll get you another purse just as good," he said, "if you will get me out of this, Enid."

With a scream she started back from the bars as Colbrook moved into the light. "You?" she gasped.

"I was running to catch a car," he explained. "It was misty, and the thief slipped into a doorway, and the mob thought that since I was running it must be I who was the culprit. Then the officer collared me and brought me here."

"I'm so sorry!" she gasped.

"I'm not," he disagreed. "I see the hand of fate. You see, I was running to catch a car to Chester to see you. You were in town, and I should have missed you."

"But why such haste?" she asked.

"I am leaving this afternoon for China," he explained. "My chance has come at last, and I wanted to ask you to wait for me, dear. Will you?"

"I think," she said, "that we must bow to fate. I ran into town unexpectedly, and— Suppose you had caught the car and gone out there. I should not have had a chance to say goodby."

"Now we can say it over the lunch table, and there's still time for a trip to the jewelry store, too, if you will explain to the officer that I was not the thief."

That formality was quickly accomplished, and presently they were passing the desk. Colbrook leaned over and shook the sergeant's hand.

"Goodby, sergeant," he said heartily. "I am very much obliged."

"I wonder what he meant," mused that official as he regarded the bill that had been left in his palm. "Sure, I thought he'd make trouble with the chief."

As to Liberty.

Liberty was first introduced into this country with a shipload of tea. Since then it has been seen occasionally in odd places.

Liberty has no permanent place of residence, but boards out. At present it is staying with friends just outside of Washington.

Liberty is a great traveler. It has visited in time New York, Boston, Philadelphia and all the other large centers. Having been introduced to the municipal government, met the leading politicians and visited the principal places of amusement, it has then left town.

Liberty is the one thing that everybody believes in, but no one has ever seen. Traces of it are occasionally found in public documents, but rudely and unintelligently speaking it is caviare to the general.

It is popularly supposed that some day Liberty will be in full charge of everything. When this day will be no one but Liberty knows.

In the meantime give us liberty or give us life in a republic.—Puck.

Careful.

"Mr. Pumpus is very careful of his dignity," commented the observing girl.

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "He naturally has so little that he does ought to be careful of it."—Washington Star.

Short Kings.

There is hardly a king in Christendom whose wife does not overtop him by a head.

King Edward is quite six inches shorter than Queen Alexandra.

The Czar, a little man, is overtopped a full head by the Czarina.

Kaiser Wilhelm is of medium height, but the German Empress is tall, and that is why the proud Kaiser will never consent to be photographed beside his wife unless she sits while he stands.

The King of Italy, short and squat, hardly comes up to the shoulders of the tall, athletic Queen Helena.

The King of Portugal, though fatter, is less tall than his Queen.

Even the Prince of Wales is shorter a good four inches than the Princess.

And the young King of Spain is several inches shorter than his Queen.

Gibraltar has 70 miles of tunnel.

It is estimated that 20,000 tramps are wintering in Chicago.

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

Mining operations will be commenced just as soon as weather conditions permit.

HARD ON THE OLD FOLKS.

How Congo Natives Get Rid of Their Aged Relatives.

Major Powell-Cotton has just returned from a remarkable journey in Central Africa, after a two years' sojourn among the savages of the Dark Continent. A romantic interest is to be added in the fact that Major Powell-Cotton, who had intended on the conclusion of his expedition to return to England to get married, decided not to interrupt his journey, and accordingly arranged for his fiancee to get out to Africa. The marriage took place on her arrival at Nairobi, British East Africa, in 1905, and afterwards Mrs. Powell-Cotton shared her husband's hardships and dangers, having, among other things lived for many months among the pygmies in the heart of the Ituri Forest. She was the first white woman ever seen by these people.

The authorities made concessions never before given to a foreigner in the way of hunting in the reserves, and giving permission to kill a limited number of rare animals. Speaking of his hunting experiences, Major Powell-Cotton said:—"Bands of elephant and buffalo roamed the twilight solitudes at will. In all my travels I never saw so many elephant and buffalo tracks together. Frequently, as we warily cut our way through the tropical growth in single file, the huge beasts crashed through the undergrowth on either side of us, and the experience, especially at night, was necessary particularly trying to an English woman on her first visit to Africa."

The explorer relates a curious story of how the natives in the neighborhood of Wadelai dispose of the old folk when they become a burden. As soon as the infirmities of age manifest themselves, the old people are given a soothing draught, and wrapped in a fresh antelope skin. Thus attired, they are carried by members of their family to a spot some distance from the village, and are abandoned in the grass close to a native track. The first native coming by sees what he thinks is an antelope, and spears it, whereupon the victim's family emerge from their hiding place, and express horror and surprise at the unfortunate incident.

—The water of Stony Lake is rising very fast. It is all open round the shore now and if there comes a high wind the ice would soon go to pieces on the rocks.

—The late Speaker St. John left an estate of less than $10,000. This is reminiscent of the late Sir John A. Macdonald's estate, and points to two honest Canadian politicians.

—The organ recital to be given to the George street Methodist church on 26th of April, is eliciting much interest. Mr. Herbert Sanders, a brilliant organist, holding many English degrees, who has a brother in Peterborough, will be present.

—The Easter meeting of St. Andrew's (Women's Foreign Missionary Auxiliary, will be held next Tuesday afternoon at 3.30. Rev. Horace Peckover will address the meeting. Invitations have been extended to all the missionary societies in town.

—Messrs. A. J. McClellan, lately of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co., and Gerald K. Rackham, intend going into the coal and wood business in this city under the name of "The Ontario Coal Company. They will open an office in a day or two.

"Preventics" will promptly check a cold or the Grippe when taken early or at the "sneeze stage." Preventics cure seated colds as well. Preventics are little candy cold cure tablets, and Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis., will gladly mail you samples and a book on Colds free, if you will write him. The samples prove their merit. Check early Colds with Preventics and stop Pneumonia. Sold in 5c. and 25c. boxes by J. D. Tully.

A Known Interred May be Dug up

In view of the fact that still more human remains have been dug up in the course of excavation now in progress for the new Collegiate Institute it might be noted that Mr. Jas. Stevenson yesterday told a Times representative that among the bodies still reposing in the Roman Catholic part of this former cemetery, is that of a sister of the late Miss Cowin, who formerly lived at the south-west corner of Water and Murray streets. This lady was laid to rest there some 54 years ago, and it is to be hoped that her homewild not be moovered.

EMPTY CANISTER

And How it Led to Knowledge of Better Things.

A housewife found the coffee canister empty, one day, which proved a blessing to her husband and mother.

"Up to about four years ago I had been a great coffee drinker.

"In an hour or two after my usual morning cup, I would be weak and nervous.

"A friend told me I must quit drinking coffee and suggested that I try Postum. The first day I did not enjoy the taste of Postum very much, for the reason, as I found out later, that I did not make it right.

"I soon learned to boil it hard for 15 minutes, according to directions, and soon I was enjoying my Postum as much as I had formerly enjoyed coffee. The headaches quit as well as the weak, nervous feelings and the improvements in my health was commented on by my family and close friends.

"For some time I served both coffee and Postum at our table, as my mother and husband would not give up their coffee. One morning I found the coffee canister empty, so I took special pains in preparing the Postum and said nothing about not having coffee to serve.

"My husband and mother both drank it and did not detect the difference. After we had finished the meal I told them what they had been drinking, and said I guessed we would all drink Postum. It has made a great difference with us.

"During a visit to an aunt's they all drank coffee except myself and little girl. Gradually she and then another would try Postum until, when I left for home, all but two out of the family of ten were using it, and all were greatly improved in health. Later I learned that coffee never appears on their table nowadays." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are affected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

● ● ● ● ● ●

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a bipod cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

Yesterday morning Mr. Jas. Hoar of this city, called at the police station, and said he had seen it noted in The Times that a man named Thos. Mr. Hoar yesterday sent a letter to the deceased's brother in the State of Washington. The brother of the deceased, named Michael Hoarn (the discrepancy in spelling is attributable to the Spokane chief of police, taking the name phonetically) who lives at 1148 Queen street, West.

The Greatest Investment in The World Today Is Good

Western Canada —LAND

The eyes of the entire world are upon this great, new country; the people are flocking here by the hundreds of thousands, and three great trans-continental railroads are penetrating every portion of it.

We absolutely own and control 50,000 acres of picked wheat lands—25,000 acres in Saskatchewan and 25,000 acres in Manitoba. These tracts are the finest hard wheat soil, the very kind settlers are looking for at the present time. All lands ranging from four to eight miles from railroad, and having purchased both blocks in their entirety we are able to dispose of of them to investors for less money than they could have bought portions of the areas from the previous owners.

We are disposing of these lands in six blocks of 500 acres each, and two blocks of 10,000 acres each to individual investors, private syndicates, organized in any particular community, and syndicates formed by us among our own clients, etc., so that any person with $1,000 to invest can enjoy the same privilege of profit as the man with big capital.

Two of the latter syndicates are already in course of formation, a one-fifth share of which can be handled for $1,000, but any one wishing to interest himself in the same should correspond at once, as these details will be completed within ten days at the most.

The Price of These Lands to Syndicates or Individuals Ranges from $6.00 to $10.00 per Acre

Our system of organizing the syndicates is simple: Some reputable banker or financial man is appointed as trustee for the protection of all, to whom all cheques are made payable. The private syndicates are for the convenience of men in any particular town or city, and in this regard we would like to hear from men who are in a position to invest $1,000 or more and could assist in getting together one of these little organizations.

We have realized approximately one million dollars in the past five years for men who have co-operated with us in Western Canada farm lands and no investor ever met with loss. Some of the syndicates we have formed have made as high as 900 per cent. on the amount invested, and in no instance have the profits been less than 50 per cent. We would like to give you details by letter of a few of these transactions.

One big advantage in our plan is our selling organization. If you buy a section or a portion of a section of Western Canada lands you must sell it yourself as it is too small to receive much attention from Agents; when you are interested in a block of 5,000 or 10,000 acres, besides buying at a lower price, your proposition is always before the buyers through our Agents in the Central and Western States.

After satisfying yourself as to our financial standing, integrity and success, write and we will tell you news about land opportunities in Western Canada that will surprise you.

Stock in Chartered Cobalt Silver Mine

Great Opportunity for Ground Floor Purchase of Good Shares

As is generally known, there are many good and some poor mining stocks of Cobalt silver mines now on the market. Before investing in any Cobalt propositions it is wise to thoroughly investigate such stocks as may be offered for sale.

Among the mines that have been granted a charter by the Ontario Government and that has already been proven to have a good showing of silver, is the property of the St. Lawrence-Cobalt Mining Co., which consists of five claims, one of which is within three-eighths of a mile of the celebrated Trethewey, Buffalo, Hudson Bay, Silver Queen and other paying mines whose stocks have recently advanced highly in price.

Steam drills are to be installed and work pushed ahead strenuously at once on the St. Lawrence-Cobalt mine. This company is now offering 50,000 shares at 25 cents each for a very brief time, when they will be advanced to 50 cents. For full particulars, or stock, write or wire at once to Mr. W. E. Waterman, President, 1104 D. S. Morgan Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Well Endorsed Mine Proposition

High Assay Made of a Thunder Bay District Gold Mine.

Any one versed in mining stocks, before seriously considering purchasing shares in the same, naturally looks to see whom the personnel of the officers and directorate are.

The Douglas Mining Co., Limited, owns outright 240 acres in the Thunder Bay District, embracing six claims, each of which contains exceptionally rich gold bearing ore. Samples taken and tested by the Government assayer resulted in the nine different lots tried showing gold which ran $8, $10.20, $16.20, $15.80, $32.20, $84.40, $1180.40, $2718.00 and $5052.00 per ton. This is a wonderful test, particularly when one considers that the assayer is a Government official with no personal interest in the results.

As before noted, the personnel of the directorate is a matter for serious consideration; with such well known names as C. J. Gzowski, of Toronto, as President, and John Douglas, of Toronto, as Managing Director, the good faith and credit of the Douglas Mining Co. is established beyond dispute. This mine is capitalized very low, only having a capital of $500,000, in so many shares at $1 each. There are 250,000 shares in the treasury, and 100,000 are, for a limited time, offered at 30 cents per share. Necessary buildings have already been erected. For full particulars address Geo. Laird, 921 Traders' Bank Building, Toronto. 'Phone Main 4970.

Says Germany Will be Master of the World

Author Predicts Kaiser Will Extend Empire to Bagdad After Conquering Austria and Russia.

Berlin, April 15.—The world triumph of Germany by means of an aerial navy is foretold in a book of prophetic history which has excited all Europe. In this startling work the author, Rudolph Martin, predicts that the Kaiser will have extended the German Empire as far as Bagdad, in Western Asia, annexing Austria and Russia, by the year 1913, and this will have been mainly accomplished by a great fleet of armed airships.

The book is written with minute detail and much knowledge of international affairs and government. Herr Martin also put into it a great deal of scientific knowledge, and impresses the reader with a sense of the high probability of what he foretells. Here is a summary of the great events prophesied in this remarkable book:

On New Year's day, 1910, the German Emperor makes a speech to generals and admirals assembled in Berlin; monarch proves conclusively that the flying machine is the peculiar privilege of Germany; that the future of Germany lies in the air.

But the speaker has counted without Japan. On October 2, 1912, Japan declares war against Russia. The Czar flies. The news of his flight reaches the Duma at 5 o'clock in the afternoon of March 15, 1913, and a motion is carried unanimously by which the House of Romanoff-Holstein-Gottorp is formally deposed and Russia declared a republic.

Throughout Russia anarchy breaks out. Men of strong personality come to the front in the general confusion, the chief of them one Nicholas Sacharoff of Moscow, assuming the position of dictator of Russia and in his train carries upward one General Suwaroff, adventurer and military genius, in airships.

Michael Suwaroff is president of the Baku Aero Club, established thereof the presence of the petroleum wells. Through the Zeppelin factories he has obtained a fleet of aeroplanes made of aluminum. With these he plans the invasion of China.

No sooner are these plans completed—for Suwaroff, travelling the air, has reconnoitered as far as Persia—when everything is upset again by Germany's declaration of war on the Russian republic, made on April 19, 1916. Suwaroff learns the news by wireless telegraphy on the same momentous afternoon at 3.12.

Like an arrow he pounces upon Poland, conquers it, and hastens onward to Berlin. There, a few thousand yards above the city, the decisive conflict takes place, and the Germans are finally victorious. Suwaroff flees into the fastness of the Pamir plateau.

From this moment dates the expansion of Germany to Bagdad. The peace of Warsaw, signed on May 10, 1919, makes the Kaiser practically dictator of the world. Austria and Hungary, Poland and Russia, Asia Minor and Persia, all are tranquilly annexed. By 1930 the Germanic domination—vast, militant, prosperous—extends from Berlin to Bagdad unimpeded.

Funeral Party from Lethbridge Here

Mr. Walter Lamb Brings His Wife's Remains for Burial at Kingston.

A sad party arrived in the city on Saturday, when the remains of a local mother's daughter were brought here, en route to Kingston, for burial.

Mr. Walter Lamb of Lethbridge, accompanied by his three children, accompanied the remains of his wife who died in Lethbridge a week ago Saturday, at the age of 33 years. The late Mrs. Lamb was a daughter of Mrs. Edward Roddy, of 329 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough. The deceased leaves to mourn her loss her husband and three children, Edna, Irene and Walter, her mother as noted and five brothers, Harry of Port William, Frank of British Columbia, John of Kingston; Fred and Edward of Peterborough; also four sisters, Mrs. John McGill, Mrs. Joseph Turnbull, of this city; Mrs. Robert Cochrane, of Sydenham, Ont., and Mrs. W. B. Westlake of Portsmouth, Ont.

The Oddfellows of Lethbridge, contributed a very handsome floral design, also a society of Lethbridge, entitled the "Old Timers," sent another beautiful floral tribute. Mr. Lamb, who is a member of the Oddfellows Order, informed The Times that the I.O.O.F. of Lethbridge, did everything possible for him and his family in their recent bereavement. The members of this order took entire control of the funeral arrangements at Lethbridge, even taking entire control and watch of the remains as they lay in the church of England, Lethbridge, of which the deceased was a member from two p.m., after the funeral service had been celebrated there until two a.m. of the next day when the party took train for the east. The funeral party leave for Kingston this morning.

Bones Found Not Those of Indians

(To the Editor of The Times).

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me to correct what I consider a mistaken or misleading statement made in one of the evening papers on Saturday night. In speaking of the bones now being unearthed during the Collegiate Institute excavation work, the paper intimates that these are the bones of Indians, and gives a somewhat romantic theory that the number being found is due to a battle fought in bygone years between Indians.

Anyone having a knowledge of ethnology or physiognomy could tell at a glance that the skulls found are those of whites not Indians. Besides the Indians, when such fights a enumerated, on this ground, did not use knives such as dug up last week near these bones, and which was encased in a modern white man's make of sheath, with machine made rivets.

Yours truly,
OSTEOLOGY.

Married While on His Death Bed

New York, April 15.—Don Carlos Francisco, A graduate of Rutland College and owner of a summer hotel and other property in Rutland Vt., is dead, after an operation for peritonitis. Before his death he was married to Miss Florence Hover, to whom he had been engaged for several years. The ceremony was performed while the bridegroom lay in bed waiting for the surgeons to operate on him. As the result of the deathbed marriage, Mrs. Francisco will inherit the wealth of her young husband.

When the black robed minister had performed his office, he made way for the white gowned surgeons. The operation for peritonitis was performed an hour after the wedding ceremony. Young Francisco never rallied from the shock.

COMMERCIAL UNION BEE STILL BUZZING

New York Sun Believes it Will Come.

TO FOLLOW DISSAPOINTMENT

Says Canada Will Not Wait Much Longer for Preference.

New York, N. Y., April 13.—The Sun says: "According to a telegram from London, Unionist and Imperialist statesmen, who are now backed only by a weak minority in the House of Commons, whatever strength they may have recovered in the metropolis and other municipalities, look upon the future of Canada as the most momentous question in international politics with which Great Britain is confronted at the present time. Most of the Liberal leaders on the other hand evidence no interest in the matter, and seemingly would not care a jot if the Dominion should separate from the Mother Country. We are justified therefore, in inferring that during the term of the existing Parliament, which is likely to last until 1912, no effort will be made by the British Government to stop Canada from entering into most cordial relations with the United States, even though the relations should culminate in commercial union. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that reciprocity in any form is no longer a living issue in Canada. That is doubtless true for the nonce, but the issue is certain to be revived the moment Canadian people become convinced that no important concessions are obtainable from Great Britain. About the futility of making any effort at the coming Colonial Conference, or on any subsequent occasion to obtain one concession of solid value to the Dominion, to wit, a British tariff change that should give a preference to foodstuffs imported from the colonies, there can linger not a trace of doubt among intelligent Canadians. Of course, manufacturers who have developed considerable home trade in the Dominion would not welcome that of the Mother Country. The manufacturing interest, however, is already dwarfed by the agricultural, and the latter's overshadowing importance will daily become more unmistakable, as the immense capabilities of the grain producing North-West Provinces are turned to fuller account."

The Peterborough Light and Power Company wishes to remind its customers that TODAY, Monday, April 15th, is the last day discount will be allowed on March accounts.

A Hard-Luck Tale of Two Canadians

London, April 14.—Re Empire Day, the superintendent of education in Nova Scotia wrote Earl Meath that his Lordship's policy has been adopted in Nova Scotia, and to a man applauded to the echo.

Two wealthy young North-West Canadians, who came to England in December, honeymooning, were robbed in London in January of £215. By pawning their clothes, they settled their hotel bills and, walked to Cardiff, where they expected money from Canada. It had not arrived, and they got work on a tramp steamer for a voyage to the Mediterranean. On their return they were destitute, and were kept for several weeks by a man in humble circumstances until the arrival of the long-delayed funds. They sailed for Canada Saturday.

R. W. Perks, M.P., is sailing in May to Canada to confer with leaders of the Methodist Church re the scheme of the Self-Help Union in the Methodist world.

Poor Man Helps

St. Petersburg, April 14.—U.S. Ambassador Riddle has transmitted to Baron De Meyendorf, head of the Russian Red Cross, $5000 collected through the American Red Cross for the relief of the famine sufferers in Russia.

The only other American contribution received by the embassy is $250 sent by Mr. Elyneki of Davenport, Ia. Mr. Eyneki, who was born in Russia, explains in a moving letter that he is a poor machinist and that the remittance represents a great part of his savings, but he could not enjoy the money while unfortunates in the fatherland were starving.

The Free Economic Society, which is conducting extensive relief work has received $20,000 from New York.

Kincardine, April 14.—Kincardine Hotelkeepers are wondering what is going to drop, and will as the result of a visit from two men who registered at the Royal Hotel recently as A. K. Carter and R. Austen, Buffalo, N.Y. Austen paid for his dinner and then went to the Morgan House until Monday when he returned to the Royal. The supposition now is that they were detectives employed by the license department to see whether hotelkeepers are "keeping hotel" and whether or not there is any truth in complaints that some hotelkeepers are persistently violating the law respecting illegal hours of sale. They came here from Port Elgin by stage. Carter was accompanied by his wife. They left later, Mrs. Carter going by train and the two men by stage north. Both men have since been gathering information and it is generally suspected that Austen's name is Stokes and that Carter is a man from Bruce township, and that his real name is Cameron. They are wondering whether any developments will follow the visit of these men.

They spent a night in Tiverton and a night in Underwood, and had apparently no business on hand.

Dog-Train of Furs in Edmonton City

Edmonton, April 14.—The appearance of a dog-train of furs on Edmonton's main thoroughfare the other morning was a picturesque sight, reminiscent of the frontier days, and one only to be seen at rare intervals now.

The four burly huskies in the train showed signs of fatigure after their long journey of 300 miles from Pelican Rapids, on the Athabasca, accomplished in five consecutive days, with intervals of rest.

Their driver and owner, a square-jawed, capable-looking Indian named Alexandre Dezzerkin, preferred to bring his furs and dogs directly to Edmonton, instead of leaving his dogs at Athabasca Landing, as the average trapper does.

VALUABLE FURS.

His furs include seven coyote skins, six cross-fox, eighteen red fox, two otter seventeen lynx, ten mink, seven martens, three weasel, one large black bearskin, and five moose skins.

Some idea of the value of Dezzerlais' cargo may be had from the fact that martin skins are worth from $10 to $25 each; mink and lynx 3 to $9; otter, $15 to $25; cross-fox and coyotes, $3 to $5; red fox $5 to $7.

With moose skins and bear skins, Dezzerlais' furs will total about $500. A great part of this he will exchange for supplies, and will soon wend his way homeward with his dogs to the silent places of the north.

FROM PEACE RIVER CROSSING.

Another consignment of furs was that brought down directly from Peace River Crossing, 500 miles north.

It belongs to a young English man named H. Pope, of the Crossing, who did a little trapping during the past winter as a profitable form of recreation. A pile of cross-fox, red fox, lynx, and marten attests to his industry.

Mr. Pope reports an unusually severe winter in the north, with many moose ranging near the settlements.

A Cruiser Launched

Newcastle, April 14.—The British armored cruiser, Invincible was launched yesterday from the Elswick shipyard.

She is one of the trio of largest cruisers in the world, of which, the first, the Indomitable, was launched March 16.

Under the admiralty order the greatest secrecy was observed, in order to prevent any details regarding the new warship leaking out.

Her dimensions are the same as those of the Indomitable, namely, she is 17,250 tons, is 530 feet long, exceeding the older armored cruisers by 60 feet; has turbine engines and is expected to attain the high speed of 25 knots an hour.

The armament of these three cruisers-to-be-orders eight 12 inch guns, almost equaling the main battery of the Dreadnought.

Funeral Like Pionic

Evansville, Ind., April 14.—By the express wish of W. G. G. Schneider, an eccentric old soldier, a band played "Ida, Tame to the Old Town Tonight," and "Ach, du Lieber Augustine" over his grave at his funeral.

Following the services the friends went from the cemetery to an uptown saloon, and there were treated with beer, provided for by the dead man. Prompted by curiosity a great crowd filled the modest little undertaking shop where the funeral was held.

Hundreds followed the band to the cemetery, where "So Long, Mary," "Down Where the Wurzburger Flows" and "No, Because Your Hair is Curly" made the occasion seem like a picnic.

Schneider, before his death, placed $200 in the hands of one of his friends, and left directions how it should be spent. He especially directed that no preacher should be at the funeral.

English Lord is Sent to Jail for Swindle

London, April 14.—At the Clerkenwell sessions yesterday Lord Wm. Nevill was found guilty of the charge of swindling a pawnbroker and was sentenced to a year's imprisonment.

Lord William Nevill is the fourth son of the Marquis of Abergavenny. He was sentenced to five years' penal servitude on Feb. 15, 1898, for fraud in connection with a promissory note, the prosecutor being Captain Spender-Clay, who in 1904 married Pauline Astor, daughter of Wm. Waldorf Astor.

The crime for which Lord William was sentenced yesterday was stealing from a pawnbroker a box containing $2000 worth of jewelry, by exchanging it for a similar box, apparently containing the jewels, but which, when opened, was found to contain two pieces of coal wrapped in tissue paper.

Many fashionable women attended the trial. Lord Neville, who was stylishly dressed, bore himself with composure.

The judge, in pronouncing sentence, said he should treat the case as that of any other prisoner, and would give him the same sentence as he would a workingman.

This Plucky Scotchman Will Make Another Try

Lost His Fortune in the Western States but Will Try Again in the Red Deer District of Canada.

Red Deer, Alta., April 14.—Fourteen years ago a young Scotchman, Geo. H. Alton by name, decided to leave his native country and try his luck in the Western States. In Aberdeen he had many pictures painted before him of the glorious free life of the Western States, and after reading all the literature available on the country, he was seized with the fever so badly that he decided he would go out and try his luck in that great country, where all one had to do was to ride around his land and see that the wolves were not destroying his cattle.

SPENT HIS $20,000 FORTUNE.

The vision of himself decked out in chaps, spurs, and several very large weapons, was very pleasing, also the visions of fighting Indians was a great drawing card to him. He failed to persuade him against taking a rash step, counselling him to go first and see how he liked the country, and if pleased with it to then invest his heritage amounting to some $20,000.

But the advice of the father was not taken, and the lad sailed away from Liverpool with enough baggage to have set several settlers of the present Western Canada up in housekeeping; in this baggage were broncs, hopes for the next ten years, clothes of all descriptions, and enough armament to do the Calgary 15th Light Horse. From New York he travelled west until he reached the State of Wyoming, and he then purchased a large piece of land about 40 miles from Cheyenne, and spent the balance of his fortune in buying cattle.

For a number of years he flourished in the cattle business, and at one time had increased his fortune up to $40,000. He then brought his two younger brothers out to the ranch, and all were as happy as clams until three or four years ago the snows struck his cattle and the loss started. He made a game fight, as any Scotchman would, but to no avail, for no sooner had he eradicated the snows than he ran into a couple of dry years, and his remaining cattle nearly all perished from lack of food and the thirst which comes in semi-arid country. Alton and his brothers stayed on until he had lost everything, hoping for a good year to recoup his fortune, but the year never came, and this spring he decided to try the country of Alberta, where one may get a little cold but never suffer from the drought.

DOES NOT DESPAIR.

The other afternoon he passed through this district, not downhearted at having lost his entire fortune, but looking forward to the time when once more he could return to his home in Aberdeen with his fortune increased tenfold.

This is the kind of settlers that Alberta wants, never beaten, and always ready to make a game fight to overcome the bad hand of fortune.

Mr. Alton will settle on the north side of the Red Deer River, and was very much surprised to see the mild weather at Calgary as he had read in many of the papers from the States of the country being one mass of frozen grains, and the dead cattle lying around the streets.

New Steamer to be Launched May 15th

It is anticipated that the splendid new palatial twin screw steamer "Otonabee" will be launched or on about the 15th of next month. Among other excursions already booked for the "Otonabee" during the coming season are those held under auspices of the Murray street Baptist church for the 4th of July; Charlotte street church on July 19th, the Printers in August. Several other of the local societies and churches are now in communication with the Otonabee Navigation Company's directorate regarding dates for their respective annual outings on the new steamer.

It is understood that the launching of the Otonabee will be attended with quite elaborate ceremonies.

New Bank of Commerce Sign

On Saturday afternoon Messrs. Sherwood & King placed two handsome bronze tablets on the Canadian Bank of Commerce building, one at each side of the main bank entrance. These solid bronze tablets are about 2 feet 6 inches in height and some 2 feet wide and of handsome design, with the words in bas relief "Canadian Bank of Commerce, Savings Bank."

English Papers are Sarcastic Over Trial

London, April 14. The time consumed in the trial of Harry K. Thaw for the murder of Stanford White, compared to the rapidity and exactness of English justice, as illustrated in the case of Rayner, the murderer of Wm. Whiteley, in which he court confined the lawyers and witnesses to actual facts connected with the crime and comparisons between American methods, which are declared to be melodramatic in the extreme, are what is alleged to be the "more dignified procedure of the English bar," form the basis of the comment in the papers here.

The papers publish long editorial articles on the Thaw case, and most of them review the various stages of the trial. It is declared that American prestige has suffered severely, and the case is called a "signal proof of the utter inefficiency of American statesmanship to evolve a practical legal system."

One paper says, "Law, dignity, common sense, and order, all have been wanting." While another declares, "A strong English judge would have made short work of the trial, drawing to a minimum its degrading sensationalism."

GUSH AND GREASY SENTIMENT.

Surprise is expressed that Justice Fitzgerald did not dominate the proceedings, as would an English judge, and prevent the defence from getting up gush and greasy sentiment about a girl wife," and the prosecution from "such a flagrant abuse of justice," by the questions Mr. Jerome was allowed to put to Thaw's wife. Such methods of counsel generally are condemned.

The editorial articles practically ignore the interest this trial awakened in England. A majority of the newspapers here have devoted much space to pictures and news of and he comment on the trial, breaking the record in this respect of all other foreign criminal cases.

Pitiful Stories of Distress in China

Shanghai, April 14.—Telegrams received by the relief committee here today from schilgreal famine districts report that the distress is growing worse.

Some of the sufferers are contending gainst fever or smallpox in addition o lack of food.

Many startling incidents are recorded, such as a father knocking his head on the ground as a sign of thankfulness for the relief brought by a visitor, the man being too weak to rise.

The face of a boy who applied for and was so plump that at first assistance was denied, but the lad was afterwards stripped and it was seen that his body was greatly emaciated, the plumpness of his face being due to starvation.

A starving man choked himself to death by swallowing almost a whole biscuit, which had been given him by a casual visitor.

A woman with three children was found wee-ing on a bridge where her husband had fallen dead from starvation.

A husband, wife and their five children were found in a house starving to death huddled together, clothed in rags, and eating the bark of trees, their only food.

A woman came to the headquarters of the relief committee in the field, said her husband died of starvation and begged for food for herself and her few days' old baby.

SCOURGE OF PNEUMONIA

Within the last few years pneumonia has advanced from an inconspicuous place in the table of fatal diseases to the head of the list, it has been only a short time ago since the country was wrought up over the spread of "the white plague." Consumption was considered, and at that time actually was, the most dreadful scourage against which the health authorities waged a continuous fight, Pneumonia was classed with typhoid and Bright's disease as a secondary cause of mortality.

Today probably pneumonia stands as the most fearful danger to which the Canadian people are normally exposed during the winter and spring seasons. Statistics prepared by insurance actuaries furnish a gruesome exhibit of the devastation wrought by it. Not only has it had more deaths to its credit during the past winter than consumption, but it is becoming more virulent each year, while consumption is of less deadly effect as it is being studied and climatically treated. Consumption is generally of slower progress and its victims are given time to seek remedial agencies. But pneumonia attacks the vigorous as well as the weak and it throttles in days or hours. Against consumption there are many remedies and regimens to stay its progress. But the victim of pneumonia has little chance and it is the very irony of fate that the stronger one is physically the quicker will he succumb to its fatal attack.

The medical men in the United states are becoming aroused to the ravages of this scourge that is general throughout that country. Scientists are delving into the secrets of its fatality with the hope of inventing methods of successfully combatting it As yet physicians confess themselves almost helpless to cure pneumonia, which is as mysterious as it is treacherous. But while medical skill is delving and experimenting the warfare of the disease goes on, leaving its victims in a thousand communities in aggregate more than all the battles of all the wars in which this continent has ever engaged.

Farmers' Picnic to Idyl Wyld

The annual farmers' excursion held for some years to Jubilee Point, which has always been well patronized by people from the city and its nearby country as well as by the Rice Lake district farmers, will this summer, early in June be run to Idyl Wyld. Arrangements have been completed whereby this annual outing will, this year, the fine new twin steamer Otonabee, now on the stocks will convey the Peterborough crowds and other steamers from Rice Lake points and the Trent River will assist in making this excursion one of the best on record. Games and aquatic sports have been arranged for.

AN ARGUMENT OF FORCE.

Napoleon Smashed a Vase, and the Treaty Was Signed.

Early in April, 1797, the people of Austria demanded peace with France. Negotiations were begun in the vicinity of Leoben. Bonaparte, in an interview with the Austrian plenipotentiaries, said to them, "Your government has sent against me four armies without generals, and this time a general without an army." In the treaty which the Austrian commissioners projected the first article stipulated that the emperor of Austria thereby recognized the French republic. "Erase it!" exclaimed Napoleon. "The existence of the republic is as plain as the sun. This article is only fit for the blind. We are our own masters and shall establish any government we prefer. If one day the French people," he continued, "should wish to create a monarchy, the emperor might object that he had recognized a republic." The preliminaries were soon settled, Napoleon signing for France, thus placing himself on an equal footing with the emperor of Austria. The formal treaty known as Campo Formio was signed in October, 1797. Austria fulfilling the pledges she had already given. The Austrian plenipotentiary protested against the distribution of the provinces beyond the Adige. Napoleon was angered at this, and, seizing a vase, dashed it to the ground, exclaiming, "If it is not so arranged I will break your monarchy as I have broken this vase!" This argument of force, as demonstrated to the diplomat was convincing, and the treaty was signed.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

Don't Develop the Mind at the Expense of the Body.

The man or woman who would train the mental faculties without any reference to the physical shows a faulty qualification for the work in which he or she may be engaged. The mind may be ever so well trained and stored with knowledge of the books, but unless there is behind it a reasonably strong body life runs the risk of being a failure; if not that, an existence of pain that serves as a limitation upon its possibilities. It is a species of cruelty to educate the mind at the expense of the body. Better let a child grow up into manhood or womanhood with an inferior education than with a better education of the mind and a body weakened in the effort.

The fact that so many men in this country who have succeeded in business and in professional and public life have been the sons of farmers, whose early life has been spent out of doors, has been a subject of remark. May it not be accounted for on the ground that in their boyhood their physique was developed so that in after life, besides their mental acquirements, they had strong bodies with which to do the work they have so successfully performed? This is not only possible, but very probable.

A Stolen Trade Secret.

The manufacture of tinware in England originated in a stolen secret. Few readers need to be informed that tinware is simply thin sheet iron plated with tin by being dipped into the molten metal. In theory it is an easy matter to clean the surface of iron. Dip the iron in a bath of boiling tin and remove it enveloped in the silvery metal to a place of cooling. In practice, however, the process is one of the most difficult of arts. It was discovered in Holland and guarded from publicity with the utmost vigilance for nearly half a century. England tried to discover the secret in vain until James Sherman, a Cornish miner, crossed the channel, insinuated himself surreptitiously into a tin plate manufactory, made himself master of the secret and brought it home.

Women and Jewelry.

"Women know a great deal more about buying jewelry now than they knew twenty-five years ago," said a jeweler. "When I first started in the business a clerk with a persuasive tongue could talk a woman into buying most anything. It wasn't safe for her to step inside a shop unless she had a man along. Now the average woman knows more about jewels than the average man. Of course they can be fooled—anybody can but an expert—but as a rule she buys with a surprising knowledge of value, and her taste in the cutting and setting is excellent."

Brains.

"A man stood on his head twenty minutes in order to win a wager. He died the next day."

"What killed him? Congestion of the brain?"

"No; if he had had any brains he wouldn't have done it."

Specified.

"When in trouble," said the eminent lecturer, "refrain from worrying."

"But, doctor," asked a woman in the audience, "how can we?"

"Anyway," replied the lecturer, "refrain from worrying other people."

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If it's painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets

The Greatest Investment in The World Today Is Good

Western Canada LAND

The eyes of the entire world are upon this great, new country; the people are flocking here by the hundreds of thousands, and three great trans-continental railroads are penetrating every portion of it.

We absolutely own and control 50,000 acres of picked wheat lands—25,000 acres in Saskatchewan and 25,000 acres in Manitoba. These tracts are the finest hard wheat soil, the very kind settlers are looking for at the present time. All lands ranging from four to eight miles from railroad, and having purchased both blocks in their entirety we are able to dispose of of them to investors for less money than they could have bought portions of the areas from the previous owners.

We are disposing of these lands in six blocks of 500 acres each, and two blocks of 10,000 acres each to individual investors, private syndicates, organized in any particular community, and syndicates formed by us among our own clients, etc., so that any person with $1,000 to invest can enjoy the same privilege of profit as the man with big capital.

Two of the latter syndicates are already in course of formation, a one-fifth share of which can be handled for $1,000, but any one wishing to interest himself in the same should correspond at once, as these details will be completed within ten days at the most.

The Price of These Lands to Syndicates or Individuals Ranges from $6.00 to $10.00 per Acre

Our system of organizing the syndicates is simple: Some reputable banker or financial man is appointed as trustee for the protection of all, to whom all cheques are made payable. The private syndicates are for the convenience of men in any particular town or city, and in this regard we would like to hear from men who are in a position to invest $1,000 or more and could assist in getting together one of these little organizations.

We have realized approximately one million dollars in the past five years for men who have co-operated with us in Western Canada farm lands and no investor ever met with loss. Some of the syndicates we have formed have made as high as 300 per cent. on the amount invested, and in no instance have the profits been less than 50 per cent. We would like to give you details by letter of a few of these transactions.

One big advantage in our plan is our selling organization. If you buy a section or a portion of a section of Western Canada lands you must sell it yourself as it is too small to receive much attention from Agents; when you are interested in a block of 5,000 or 10,000 acres, besides buying at a lower price, your proposition is always before the buyers through our Agents in the Central and Western States.

After satisfying yourself as to our financial standing, integrity and success, write and we will tell you news about land opportunities in Western Canada that will surprise you.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 6200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assay. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges, with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

"Respectfully submitted, from danger or seemed to be in the least disconcerted by its presence.

"It seems, sir," said Joseph to his master later in the day, "that you've kinder stumped them. They don't understand you."

"They must be kept in check by fear. There is no other way," replied Meredith rather wearily. Of late he had felt less and less inclined to exert himself.

"Yes, sir. Those sort o' men."

Meredith made no answer, and after a little pause Joseph repeated the words significantly, if ungrammatically, "Those sort o' men."

"What do you mean?"

"Slaves," replied Joseph sharply, touching his hat without knowing why.

"Slaves! What are you talking about?"

The man came a little nearer.

"Those forty men—leastwise thirty-four men—that we brought from Msala; Mr. Durnovo's men that cultivate this 'ere simiacine, as they call it. They're different from the rest, sir."

"Yes, of course they are. We do not hire them direct; we hire them from Mr. Durnovo and pay their wages to him. They are of a different tribe from the others—not fighting men, but agriculturists."

"Ah"— Joseph paused. "Strange thing, sir, but I've not seen 'em handling any of their pay yet."

"Well, that is their affair."

"Yes, sir!"

Having unburdened himself of his suspicion, the servant retired, shaking his head ominously. At any other time the words just recorded would have aroused Jack Meredith's attention, but the singular slothfulness that seemed to be creeping over his intellect was already acting as a clog on his mental energy.

The next morning he was unable to leave his bed, and lay all day in a state of semi-somnolence. Joseph explained to the men that the leader was so disgusted with their ungrateful conduct that he would not leave the tent. In the evening there was a slight attack made from the southern side. This Joseph was able to repulse, chiefly by his own long range firing, assisted by a few picked rifles, but the situation was extremely critical. The roll of the big war drum could be heard almost incessantly, rising with weird melancholy from the forest land beneath them.

Despite difficulties the new crop of simiacine, the second within twelve months, had been picked, dried and stored in cases. Without on the plateau stood the bare trees, affording no covert for savage warfare, no screen against the deadly bullet. The camp was placed near one edge of the table land and on this exposed side the stockade was wisely constructed of double strength. The attacks had hitherto been made only from this side, but Joseph knew that anything in the nature of a combined assault would carry his defense before it. In his rough and ready way he doctored his master, making for him such soups and strength giving food as he could. Once, very late in the night, when it almost seemed that the shadow of death lay over the little tent, he pounded up some of the magic simiacine leaves and mixed them in the brandy which he administered from time to time.

Before sunrise the next morning the alarm was given again and the little garrison was called to arms.

He took his station on the roof of a hut in the center of the little stockade, and from there he directed the fire of his men. Crouching beneath him he had a disabled native who loaded each rifle in turn, and just by way of encouraging the others he picked off the prominent men outside the stockade with a deadly steadiness.

If Joseph detected anything like cowardice or carelessness, he pointed his rifle with a threatening frown toward the culprit, with instant effect. Presently, however, things began to get more serious. This was not the sudden assault of a single chief, but an organized attack. Before long Joseph ceased to smile. By sunrise he was off the roof running from one weak point to another, encouraging, threatening, fighting and swearing very hard. More than once the enemy reached the stockade, and, ominous sign, one or two of their dead lay inside the defense.

He was everywhere at once urging them, forcing them up to the stockade. But he saw the end. Half dazed, the blacks fought on in silence.

In the midst of it a hand was laid on Joseph's shoulder.

"There," cried a voice, "that corner. See to it."

Without looking round, Joseph obeyed, and the breached corner was saved. He only knew that his master, who was almost dead, had come to life again. There was no time for anything else.

For half an hour it was a question of any moment. Master and man were for the time being nothing better than madmen, and the fighting frenzy is wildly infectious.

At last there was a pause. The enemy fell back and in the momentary silence the sound of distant firing reached the ears of the little band of defenders.

"What's that?" asked Meredith sharply. He looked like one risen from the dead.

"Fighting among themselves," replied Joseph, who was wiping blood and grime from his eyes.

"Then one of them is fighting with an express rifle."

Joseph listened.

"By heaven!" he shouted. "By heaven, Mer—sir, we're saved!"

The enemy had apparently heard the firing too. Perhaps they also recognized the peculiar sharp smack of the express rifle amid the others. There was a fresh attack—an ugly rush of reckless men. But the news soon spread that there was firing in the valley and the sound of a white man's rifle. The little garrison plucked up heart, and the rifles, almost too hot to hold, dealt death around.

They held back the savages until the sound of the firing behind them was quite audible even amid the heavy rattle of the musketry.

Then suddenly the firing ceased the enemy had divided and fled. For a few moments there was a strange tense silence. Then a voice—an English voice—cried "Come on!"

The next moment Guy Oscard stood on the edge of the plateau. He held up both arms as a signal to those within the stockade to cease firing, and then he came forward, followed by a number of blacks and Durnovo.

The gate was rapidly disincumbered of its rough supports and thrown open.

Jack Meredith stood in the aperture, holding out his hand.

"It's all right; it's all right," he said.

Oscard did not seem to take so cheerful a view of matters. He scrutinized Meredith's face with visible anxiety.

Then suddenly Jack lurched up against his rescuer, grabbing at him vaguely.

In a minute Oscard was supporting him back toward his tent.

KENNEDY COBALT, Ltd.

is recommended

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 32. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 20 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 80 acres of J. B. 32 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 6 inch nicolite, 12 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 673-1233-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

New Liskeard, 17th November, 1906.

We offer a few more shares at Fifty Cents (50 c); par value One Dollar ($1.00). The property is being developed as fast as possible, and we cannot promise that stock will be sold at less than par for very long. Don't wait until it is $3.00 to invest, giving others big profits for what you should have bought sooner. We want you to get in on the ground floor and share in the big profits. For a limited time only we will accept subscriptions at 50 cents—the stock is slated for a sharp advance very soon. Send marked cheque or money order.

Earlier Monday Boat for Peterborough

Largely through the efforts and influence of the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association, it has been so arranged that those desirous of getting to business early on Monday mornings after their Sundays at the lakes this season, will be able to do so, as on Monday mornings a steamer will leave some two hours earlier than heretofore. This boat will leave Stony Lake at such a time to enable passengers for Toronto to catch the 8.25 train in Peterborough. This change has been largely due to the efforts of Mr. G. W. Rice, of Toronto chairman of the transportation system of the association, who has been negotiating with the upper navigation companies for some time.

The change will undoubtedly insure a much larger Sunday population at the lakes.

They found that both the hotels and yards were in cleanly and sanitary condition.

Inside Maple Sugar History

This is the time of year that many a pound of coarse brown sugar is carted out to many a farmer's house to return a pure maple syrup, and guaranteed maple sugar. The sugar increases during its round trips and no charge made for freight, some one hundred and fifty per cent. in value. The grocer winks the other eye as he makes the first sale, the farmer grins over the credulity of "them city fellers," and the good housewife who buys the pseudo maple product tells her dearest enemy how "I got some of the loveliest purest maple sugar or syrup from that dear old honest farmer, Mr. ——. That man can always be depended on for selling pure stuff!"

Simple Way to Kill Catarrhal Germs in Nose, Throat and Lungs.

The only natural and common sense method known for the cure of catarrhal troubles is Hy-o-mei. It is breathed through an ingenious pocket inhaler, so that its medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells of the nose, throat and lungs, killing all catarrhal germs, soothing the irritated mucous membranes, and restoring a healthy condition.

If you suffer from catarrhal troubles, such as offensive breath, raising of mucous, frequent sneezing, husky voice, discharge from the nose, droppings in the throat, loss of strength, spasmodic coughing, or a feeling of tightness across the upper part of the chest, you should begin to use Hy-o-mei at once. It will destroy all disease germs in the nose, throat and lungs, and provide the blood with additional ozone.

Because department store merchandising is a very conservative and profitable business.

Our Department Store Investment is the Best

Because our thousands of shareholders will do as owners do and have always done: "talk the business," "boom the business," "advertise the business," and influence their friends and relatives to trade at their own store. This will place our business on a self productive basis immediately. They certainly will do this because they have always done so under the same indentical conditions.

Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago, Ill.,

each in themselves tremendously successful, having each made millions of dollars for their stockholders.

Limitation of Subscription

There will be no individual control in this Company. We prefer to sell no more than 100 shares to any individual desiring an investment with us, as we desire to obtain the widest possible distribution of our shares.

How the Shareholder is Safeguarded in Every Way

Your stock if preferred is guaranteed seven per cent.

Your shares are full paid and non-assessable.

Your dividends are cumulative and participating.

Every dollar received by the Company for stock is going right into the business for active service. You have vote and voice in the management of the business. When we say your stock is preferred, we mean that it is guaranteed seven per cent. per annum, before the common stock can be paid one penny. The preferred stock has absolutely the first claim—in effect a first mortgage on all assets of the Company—the property—the property rights, trade marks, trade rights, etc., and on the net profits of the business.

Botha Reaches London Given Warm Welcome

London, April 14.—General Botha, ex-commander of the Boer army, and now first premier of the Transvaal colony under British rule, arrived here yesterday to attend the conference of colonial premiers.

The reception accorded the general at Southampton, and in London was remarkably hearty. Great crowds cheered him wherever he appeared.

At Southampton he was officially welcomed by the mayor and corporation of that city and in reply to the address General Botha humorously referred to the previous occasion when, on the battlefield, he had been surrounded by Englishmen against his will.

The general added that he was thankful now that he was in a position to allow himself to be surrounded by any number of Englishmen without fear of the consequences.

A New Tobacco

Paris, April 15.—Yielding to the request of the medical fraternity, the government has put on the market nicotineless tobacco. Night of Deputations to the City Fathers

The City Council are Apparently Anxious to Meet the Views of Merchants---Appeals Against Existing Public Measures Dealt With.

The city fathers met in committee of the whole last night, when there were present:—His Worship, Mayor R. F. McWilliams, and Aldermen Bradburn, Morrow, Tovey, McIntyre, Elliott, Leary, Duncan, Phelan, Wilson, Stevenson and Johnston.

Deputations representing the Retail Merchants' Association, the Master Bakers' Association, and citizens living in the vicinity of the corner of Charlotte and Park streets, in reference to the park located there, addressed the council.

OBSTRUCTING SIDEWALKS.

Messrs Robert Fair, H. LeBrun, E. F. Mason, S. A. Oke, William Fuller and Frank Mason, all addressed the council, asking that merchants be allowed to unpack goods on the sidewalks or streets up to three p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, and to 10 a.m. on Saturdays up to 10 a.m. The petitioners claimed that it was utterly impossible to handle goods as delivered by local freights within the prescribed limits. Particularly is this the case regarding perishable goods. The petitioners were willing to abide by a two-hour limit from delivery of goods at their premises.

PROJECTING SIGNS.

Messrs. R. Fair, R. M. Ray, C. McClelland, P. Cowell, E. F. Mason and S. A. Oke, addressed the committee, and urged that the sign by-law be amended so as to permit of present business signs (no illuminated being retained without the imposition of a yearly tax. They all acquiesced in overhanging illuminating signs being taxed, but opposed the same principle being applied to the average business or legal signs, of which there are a hundred or two in the city at present.

WEIGHT OF BREAD.

Mr. N. Lusk, representing the Master Bakers, asked that the present by-law be amended to permit of bread being put up in one and a half and three-pound loaves, without being labelled, instead of two and four pounds as at present permissible under the existing by-law governing the size of loaves.

WEST END PARK.

Messrs. Layfield, and Hughes addressed the committee with a view to getting the park at the corner of Charlotte and Park streets fenced in, graded and sodded.

RESOLUTIONS.

Ald. Johnston moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre,—That the west end park matter be left in the hands of a committee composed of Ald. Tovey, Phelan and Leary, and the sum expended on this work not to exceed $50 —Carried.

Ald. Phelan moved, seconded by Ald. Wilson,—That the solicitor prepare a bylaw to comply with the bakers' request.—Carried.

Ald. Elliott moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre,—That the bylaw governing the obstruction of sidewalks and streets, with merchandise, be amended according to the request of the Retail Merchants' Association.—Carried.

Ald. Elliott moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre,—That the bylaw be amended to permit of overhanging signs, providing they do not project more than 18 inches from the building, and providing they are high enough not to interfere with pedestrians.

The vote was a tie, 6—6, with the mayor's vote, and the bylaw was allowed to stand as passed.

Ald. Elliott moved that the bylaw governing exposure of edibles be amended to permit of foodstuffs in perishable goods erecting stands not less than 12 inches high, and not to extend more than 48 inches from the building, on which to display their goods.

No seconder was secured to this motion, and the council adjourned.

Local Railwaymen Attend a Funeral

Yesterday afternoon the last mortal remains of the late Edwin Taylor, one of the oldest engineers in the employ of the G.T.R., were laid to rest in Belleville. Several members of the railway fraternity from Peterborough went to Belleville in the morning to attend the funeral.

The late Mr. Taylor was for the last forty years in the employ of the G.T.R. as engineer, Montreal and the main line was his first route, but during the past thirteen years his run had been between Peterborough and Belleville. His record in the service was a clean one, and not one complaint was known to have been lodged against his work. His sad death will be regretted by his many friends in the city, among whom he had long been a favorite.

Buffalo for Canada

Denver, April 15.—Howard Eaton, of Wolf, Mont., announced here today that the herd of 400 or 500 bison owned by Michael Pablow, now at the Flathead reservation, 35 miles west of Missoula, Mont., is about to pass into possession of the Canadian Government to which Pablow has given an option for the purchase of the animals.

Some time ago Mr. Eaton secured an option on the herd at a valuation of $300 a head and presented it to the United States Government.

President Roosevelt was desirous of preserving to the United States the herd, comprising one-half of all the bison surviving in this country. Mr. Eaton said, but no appropriation was made for the purpose.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Gathered From the Local Police Station.

On Saturday night Mr. Geo. Cochrane, of the Children's Aid Society, had quite an exciting and hot time at W. Duncan's residence, Sherbrooke street. It will be remembered that several times Duncan's little boy has been taken from him and placed in the shelter; some months ago the Children's Aid society decided to give Duncan another chance and let the boy return home. On Saturday complaints were received that the little fellow was not being properly cared for, and in the evening Mr. Cochrane went to Duncan's house to get him. However, the parents strenuously objected to letting him go and, together with the family dog, had a mixup with the official, handling him pretty roughly, tearing his clothes and ripping his collar off. Mr. Cochrane 'phoned the police and P. C. Meharry went down. On arrival he found Mr. Cochrane standing outside the door, showing evident marks of the fray. The two went into the house, whereupon Duncan drove his fist into Mr. Cochrane's face. The officer at once placed him under arrest and brought him to the Station.

At yesterday's Police Court the case of Ernest Lowes, 15 years of age, was investigated. Lowes was charged with having entered the store of James Scott, corner of Perry and George streets, and stealing a bologna sausage. The prisoner explained that he and other boys had been playing ball. The ball went through the window and one of the boys reached in to get it and threw out a roll of the sausage, and he (Lowes) threw it back. As the complainant had to go to Lindsay, the case was enlarged until Wednesday. He was allowed to go on his own recognizance to appear.

Thomas White was on trial for being drunk early Sunday morning. Thomas pleaded guilty and was handed out the usual $5 fine charged for Sunday lapses in temperance and given ten days to dig up the V.

A domestic squabble between Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kennedy, corner of Smith and Bethune streets, was aired in court. Mrs. Kennedy charged her good man with having struck her with his fist. The evidence reminded one of a Punch and Judy play in real life, being a continued series of mutual recriminations and exchanges of tongue lashings. It seems that this couple do not live beneath the shadow of the dove of peace, nor worship at the altar of Cupid. They have been in court over this same kind of matrimonial squabble before, in fact the Magistrate said it seemed almost a daily thing for Mrs. Kennedy to run after him with complaints. He was thoroughly disgusted, and was hot the only tin can on the dump in that respect with the pair, and discharged the case. Judging by Kennedy's story, his homecoming is somewhat of a warm kind; his last being a shower of tin dishes, kettles, etc., fired at his head. On the other hands Mrs. Kennedy alleged that Kennedy blows in his money and out of town himself.

William Duncan, of Sherbrooke street, was charged with having assaulted Mr. Geo. Cochrane. The case was enlarged until Wednesday, Duncan being allowed out on his promise to appear for trial.

Dropped Dead at Canadian General

Alfred Hammond, a Young Englishman Dies of Heart Disease.

Yesterday afternoon as Alfred Hammond an Englishman, 37 years of age, was engaged at the work in the machine shop of the Canadian General Electric Company's works, he was seen to throw up his arms and drop suddenly. His comrades came to his assistance, but the vital spark had been extinguished suddenly, by heart disease. Dr. Young, medical officer of the company, was at once summoned but death had prevailed before he arrived. Mr. M. McFadden, the Hunter street undertaker, took charge of the remains, and the funeral will be held Wednesday. The deceased, as far as could be ascertained has no relatives in this country.

Dr. Gray, coroner, did not consider an inquest necessary.

"BLUE DEVILS"

Get Rid of Indigestion and Things Will Look Bright and Joyous.

Even in the present era of prosperity and good times everything appears black to those people who are suffering wretchedly from some form of indigestion. Where digestion is quick, complete and easy there is a joyous and hopeful outlook, but indigestion causes depression.

The want of a safe, effective cure for sick headache, indigestion and stomach troubles, was always felt until the prescription known as Mi-o-na stomach tablets was put up in popular form and proved its invariable success in the many forms of indigestion.

After a few days use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets the headache, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, nervousness, sleeplessness, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach—will disappear and perfect digestion and a good skin will show that the vital machinery is once more running smoothly.

Mi-o-na is to be taken before each meal and it will stimulate the secretive and digestive juices and strengthen the whole of the digestive system so that the unpleasant full feeling will be absent and indigestion prevented.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c box of Mi-o-na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c.

Sharp Canadian Does up Smart Buffalonians

Man who Gets $800 for Nothing Came to this City.

The Buffalo Commercial of recent date, tells a story that not only are Canadians not as slow as the Yankees would have us believe, but that even in Uncle Sam's domains, there is "A sucker born every minute." This paper noted that on March 15th ult., a Canadian of venerable aspect and guileless appearance called on two or three Buffalo capitalists and told them a story that caused these astute Americans to sit up and take notice.

He said that in the northern part of Ontario he had discovered a silver mine that in richness of virgin silver would make anything yet found in Cobalt look like a fully cancelled meal ticket with two weeks' pay still in the dim and distant future. This venerable and simple looking Canuck drew the "hot-con" into these Buffalo capitalists so that they became overflowing with eager desire to acquire the silver Eldorado. The Canadian farmer explained that the mine he had found, and which contained lumps of solid virgin (pardon the repitition) silver as large as the skulls dug out of Central Park, and alleged by an evening contemporary to be those of prehistoric Indians. To make a long story short the Buffalo capitalists, after absorbing the news of sudden wealth conveyed by the simple life, greybeard Canadian, asked the venerable one what he wanted. He required that his travelling expenses both way, board at a high priced hotel, and other incidentals, together with sufficient coin (or bills) of the U.S. realm would about suit his case and make known and buy the property where this fortune lay. He told these crafty Buffalonians that the mine lay on the farm of a innocent farmer in North Ontario the sale of which reminded one of anglefolow's, would be Slavers bride, when the prospective bride's father asked (or was it the slaver?) that "the sun is poor, the land is rid." He said the unsuspecting agriculturist would sell the land for a song. The five astute Americans put up $800 between them for the venerable one's expenses and the price of the land. The Canadian suggested that the lawyer, whom the quintette had named to accompany him to the property and to see that the deeds were clenchingly made out, take the money as he (the Canadian) was a stranger. However, the cute Buffalo men, afraid the Canadian might take offense, and thus throw over their prospects of future wealth, insisted on the venerable one retaining the $800.

When the venerable one and the Buffalo man reached Toronto, they purchased tickets for North Bay. The Buffalo man said to the Canuck, "I guess we'd better get our sweeping ear tickets." To this the white bearded one replied, "Well, I can't never sleep in them Pullman berths, they's too stuffy for me, I'd sooner spend the night in a regular day car, but don't let me stop you, if you can sleepin a Pullman!"

On this the Buffalo financier went to bed, shortly after that rain pulled out. Before North Bay was reached, he came back to seek him of the emaciated spinach attachments, but in vain. In response to a request the conductor said: "Why, yes, I remember your friend, the old man with the beard getting abroad at Toronto. But, say! there's something I can't understand. That old man had a ticket through to North Bay, and the first station past Toronto, he jumped off, and I became waited for the down train back."

That's all the story from the Buffalo end. But yesterday a Times representative had a letter from a friend in Buffalo fully corroborating the whole story, and intimating that the Buffalo men had received word, some time since, that the venerable one had gone straight through to Peterborough and had even communicated with friends in an eastern town.

This latter statement can be authenticated.—Ed. Times.

Italians on a Jag Thrown Out of Buggy

At noon yesterday two sons of Sunny Italy had an experience they will not forget for some time. It seems that the two Italians set out with a rig to drive to Lakefield, after hiring a horse and rig from Wolstenholme, the Charlotte street livery man. At the corner of Water and Smith streets, owing possibly to a supercargo of the hop extract that such immigrants indulge in, at times, they commenced to beat the horse. The animal ran at a lively gait and the driver losing control, the animal ran into some trees along the street. The buggy was badly smashed and the two occupants were thrown out. One of them had his hand crushed and the other had his face scratched, besides receiving several other bruises. The horse was also injured to some extent. Mr. Wolstenholm is demanding payment for damages sustained.

Colonial Conference Welcomed by the King

Earl of Elgin Officially Opened Gathering of the Premiers---British Cabinet Ministers Attended Session.

London, April 16.—At the opening of the Colonial Conference Lord Elgin read a telegram from King Edward welcoming the premiers and expressing a wish for the success of the conference. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman followed, welcoming officially on behalf of the government the premiers, and the King's telegram was answered in turn by each of them. After the official welcome the British cabinet ministers withdrew, and the conference proceeded to discuss the future course of business. It was decided that ministers other than prime ministers and their secretaries should be admitted to the conference; it was also decided that in future meetings of the conference the press would not be admitted. The Canadian Associated Press understands that no decision has been arrived at as to how far future proceedings will be made public, when the conference adjourned.

REPORTERS EXCLUDED.

London, April 16.—The fourth conference between the premiers of Great Britain's self-governing colonies and the British colonial secretary was opened yesterday at the colonial office under the presidency of the Earl of Elgin, secretary of state for the colonies.

Reporters are not admitted to the conference, so the public will have to be contented with strictly censored official summaries of each day's proceedings until a blue book on the conference is issued, months after its final adjournment.

The premiers present included Dr. Jameson, of Cape Colony; General Louis Botha, premier of the Transvaal; Alfred Deakin, the Australian premier, Sir Joseph G. Ward, premier of New Zealand; Frederick R. Moor, premier of Natal; and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, premier of Canada. Premier Robert Bond, of Newfoundland, will arrive in the middle of the week. The premiers were accompanied by their advisers. A number of British cabinet ministers attended the opening session.

Premier Campbell-Bannerman opened the proceedings with a speech of welcome in which he outlined the subjects for discussion, such as preferential trade between the colonies and Great Britain and among the colonies themselves, a project providing for a permanent council of imperial defence and immigration, with minor questions like penny postage, naturalization laws. The premier earnestly expressed the hope that the deliberations would have useful results. Each of the colonial premiers made a brief reply, after which the conference discussed the procedure and adjourned. Meetings will be held three times a week and they are expected to last at least a month.

LAURIER OPPOSED PUBLICITY.

Premier Campbell-Bannerman's speech yesterday was largely composed of generalities. He only touched lightly on the subject of tariff preferences which to the colonial representatives is the most important matter to come before the conference and one on which they hope an agreement will be reached satisfactory to all parties concerned.

In regard to the decision not to admit reporters to the daily sessions, it is stated that the colonial representatives were as a rule in favor of publicity, but the Home government was opposed to it, and it is understood that Premier Laurier supported the home officials in this matter.

Worst Fire in the History of Hastings

Local Brigade Ready to go but Was Not Required.

Yesterday much excitement was evident throughout the city over the despatch received from Hastings stating that a $75,000 fire was raging in that burg.

The fire started during the night at the Coughlin House. A breeze fanned it, and at times the prospect of saving anything looked hopeless. The fire raged for several hours and the loss is estimated at about $75,000.

The fire started, it is thought, from an ash barrel at the Coughlin House, and before discovered, had made considerable headway. The whole town turned out, and a bucket brigade was formed to the river, but the flames were too strong to accomplish much, and the hotel was soon a mass of ruins. The wind carried the flames to Buck & Buck's store, and soon to Murray's meat shop. Wilson's implement house fell a prey. Then the fire shot across the street and cleaned out T. Howard's harness and express office, P. M. Howard's furniture s... Jas. O'Reilly's grocery, H. A. Wilson's gents' furnishings, John Tracey's fine shop and P. M. Howard's general store. Here the bucket brigade got in good work and just at the corner of main street and the street crossing the river, a final stand was made.

The post office was threatened, but was saved as was also W. T. Tate's furniture store.

The town, it seems had no fire engine with home. At one time it was thought the Peterborough Fire Brigade would be called into requisition, but this was unnecessary.

The fire losses will amount to $75,000, made up as follows,—

P. Hamilton, keeper of the Coughlin House, $5,000. No insurance.

Coughlin Estate, $10,000, partly insured.

Buck & Buck, $15,000. Insured.

T. Howard, $7,000. Insured.

P. M. Howard, $15,000. Partly insured.

John Tracey, $7,000. No insurance.

H. A. Wilson, $7,000. Partly insured.

James O'Reilly, $5,000. Partly insured.

Murray Estate, $1,000. Partly insured.

H. M. Fowlds, $1,000. Insured.

Local Agent Wanted to Handle Stocks

The Douglas Mining Co., Ltd., Has Splendid Mine.

In this issue of The Times appears an advertisement of the Douglas Mining Company that is well worth serious consideration by those seeking an investment that bears the ear marks of sound backing and lucrative results.

This company is capitalized for only $500,000, so that stockholders get in on an equitable basis instead of putting up the money for promoters and others to reap the harvest of dividends.

The name of C. S. Gzowski, of Toronto, as president of the company, is sufficient guarantee of the good faith of the advertisers. The company have had nine samples of ore taken from their property in the Thunder Bay District assayed, and the tests showed from $8 to $5052 per ton in value. 100,000 shares of stock of a par value of $1 each are offered for a limited time only at 80 cents per share. The company desire to procure a good local agent for this city and district to handle a block of the stock. For particulars write George Laird, 921 Traders' Bank building, Toronto.

Mr. Dennistoun in a Winnipeg Firm

Referring to a well-known Peterborough barrister, who recently left this city, the Winnipeg Free Press says:—

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, of Peterborough, a member of the bar of Ontario, was presented to the Court of Appeal yesterday and was called to the bar of this province. Mr. Dennistoun will join the firm of Archibald, Machray & Sharpe.

They are one of the oldest firms Winnipeg, and are the successors to original firm of Archibald & Howell, the latter now being chief justice of court of appeal. Mr. Archibald has recently retired from active practice.

Mr. Dennistoun will take charge of the counsel work for the firm which will shortly be reorganized on the retirement of Mr. Archibald.

The offices of the firm are over the Bank of Ottawa near the corner of Main street and Portage avenue. They

These Medical Facts

You Can Study With Profit

How few realize that twenty-five per cent. of all disease has its origin in some interference with the function of elimination.

The whole body exists by reason of the transfusion of fluids through its component parts.

Up to a certain point the body has power to reject to destructive elements, but this power is limited.

When it happens that the body is loaded with wastes and poisons which it can't eliminate, fermentation, decay, and germ life run riot through the blood.

Serious illness is the result unless nature is assisted by a cleansing tonic like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are purely vegetable, contain no mercury, no bismuth, no injurious metallic ingredient of any kind.

Such a medicine is the greatest possible assurance to every man and woman of health, spirits and contentment.

Grand results are achieved and famous cures made every day by Dr. Hamilton's Pills, as this letter proves.

From Newfoundland, Miss Lillian Anthony, of Upper Gullies, Conception Bay, writes: "In praise of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I must say that I have used them with grand success for three years. They never fail to cure me of indigestion or constipation. Formerly my face was full of pimples, but now my complexion is clear and ruddy. In many ways than I care to mention have Dr. Hamilton's Pills helped me; they would be good for every woman to use."

Insist on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c per box or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., or Kingston, Ont.

MUST CANADA FIGHT

Brigadier General Otter at a military dinner in Toronto said that he looked forward to a time when Canadians would have "to fight like the very devil" to defend their country from an invading foe. He bases his belief upon the fact that we have such a beautiful and rich country that some ambitious nation will certainly want to dispossess us of it. General Otter probably does not know anything more about the matter than any one else, but being military, he is doubtless only keeping within his rights in advising us in peace to prepare for war. What the future has in store for our country cannot be forecasted with any degree of accuracy, but it is difficult to see at the present time any nation with whom we are ever likely to be engaged in war. The only one that might want Canada is the United States, but there is no reason to fear a war of aggression from that quarter. There is nothing in Canada which the United States wants that cannot be secured much better by peaceful negotiation. While the notion that "manifest destiny" gives the whole continent to the republic is an item in the political creed of nearly every man, woman and child in the United States, all thinking people in that country look upon its present area as quite big enough for the time being at least. What may happen bye and bye they do not concern themselves about. It is conceivable that commercial interests might prompt a demand that all trade barriers between the two countries should be removed, and, failing the assent of Canada to such an arrangement, force might be resorted to, but such a possibility is exceedingly remote. Hence we regard the probabilities of war with our southern neighbors as not worthy of consideration. No European power could ever hope to effect a lodgment in Canada, or to maintain a foothold here if one should be, by some miracle, obtained. As in the case of the United States, it is conceivable that Germany in pursuance of her colonization ideas might think it worth while to attempt the conquest of Canada; but this also is hardly within the range of probability. Japan may do anything, but it is scarcely worth while for General Otter to sharpen his sword upon a grindstone in anticipation of a Japanese invasion. Therefore we hardly share in his anticipations of having to fight "like the very devil," who by the way was singularly unfortunate in the outcome of the only war in which he is alleged to have been engaged. This does not mean that Canada ought not to maintain a strong militia, and be ready for war, if war should unfortunately come. We are a part of the British Empire, an Empire that is coterminous with almost every country in the world, and we ought as citizens of that Empire to remember that its frontiers everywhere are ours and be ready to do our part towards defending them.

Death Recalls the Klondike Rush

Dawson City, April 14.—Sam is dead. He mushed softly over the high divide yesterday. With his nose snuffing the soporific vapor of ether, the old fellow did not know he was going. He went as a child asleep.

Such was the departure in Dawson the other day of the last of the most famous of all the dog teams of the North. Sam had been a landmark at the N.C. post in Dawson for years. It was he and four of his fellows—Whiskey, the leader; Teddy, Dan, and Mike—who made memorable trips from Dawson from Circle and Skagway in the momentous days when Klondike was the frenzied force of the world. Sam and his companions were five of the largest, most powerful, and handsomest huskies in the Yukon.

When the Klondike Camp was but a few months old these fine fellows were driven here by Caspar Ellinger with a load of mails from Circle. The mails sold for $1 per single mail.

The team then was bought by Al Wissell and Billy Walters, and soon afterward passed into the hands of the A.C. Company. The last consideration was $5,000. And they were worth every ounce of it. The old boys made one or two famous trips to Skagway and return, and then were dissipated more or less.

Whisky went mad on Sulphur, Mike and Terry and Dan died later, two of them from acute kidney trouble, seemingly contracted in the severe cold, and one from decline.

Sam outlived his fellows by years. The last several years he has been the petted and venerated veteran at the N.C. post, and has lived on the fat of the land. Gradually he grew old, like an aged man, and scarcely could hobble about to his meals. It was deemed a kindness to the old chap when the boys got Dr. Reid to let him sniff the heavenly chloroform and be wafted to that heaven whither go all good dogs.

Copper Stocks Always Pay Good Dividends

Rare Chance to Secure Stock in a Proven Copper Mine.

Those who have studied the history of the Anaconda and other great copper mines know the enormous possibilities that exist in copper stocks as well as the huge fortunes that have been made by Daly, Hill and others fortunate enough to get in on the ground floor on copper mine stocks.

The Nevada and Colorado River Consolidated Gold, Silver and Copper Company, Incorporated, own a property that is admitted by two of the best known American mining engineers to be "one of the greatest copper properties on the great copper belt that extends through Nevada and Arizona."

The company is now installing modern machinery and taking out ore, so that their mine is a proven success. Assays from their 21 claims run from $25 to $117.45 in copper, gold and silver. Copper ranges from 7 1-2 per cent. to 49 per cent. and $5 to $25 per ton in gold.

This company is now offering 100,000 shares at 15 cents per share for further developments. Messrs. Thos. Patterson & Co. are the Local Representatives.

Married While on His Death Bed

New York, April 15.—Don Carlos Francisco, a graduate of Rutland College and owner of a summer hotel and other property in Rutland Vt., is dead, after an operation for peritonitis. Before his death he was married to Miss Florence Hover, to whom he had been engaged for several years. The ceremony was performed while the bridegroom lay in bed waiting for the surgeons to operate on him. As the result of the deathbed marriage, Mrs. Francisco will inherit the wealth of her young husband.

When the black robed minister had performed his office, he made way for the white gowned surgeons. The operation for peritonitis was performed an hour after the wedding ceremony. Young Francisco never rallied from the shock.

A Cruiser Launched

Newcastle, April 14.—The British armored cruiser, Invincible was launched yesterday from the Elswick shipyard.

She is one of the trio of largest cruisers in the world, of which the first, the Indomitable, was launched March 16.

Under the admiralty order the greatest secrecy was observed, in order to prevent any details regarding the new warship leaking out.

Her dimensions are the same as those of the Indomitable, namely, she is 17,250 tons, is 530 feet long, exceeding the older armored cruisers by 60 feet; has turbine engines and is expected to attain the high speed of 25 knots an hour.

The Greatest Investment in The World Today Is Good

Western Canada LAND

The eyes of the entire world are upon this great, new country; the people are flocking here by the hundreds of thousands, and three great trans-continental railroads are penetrating every portion of it.

We absolutely own and control 50,000 acres of picked wheat lands—25,000 acres in Saskatchewan and 25,000 acres in Manitoba. These tracts are the finest hard wheat soil, the very kind settlers are looking for at the present time. All lands ranging from four to eight miles from railroad, and having purchased both blocks in their entirety we are able to dispose of of them to investors for less money than they could have bought portions of the areas from the previous owners.

We are disposing of these lands in six blocks of 500 acres each, and two blocks of 10,000 acres each to individual investors, private syndicates, organized in any particular community, and syndicates formed by us among our own clients, etc., so that any person with $1,000 to invest can enjoy the same privilege of profit as the man with big capital.

Two of the latter syndicates are already in course of formation, a one-fifth share of which can be handled for $1,000, but any one wishing to interest himself in the same should correspond at once, as these details will be completed within ten days at the most.

The Price of These Lands to Syndicates or Individuals Ranges from $6.00 to $10.00 per Acre

Our system of organizing the syndicates is simple: Some reputable banker or financial man is appointed as trustee for the protection of all, to whom all cheques are made payable. The private syndicates are for the convenience of men in any particular town or city, and in this regard we would like to hear from men who are in a position to invest $1,000 or more and could assist in getting together one of these little organizations.

We have realized approximately one million dollars in the past five years for men who have co-operated with us in Western Canada farm lands and no investor ever met with loss. Some of the syndicates we have formed have made as high as 300 per cent. on the amount invested, and in no instance have the profits been less than 50 per cent. We would like to give you details by letter of a few of these transactions.

One big advantage in our plan is our selling organization. If you buy a section or a portion of a section of Western Canada lands you must sell it yourself as it is too small to receive much attention from Agents; when you are interested in a block of 5,000 or 10,000 acres, besides buying at a lower price, your proposition is always before the buyers through our Agents in the Central and Western States.

After satisfying yourself as to our financial standing, integrity and success, write and we will tell you news about land opportunities in Western Canada that will surprise you.

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assassays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an untimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN

Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by HARPER & BROTHERS

"It's all right, you know," explained Jack Meredith very gravely; "I am a bit weak, that is all. I am hungry; haven't had anything to eat for some time, you know."

"Oh, yes," said Oscard shortly, "I know all about it."

CHAPTER XVII.

THREE days after the arrival of the rescuing force at the plateau Guy Oscard had organized a retreating party, commanded by Joseph, to convey Jack Meredith down to the coast. He knew enough of medicine to recognize the fact that this was no passing indisposition, but a thorough breakdown in health. The work and anxiety of the last year, added to the strange disquieting breath of the simlacine grove, had brought about a serious collapse in the system which only months of rest and freedom from care could repair.

Before the retreating column was ready to march it was discovered that the hostile tribes had finally evacuated the country, which deliverance was brought about not by Oscard's blood stained track through the forest, not by the desperate defense of the plateau, but by the whisper that Victor Durnovo was with them. Truly a man's reputation is a strange thing!

And this man, the mighty warrior whose name was as good as an army in central Africa, went down on his knees one night to Guy Oscard, imploring him to abandon the simlacine plateau, or at all events to allow him to go down to Loango with Meredith and Joseph.

"No," said Oscard; "Meredith held this place for us when he could have left it safely. He has held it for a year. It is our turn now. We will hold it for him. I am going to stay, and you have to stay with me."

For Jack Meredith life was at this time nothing but a constant, never ceasing fatigue. When Oscard helped him into the rough litter they had constructed for his comfort, he laid his head on the pillow, overcome with a dead sleep.

"Goodby, old chap," said Oscard, patting him on the shoulder.

"G'by," and Jack Meredith turned over on his side as if he were in bed, drew up the blanket and closed his eyes. He did not seem to know where he was, and, what was worse, he did not seem to care. Oscard gave the signal to the bearers, and the march began. There is something in the spring of human muscles unlike any other motive power; the power of thought may be felt even on the pole of a litter, and one thing that modern invention can never equal is the comfort of being carried on the human shoulder. The slow, swinging movement came to be part of Jack Meredith's life—indeed, life itself seemed to be nothing but a huge journey thus peacefully accomplished. Through the flapping curtains an endless procession of trees passed before his half closed eyes. The unintelligible gabble of the light hearted bearers of his litter was all that reached his ears. And ever at his side was Joseph, cheerful, indefatigable, resourceful. There was in his mind one of the greatest happinesses of life—the sense of something satisfactorily accomplished—the peacefulness that comes when the necessity for effort is past and left behind—that lying down to rest which must surely be something like death in its kindest form.

The awe inspired by Victor Durnovo's name went before the little caravan like a moral convoy and cleared their path. Thus, guarded by the name of a man whom he hated, Jack Meredith was enabled to pass through a savage country literally cast upon a bed of sickness.

In due course the river was reached and the gentle swing of the litter was changed for the smoother motion of the canoe. And it was at this period of the journey, in the forced restfulness of body entailed, that Joseph's mind soared to higher things and he determined to write a letter to Sir John.

He was, be admitted to himself, no great penman, and his epistolary style tended, perhaps, more to the forcible than to the finished.

"Somethin'," he reflected, "that'll just curl his back hair for 'im; that's what I'll write 'im."

Maala had been devastated, and it was within the roofless walls of Durnovo's house that Joseph finally wrote out laboriously the projected capillary invigorator.

Honored Sir [he wrote]—Trusting you will excuse the liberty, I take up my pen to advise you respectfully—while writing this word Joseph closed his left eye—that my master is taken seriously worse. Having been on the sick list now for a matter of five weeks, he just lies on his bed as weak as a newborn babe, as the saying is, and doesn't take no notice of nothing. I have succeeded in bringing him down to the coast, which we hope to reach tomorrow, and when we get to Loango—a poor sort of place—I shall at once obtain the best advice obtainable—that is to be had. However, I may have to send for it, but, money being no object to either master or me, respectfully I beg to say that every care will be took. Master having kind friends at Loango, I have no anxiety as to the future, but, honored sir, it has been a near touch in the past—just touch and go, so to speak. Not being in a position to form a estimate of what is the matter with master, I can only respectfully mention that I take it to be a general kerlapse of the system, brought on, no doubt, by too long a-living in the unhealthy platters of central Africa. When I gets him to Loango I shall go straight to the house of Mr. and Miss Gordon, where we stayed before, and with no fear but what we will be received with every kindness and the greatest hospitality. Thank God, honored sir, I've kept my health and strength wonderful and am therefore more able to look after master. When we reach Loango I shall ask Miss Gordon kindly to write to you, sir, seeing as I have no great facility with my pen. I am, honored sir, your respectful servant to command,

JOSEPH ATKINSON,
Late Corporal Two Hundred and Seventeenth Regiment.

With a feeling of considerable satisfaction Joseph approached the bungalow at Loango three days later. The short sea voyage had somewhat revived Meredith, who had been desirous of walking up from the beach, but after a short attempt had been compelled to enter the spring cart which Joseph had secured.

Joseph walked by the side of this cart with an erect carriage and a suppressed importance suggestive of ambulance duty in the old days.

As the somewhat melancholy cortege approached the house, Meredith drew back the dusky brown holland curtain and looked anxiously out. Nor were Joseph's eyes devoid of expectation. He thought that Jocelyn would presently emerge from the flower hung trellis of the veranda, and he had rehearsed over and over again a neat, respectful speech, explanatory of his action in bringing a sick man to the house.

But the hanging fronds of flower and leaf remained motionless, and the cart drove unchallenged round to the principal door.

A black servant—a stranger—held the handle and stood back invitingly. Supported by Joseph's arm, Jack Meredith entered. The servant threw open the drawing room door; they passed in. The room was empty. On the table lay two letters, one addressed to Guy Oscard, the other to Jack Meredith.

Jack Meredith fumbled rather feebly at his letter. It was distinctly an effort to him to tear the paper.

My Dear Meredith—Just a line to tell you that the bungalow and its contents are at your service. Jocelyn and I are off home for two months' change of air. I have been a bit seedy. I leave this at the bungalow, and we shall feel hurt if you do not make the house your home whenever you happen to come down to Loango. I have left a similar note for Oscard, in whose expedition to your relief I have all faith. Yours ever,

MAURICE GORDON.

"Here," said Meredith to his servant; "you may as well read it for yourself."

He handed the letter to Joseph and leaned back with a strange rapidity of movement on the sofa. As he lay there with his eyes closed he looked remarkably like a dead man.

At that moment Marie came into the room, dignified, gentle, self possessed.

"Ah, missis," said Joseph, "I'm glad to see you. You're wanted badly, and that's the truth. Mr. Meredith's not at all well."

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Sold by J. D. Tully.

Then the Mercury Froze.

"I think London is a lovely place for a honeymoon. Don't you, dear?"

"Yes, darling," he replied in an abstracted manner. "I shall always come here in the future."—Stray Stories.

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 32. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 20 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 20 acres of J. B. 32 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 6 inch nicolite, 18 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 673-1233-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

Nothing has been done with either of these kind offers and the 10,000 Club at the present time is dead.

Underhand Work of Ottawa Police

An Ottawa despatch says: The boy informer Sullivan, who has convicted many Ottawa saloon-keepers of selling himself a mixed liquor, was up in the police court today. The defence succeeded in blotting their own and brought out such facts as to the use by the police of the boy that the whole action of the chief of police is to be enquired into by the police commission. The boy returned home drunk, and was on a fair way to criminality, and the police paid him as a spy by odd methods that do not appeal to the public.

The Story of a Medicine.

Its name—"Golden Medical Discovery" was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients — Golden Seal root.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that he could, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, aided by a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for that purpose, extract from our most valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol, so generally employed. So the now world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery," for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it ever since has been, without a particle of alcohol in its make-up.

A glance at the full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All the ingredients have received the highest endorsements from numerous leading medical writers and teachers of all the different schools of practice, for the diseases for which they are recommended.

A little book of these endorsements has been compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and will be mailed free to any one asking same by postal card, or letter addressed to the Doctor as above. From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not only for the cure of the above mentioned diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections accompained with catarrhal discharges, hoarseness, sore throat, lingering, or hang-on-coughs, and all those wasting affections which, if not promptly and properly treated are liable to terminate in consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and persevere in its use until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint. Too much must not be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. It will cure the affections that lead up to consumption, if taken in time.

McGill Loses Again Medical School Burns

Priceless Specimens in Museum Destroyed---The Second Disastrous Fire in Short Space of Two Weeks.

Montreal, April 17.—The second disastrous fire within two weeks visited McGill University at an early hour yesterday morning and practically destroyed the medical building, one of the oldest and most valuable of the splendid collection on the college grounds. The results of the fire were most disastrous, as in addition to the usual equipment of a college medical building, the museum, one of the best on the continent, was destroyed. The loss of this cannot be considered in money value, as the museum has been collecting for nearly three-quarters of a century and contained many absolutely priceless specimens. The magnificent medical library, however, was partially saved, and this is no small comfort to the university authorities, as it contained many works as valuable in their way as the collection in the museum. Money cannot spell the loss which will be caused to the university by this second disaster, but a conservative estimate places the damage at half a million, with a strong probability of it running far beyond that.

STARTED IN LECTURE ROOM.

How the fire originated is not known. It started in the center of the building on the second floor, where the lecture rooms are situated, where Dr. Buxton stated last night, there had been nothing going on. The firemen made a rapid response to the first alarm, but in that short interval the flames had obtained almost complete control of the center of the group of connected buildings. Every minute the roar of the flames was punctuated with crashes as though chemicals were exploding, and the crowd which had gathered ran back to a considerable distance. Suddenly the roof fell in, the heavy domes precipitating the crash, and with a thunderous noise the whole fabric collapsed, carrying a large portion of the walls with it.

SAVED NORTH ANNEX.

It was evident by this time that the whole middle of the block of buildings was doomed, and the firemen devoted their efforts to saving the north and south wings. At one time it looked as though they were obtaining mastery, but the wind, which was blowing freshly from the northwest, swept down, and again the fire broke out with fury, gradually working its way southwards towards the library and the basement, where bodies used for dissection purposes were kept. Immediately to the north of the other building was an annex devoted to the physiology department, and here the firemen put up a strong fight. Time after time the flames reached the building, and as often numerous streams were directed towards them and gained the victory. The fire steadily spread towards the southern facade of the building and despite the efforts of the firemen it ate its way right through and little after half past two the roof of this part of the building fell in.

OF INCENDIARY ORIGIN?

Students and others connected with the university are seriously discussing the possibility of the two recent fires having been work of an incendiary. The mysterious origin of both fires and the unusual hour at which they started, the first about five o'clock and the last one at one o'clock in the morning, leads to the impression that they did not originate by accident. Unless due to a disordered mind the professors and students can hardly conceive of any one being so vindicative. There was no nightwatchman in either building.

STRATHCONA FAMILY'S GIFT.

When the structure was remodeled some years ago, it was largely through the financial assistance extended by the family of Lord Strathcona, their donations amounting to $125,000.

The structure as it stood cost about $350,000. The old building, which occupied the front, was constructed in 1877.

PERSONAL LOSS VERY GREAT.

The personal loss among the faculty by the burning of the medical building is irreparable. Dr. Adams lost not only his personable papers, but the data, the accumulation of twenty years, which he was preparing for the press.

Dr. Shepherd lost his private library, while Dr. Roddick, dean of the faculty, suffered severely in the loss of valuable data which cannot be replaced.

The Dr. Osler collection of pathological specimens, said to be the finest in the world, was entirely destroyed.

How to Get Investment That Pays and Saves

Huge Union Department Store Conducted in Cleveland, O.

Thousands of Canadian citizens annually pay their one shilling per annum for membership in the civil service stores of London, England, to obtain the reduced prices on goods sold by this vast concern to its members, apart from the somewhat reduced prices however, members gain nothing. In the city of Cleveland, O., the Union Department Stores Company, whose immense premises extend from 1696 to 1712 inclusive on West 25th street, the very center of a shopping population of some 900,000 people. There are very few intelligent residents nowadays but whom are aware of the vast fortunes made by Wanamaker, of Philadelphia; Marshal Field, Sears, Roebuck & Co., Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago; not to mention T. Eaton of Toronto, all acquired in large departmental stores.

The Union Department Stores Co., of Cleveland, are now offering to take the public into their confidence and profits, by placing small blocks of stock with whom care to purchase them. This plan is far better than that of the C.S. Stores, London, as the stock is guaranteed to pay 7 per cent. cumulative dividends and shares in addition to the seven per cent on the whole profits of the institution. The store in Cleveland, do an immense mail order business and shareholders get a 5 per cent. discount from the already (as is usual in department stores) low prices. The shareholder thus gets a guaranteed lucrative investment and saves money on his purchases. Every dollar received for shares is not only guaranteed to pay the substantial dividends as above noted, but goes right into the business for active service; every dollar of preferred stock is practically secured us by a first mortgage on the property of the company. Shares are $10 each and not more than 100 shares will be allotted to any one investor, thus making a larger number of shareholders, and consequently making so many more friends and patrons of the stores. For illustrated book and particulars, address Union Department Stores Co., People's Savings Bank Building, West 25th street, Cleveland, O., or call on Thos. Paterson, & Co., their local representative.

Tough Element Rules on Park Street

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—Could you send one of your reporters some or any night to the corner of Park and McDonnel streets to report upon the disgraceful state of things existing there. At this and adjacent corners young roughs, that is premature men who ape the manners and offensiveness of men of the lowest kind gather there every night and their way of going on is enough to disgust not only ladies going home but every one living in that part of the city. The words they use would cause the Devil himself to blush. It is not only objectionable to ladies forced to reach their homes past this part of the town, but ladies do not feel safe in passing these roughs. If the police cannot for want of numbers or will not patrol this part of the town it is time a vigilance committee is formed to let these toughs know they do not run the town.

Yours truly,
INDIGNANT.

DON'T DIE AT 45

Cure the Indigestion Which is so Liable to Lead to Apoplexy.

Rush of business, eating too fast and too much, excesses of any kind, soon result in indigestion. Then when the digestive organs cannot cure for the food properly the coats of the blood vessels in the brain get little nourishment, become brittle, and finally yield to the fierce blood pressure. One is then said to have a "shock," to be paralyzed, or to die from apoplexy.

People suffering with headache, giddiness, palpitation, sleeplessness, bad taste in the mouth, drowsiness, coated tongue, distress after eating, specks before the eyes, and any other of the many distressing results of a weakened stomach should profit by the discovery of Mi-o-na stomach tablets.

In recent years the greatest advance in medicine has been in the study of diseases of digestion and nutrition and no other prescription has proven itself of as much value as Mi-o-na. It is relied upon as a certainty today in relieving the worst troubles of digestion and assimilation and making a complete cure.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c box of Mi-o-na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents. Booth's Miona Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE GRAND TRUNK MANAGER HOME

Mr. Chas. M. Hays Returns Home from Europe.

A MUCH BETTER SERVICE

Five Millions for New Rolling Stock --Other Items of Interest.

Montreal, April 17.—Mr. Charles M. Hays, second vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, has arrived in Montreal after a few weeks' visit to England and the South of France. While his mission was chiefly to discuss matters of vital importance connected with the Grand Trunk Railway proper and the Grand Trunk Pacific, of which he is president, Mr. Hays found time to spend ten days with his family in France just before he came home, and his ruddy countenance and general genial manner testify to the fact that a little rest after the days of duty in London have fitted him for the arduous labor which faces him.

While Mr. Hays had nothing of vital importance to announce to the public, he discussed the affairs of the road with the newspaper men, and he seemed particularly pleased at the manner in which the $5,000,000 debenture stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific had been taken up. He said:

"When you consider that this was a four per cent. debenture stock," while other roads have been paying six per cent., the satisfactory side of the transaction can quickly be seen. It was also gratifying to find that about seventy per cent. of it was taken by our own Grand Trunk people."

"For what specific purpose was the four per cent. $5,000,000 debenture stock sale?

"For the purpose of buying new rolling stock for the Grand Trunk Pacific. You see it is all Grand Trunk and therefore the Grand Trunk Railway will get the benefit of the purchases pending the day when the stock is actually needed for the Grand Trunk Pacific. Why even now the Grand Trunk is using 2,500 cars belonging to the Grand Trunk Pacific."

"Do you think the freight congestion trouble is over?"

"I think so. The weather conditions have been really very hard to fight this winter. In view of the greater trouble that neighboring lines have had during the winter I think that our employes have done wonderfully well."

The question of emigration to Canada was touched upon. "People are very anxious to come to Canada," he said. "Shortly before I left London I had a talk with the emigration commissioner, and said: 'Many people ask me about the cold weather in Canada, and I say to them that right here in London there are more people die of cold and privation than there are in Canada.' That just about settles it. The commissioner told me that during March and April he knew, himself, of about 12,000 booked for a home in the Dominion."

Willie Taylor in Another Accident

It seems that, in the matter of accidents, the old time adage, "It never rains but it pours," is exemplified in the juvenile person of Master W. Taylor, the boy, who as noted in a former issue of The Times, some months ago had his legs amputated by a passing train, who on Monday of a still further accident.

It seems that as this boy, who has been impelled by his former accident to go to school in a self-propelled waggonette, whilst returning from the seat of learning, was unfortunate enough to get one of his wagon wheels in a crack in the sidewalk. The sudden stoppage threw the occupant violently to the sidewalk fracturing his left leg near the thigh. A gentleman passing by, sent for the Ban Spence Ambulance and the boy was removed to his home on Albert street, but later in the day was taken to the Nicholls hospital where he is now doing as well as can be expected.

New and Vast Store for Peterborough

Mr. A. W. Cressman Will Greatly Increase His Premises.

That Mr. A. W. Cressman is a success in business here is an acknowledged fact, but now this strenuous business man has decided to branch out into a larger business.

Contractor W. J. Johnston, under plans of Architect Bartlett, with a gang of men, yesterday broke ground for a new building that will, when completed, be the largest store between Toronto and Montreal.

The new establishments will have a floor space of 19,200 square feet, as compared with 2,600 square feet occupied when Mr. Cressman first started business eight years ago.

The additional space provided for in the present plans will give two stories 60 feet by 100 feet, and two stories 60 feet by 60 feet, or a total floor space of 19,200 feet. This is obtained by securing the store now used by Mr. John Nugent, including the three stores, the erection of a new brick addition at the back of Mr. Nugent's 40 feet by 18 feet, two stories high, and the removal of partitions.

It is on the new addition that Contractor Johnston started yesterday morning, and he will rush this work with all possible speed. This will give a square frontage of 60 feet, with a depth of 100 feet.

Many Mexican Cities are Heaps of Ruins

Inhabitants Caught in Houses and Crushed---List of Dead and Wounded May Reach One Hundred.

City of Mexico, April 16.—Three cities are in ruins, scores of lives have been lost, and much property destroyed as a result of earthquake shocks in Mexico Sunday. The cities of Tixtia, Chiltpu and Chilpancongo have been completely destroyed, and the panic-stricken survivors are camping in the open air. The total number of dead and wounded is not known, but a conservative estimate places the loss at one hundred.

CAUGHT IN BUILDINGS.

The greatest loss of life is at Tixtia, where many people were caught in the falling building like rats in a trap and crushed to death. The details of the disaster in Guerrero State are slowly reaching here, and every additional report adds to the horror of the situation. Scarcely a building is left standing in any of the towns on the earthquake zone, and it is regarded certain that later and more complete information will greatly increase the list of casualties.

ELEVEN DEAD.

Up to this evening the known dead number eleven and the badly injured twenty-seven. Among the dead is the wife of Postal Inspector Leopoldo Lopez Guerra and the child of Jose Aleman, the postmaster of the city. Jose Lopez Martinez, manager of the Federal telegraph office, was struck on the head by a block of stone and badly injured. A panic prevails everywhere, and people are fleeing to the open country. The earth continued to rock at half-hour intervals yesterday, and many minor shocks complete the work of destruction of the first earthquake.

Murderer pays Death Penalty

Wethersfield, Conn., April 17.—Henry G. Bailey, murderer of George H. Goodale, was led to his execution in the state prison at 12.05 yesterday morning, and 19 seconds later he paid the penalty for his crime. He showed no fear.

Bailey killed Goodale, who employed him on a small farm on the boundary between Middletown and Middlefield, in July last, with an axe. Goodale's body was found in a chair near a window. He died after being struck.

Bailey's disappearance immediately led to a search for him. He was arrested in Pelham township, near St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada, where he has relatives, and was brought back and tried for murder.

SPAT IN JUROR'S FACES.

Hamilton, April 17.—A despatch from Middletown, Conn., announces the execution yesterday morning of Henry G. Bailey, for the brutal murder of his former employer, Detective Miller, who helped supply the evidence which led to Bailey's arrest, says he was the most hardened murderer he ever saw. Bailey laughed and spit in the jurors' faces when they convicted him.

He is well connected, his relatives living near St. Catharines.

Young Officer is Made a Colonel

London, April 17.—The vacancy caused by the recent retirement of Lt.-Col. Little, commanding officer of the 7th Regiment, has been filled by the appointment of Capt. Frank Reid, one of the youngest officers of the corps. Col. Otter of Toronto, was in the city last evening, and offered the position to Capt. Reid, who announced his acceptance. Major Hume Cronyn was the next in line to Col. Little, but his recent removal to Toronto made it impossible for him to continue his connection with the corps. Major G. Hayes, next in position to Major Cronyn, declined to accept the office of commanding officer, and it was tendered to Capt Reid. Major Hayes will continue in his present rank.

Rev. Dr. Marsh, president of the society will speak on "The Sun," at the next meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Royal Astronomical Society, to be held on Friday night of this week in the Y.M.C.A. hall. The executive met last night to complete arrangements for the events.

Departing Pastor Given Presentation

Rev. A. Bright Given Handsomely Bound Set of Dickens' Works.

That Rev. A. Bright, B.A., is popular, to the 33rd degree with the congregation of Knox church has been assured. As is known Rev. Mr. Bright, assistant pastor of that church, and who is leaving for Ingersoll, was honored by a representative group of his parishioners who gathered at the residence of Mr. Geo. Campbell, 159 Stewart street, with Sheriff Hall in the chair, to say goodbye to Mr. Bright.

A most enjoyable social evening was spent. Mr. Bright, was presented with a handsomely bound set of the works of Charles Dickens, accompanied by an appreciative address.

Mr. Bright replied in suitable terms, expressing his thanks for the kindness shown him. Mr. Bright leaves this morning for Norwood, where, after preaching at a preparatory communion service, for Rev. G. A. MacLennan, he will go directly to his new charge in Ingersoll.

Following is a copy of the address read;

Dear Mr. Bright,—We, the members and adherents of Knox church, knowing you are about to leave us, desire to express our regret at the circumstances, which deprive this church and congregation of a pastor who has proved himself an ideal leader in every way.

Peterboro Man in Dramatic Production

The Quill Lake News, Quill Lake, Sask., says:—On Monday, March 25th, at his Majesty's theater, the Prairie Dramatic Society, presented Bryon's celebrated comedy, "Our Boys" to a crowded house.

Mr. S. R. Hall, our genial bank manager, formerly of Peterborough, took the part of Talbot Champneys, and filled it acceptably. A little more practise with the monocle and a more pronounced English accent would have suited the part better, but no doubt we shall hear from Mr. Hall again.

Great credit is due Mr. Crowley and Mr. Hall, the former for undertaking the production of the play.

Cheap Groceries for Sale Today

In order to obtain permanent premises, China Hall has purchased the large and well assorted stock of groceries, etc., of Mr. A. Rountree, No. 324 George street. This stock, which is one of the finest grocery stocks in Peterborough, will, together with the balance of the China Hall stock, be thrown on the market at cost price, commencing March 2 and continuing until both stocks are entirely disposed of, but no longer than the 15th of April, after which date the store will be re-fitted, and opened about May 1, with an entirely new stock of crockery, china, glassware, cut-glass, plated ware, fine china ornaments, etc. China Hall, after that date, will be beyond a doubt one of the finest and most complete china stores in Canada. The China Hall Company.

Dog Swallowed a Five Dollar Bill

A few days ago a George street merchant noticing that his dog was sick, on competent advice, decided to give the animal a dose. He had the prescription put up, and mixed the powders with lard, rolling it into a ball or large pill. Remembering that it is customary for veterinary surgeons to administer such lard and drug balls by rolling them in a piece of paper, and then when the animal's mouth is open, with a quick jerk to unwind the paper and pull it out as the bonus is swallowed. Having no tough paper handy, this merchant took a $5 bill and rolled the medicine ball therein. He opened his dog's mouth and with a quick jerk of the wrist tried to pull back the V., unfortunately however, some of the lard had made the bill slippery, and the dog swallowed ravenously. The bill is still lost to sight though to memory dear. His wife objected strenuously to the dog being killed to recover the $5, so the merchant let it go.

STRENGTH

Without Overloading the Stomach.

The business man, especially, needs food in the morning that will not overload the stomach, but give mental vigor for the day.

Much depends on the start a man gets each day, as to how he may expect to accomplish the work on hand.

He can't be alert with a heavy, fried-meat-and-potatoes breakfast requiring a lot of vital energy in digesting it.

A Calif. business man tried to find some food combination that would not overload the stomach in the morning, but that would produce energy.

He writes:

"For years I was unable to find a breakfast food that had nutrition enough to sustain a business man without overloading his stomach, causing indigestion and kindred ailments.

"Being a very busy and also a very nervous man, I decided to give up breakfast altogether. But luckily I was induced to try Grape-Nuts.

"Since that morning I have been a new man; can work without tiring, my head is clear and my nerves strong and quiet.

"I find four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with one of sugar and a small quantity of cold milk, make a delicious morning meal, which invigorates me for the day's business." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

What Does It Mean?

Dr. Hamilton Gives a Full and Satisfactory Explanation.

Look at your tongue!

Sometimes it's heavily coated sometimes it's clear and red.

Study this out and you'll find some interference with the functional activity of the body.

This means the bowels are not regular, the liver is sluggish and the blood is contaminated.

Strong cathartic pills act so destructively on the intestines as to provoke deadly sickness; this often frightens people from taking medicine when they badly need it.

To the multitude of dangerous purgatives now on the market, Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a notable exception, they neither gripe, cause sickly feeling or headache, yet they cleanse and purify the entire system in one night. No other laxative acts with such mildness and certainty. Giving proper stimulus to the liver and kidneys, strengthening the stomach and lending valuable aid to digestion, it's small wonder that such marvelous results accompany Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Geo. O'Hagarty, of Amherst, N. S., writes; "Last winter I worked in a lumber camp and neglected my health. I was dreadfully constipated and had a headache that fairly made me reel at times. I was sick and miserable, and hadn't the slightest ambition to work or stir around. I felt heavy and dull and had a bad taste in my mouth. I sent into the city for Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which I knew were good for my condition. They fixed me up very quickly and have kept me in good condition ever since. There are other men in the camp that use Dr. Hamilton's Pills also. They say they wouldn't be without the pills for ten times their price."

Every dealer in the land sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills—25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from N. C. Polson and Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

TRADE SCHOOLS

Pursuant to a careful and elaborate report by a legislative investigating commission, which recommended a system of industrial education for the state, Massachusetts has undertaken a work that will attract general attention. A permanent commission has been organized and instructed to proceed with the actual establishment of trade schools. Certain fundamental principles have been definitely accepted, and the commission is charged with the duty of applying them in practice.

The trade schools are to be independent; that is, no attempt is to be made to make the ordinary public school, in its higher grades, subserve the purpose of industrial training. The former will offer four years of training for pupils of the age of 14 or 15. Two years are to be devoted to shop instruction, drawing, mathematics and English, and the remaining two years will be devoted to the respective needs of the pupils according to the particular trades they intend to enter. The shop work will be differentiated and studies directly applicable to the trades will be taught.

For the benefit of the poorer classes evening classes will be arranged where the need of them shall be shown to exist, while for the decaying agricultural industry of the state a typical agricultural school will be established this year, where intensive instead of extensive "western" farming will be taught.

By these means the state hopes to raise in the course of a reasonable time the level of industrial intelligence and furnish employers with intelligent, skilled and energetic labor. No serious opposition is anticipated from the labor unions, though they view certain features of the proposed schools with some apprehension. To the system as a whole they are said to be rather favorable.

SULTAN OF TURKEY ILL

Paris, April 16.—The Memorial Diplomatique says it has learned that the illness of the Sultan of Turkey is rapidly becoming worse, and that he is most anxious concerning the revolutionary movement in Asia Minor.

His advisers see only one hope and that is to provide an exterior diversion in the form of a war with Bulgaria. Trouble with this country would have already broken out but for the Sultan's fear that the Bulgarians, who are rapid mobilizers, would win the first success, and that this would be followed by an insurrection throughout the whole of Asia Minor.

In the meanwhile the paper asserts the Turkish reserves are being called out and troops are being hastened to the frontier.

A Venerated Relic Brought to Madrid

Madrid, April 16.—In accordance with custom, the Holy Girdle from the Cathedral of Toledo, has been brought to this city and placed in the oratory in the Queen's apartments in preparation for her majesty's confinement. The girdle is an ancient and highly venerated relic, which is given to the queen to kiss at times regarded that prayer directed through the girdle is peculiarly efficacious. The pope, who has blessed the beautiful rosary recently made by the most skilful nuns in Rome for the use of the royal baby, will send by Count Rinaldi, a handsome robe for the infant. The queen is enjoying excellent health. She drives daily. She attended a public concert yesterday.

Arrest of Hostess Spoils Card Party

Toledo, April 15.—While guests were assembling at the house of Mrs. Viola Johnson this afternoon, in response to invitations announcing a card party, the hostess was detained at the police station on a charge of shoplifting.

A daughter of Mrs. Johnson was looking after the guests when two detectives entered the house with search warrants. They told of the arrest of Mrs. Johnson, and the daughter dismissed the guests. Mrs. Johnson was arrested in a dry goods store, where she had secreted two silk waists in her muff.

At the house the detectives found $700 worth of dress goods, laces, trimmings and other feminine finery, which have been identified as goods stolen from local stores. Mrs. Johnson is fifty-seven years old.

Processes Which Defy Analysis.

I think that the more thoroughly and conscientiously we endeavor to study biological problems, the more we are convinced that even those processes which we have already regarded as explicable both by chemical and physical laws are in reality infinitely more complex and as present defy any attempts at a mechanical explanation. Thus we have been satisfied to account for the absorption of food from the alimentary canal by the laws of diffusion and osmosis. But we now know that, as regards osmosis, the wall of the intestine does not behave like a dead membrane. We know that the intestinal wall is covered with epithelium and that every epithelial cell is in itself an organism, a living being with the most complex functions. We know that it takes up food by the active contractions of its protoplasm in the same way as observed in independent naked animal cells.—A. Bunge.

Her Valentine.

A young woman wrote about the year 1750: "The night before St. Valentine's day I got five bay leaves and pinned four of them to the four corners of my pillow and the fifth to the middle. And then if I dreamed of my sweetheart Betty said we would be married before the year was out. But to make more sure I boiled an egg hard and took out the yolk and filled it with salt and when I went to bed ate it, shell and all, without speaking or drinking after it. We also wrote our lovers' names upon bits of paper and rolled them up in clay and put them into water, and the first that came up was to be our valentine. Mr. Bloxam was my man. I lay abed and shut my eyes all the morning till he came to our house, for I would not have seen another man before him for all the world."

CUBA IS RESTLESS

New York, April 15.—According to a Havana dispatch to The Sun the American Government, sooner or later, will meet with pressure from abroad regarding the Cuban situation. The French minister is said to have informed his government that there will be no certainty of protection of property if the republic is re-established and the Cubans placed in control.

It is learned further the dispatch continues that certain powerful British interests recently asked the foreign office in London to request permission from the United States to station three British warships in Cuban waters when the Americans leave. American officials here, however, do not believe that Great Britain will make any such embarrassing request because the answer would probably be that America will be able to tend to her own affairs and being responsible for Cuba's conduct she would preserve order.

Constipation

Baked sweet apples, with some people, bring prompt relief for Constipation. With others, coarse all-wheat bread will have the same effect. Nature undoubtedly has a vegetable remedy to relieve every ailment known to man, if physicians can but find Nature's way to health. And this is strikingly true with regard to Constipation.

The bark of a certain tree in California—Cascara Sagrada—offers a most excellent aid to this end. But, combined with Egyptian Senna, Slippery Elm Bark, Solid Extract of Prunes, etc., the same Cascara bark is given its greatest possible power to correct constipation. A toothsome Candy Tablet, called Lax-ets, is now made at the Dr. Shoop Laboratories, from this ingenuous and most effective prescription. Its effect on Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sallow Complexion, etc., is indeed prompt and satisfying.

No griping, no unpleasant after effects are experienced, and Lax-ets are put up in beautiful lithographed metal boxes at 5 cents and 25 cents per box.

Invites the tradesman, mechanic, merchant, professional, craftsman and farmer to become shareholders and co-operating profit sharers in the very profitable and up-to-date business of conducting

A Great Co-Operative Department Store and Mail Order Institution

In the City of Cleveland

An Ohio Corporation of $500,000. - Shares $10 Each

BY THE PEOPLE — FOR THE PEOPLE

This Institution saves for the consumer what otherwise becomes the profit of the individual.

$10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER. $10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER.

Our Preferred Stock Bears

7 per cent. guaranteed cumulative dividends and shares in addition to the 7 per cent. in the whole profits of the institution.

Unlimited Dividends

Can be earned in department store investments. A department store near here paid over 60 per cent. in dividends to its investors last year.

Department Store Investments are Good

Because department store merchandising is a very conservative and profitable business.

Our Department Store Investment is the Best

Because our thousands of shareholders will do as owners do and have always done: "talk the business," "boom the business," "advertise the business," and influence their friends and relatives to trade at their own store. This will place our business on a self productive basis immediately. They certainly will do this because they have always done so under the same indentical conditions.

A 5% Discount from Regular Prices will be Allowed Shareholders

in this institution being in itself a very attractive interest to investors in this Company.

A Great Mail Order Department

Will be our accommodation for out of town shareholders and patrons.

Our Business Location is Ideal

For local business, located in the heart of the West Side business center it is immediately surrounded by a West Side purchasing clientage of 200,000 people and commands the approach of as many more East Side residents and the vast urban population that comes citywards for their supplies.

So in this enterprise we are combining the features that have made

John Wanamaker, Philadelphia and New York City
Marchall Field & Co., Chicago, Ill.,
Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, Ill., and
Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago, Ill.,

each in themselves tremendously successful, having each made millions of dollars for their stockholders.

Limitation of Subscription

There will be no individual control in this Company. We prefer to sell no more than 100 shares to any individual desiring an investment with us, as we desire to obtain the widest possible distribution of our shares.

How the Shareholder is Safeguarded in Every Way

When you secure a certificate of stock you own a valuable piece of property, representing as it does an investment that will secure for you a constant income, aside from the many other advantages to be enjoyed as a shareholder. Note the binding obligations of the Company to those that invest.

Your stock if preferred is guaranteed seven per cent.

Your shares are full paid and non-accessable.

Your dividends are cumulative and participating.

Every dollar received by the Company for stock is going right into the business for active service. You have vote and voice in the management of the business. When we say your stock is preferred, we mean that it is guaranteed seven per cent. per annum, before the common stock can be paid one penny. The preferred stock has absolutely the first claim—in effect a first mortgage on all assets of the Company—the property—the property rights, trade marks, trade rights, etc., and on the net profits of the business.

The following Officers and Directors of this Company, constituted wholly of Cleveland and Ohio men of undoubted integrity and business qualifications, will best bespeak our policy and our substantiability:

OFFICERS:

W. F. PARSONS, President. — W. H. KIRKBRIDE, Vice-President.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

"Respectfully submitted,

Marie bowed gravely. She went to Meredith's side and looked at him with a smile that was at once critical and encouraging. Nestorius, holding on her skirt, looked up to her face, and, seeing the smile, smiled too. He went further. He turned round and smiled at Joseph as if to make things pleasant all round.

Marie stooped over the sofa, and her clever dusky fingers moved the cushions.

"You will be better in bed," she said. "I will get Mr. Gordon's room made ready for you—yes?" Then she turned to Joseph with that soft, natural way which seems to run through the negro blood however much it may be diluted.

"Help Mr. Meredith," she said, "to Mr. Gordon's room. I will go at once and see that the bed is got ready."

* * * * * * *

By daybreak next morning Joseph was at sea again, steaming south in a coasting boat toward St. Paul de Loanda. He sent off a telegram to Maurice Gordon in England, announcing the success of the relief expedition, and then proceeded to secure the entire services of a medical man. With this youthful disciple of Æsculapius he returned forthwith to Loango and settled down with characteristic energy to nurse his master.

Meredith's progress was lamentably slow, but still it was progress and in the right direction. The doctor, who was wise in the strange maladies of the west coast, stayed for two days and promised to return once a week. He left full instructions, and particularly impressed upon the two nurses the fact that the recovery would necessarily be so slow that their unpracticed eyes could hardly expect to trace its progress.

It is just possible that Meredith could at this time have had no better nurse than Joseph. There was a military discipline about the man's method which was worth more than much feminine persuasion.

"Do y' know what I would like, missis?" he asked briskly of Marie one evening.

"No."

"Well, I'd like to clap my eyes on Miss Gordon just a-stepping in at that open door; that's what we want. That sawbones feller is right when he says the progress will be slow. Slow! Slow ain't quite the word. No more ain't progress the word; that's my opinion. He don't take no interest in nothin', least of all in his victuals, and a man's in a bad way when he takes no interest in his victuals."

CHAPTER XVIII.

"BY the way, dear," said Lady Cantourne to her niece one fine day. "I have asked a Miss Gordon to come to tea this afternoon. I met her last night at the Fitzmannering's. She lives in Loango and knows Jack. I thought you might like to know her. She is exceptionally ladylike and rather pretty."

And straightway Miss Millicent Chyne went upstairs to put on her best dress.

We men cannot expect to understand these small matters, these exigencies, as it were, of female life. But we may be permitted to note feebly en passant through existence that there are occasions when women put on their best clothes without the desire to please. And, while Millicent Chyne was actually attiring herself, Jocelyn Gordon, in another house not so far away, was busy with that beautiful hair of hers, patting here, drawing out there, pinning, poking, pressing with all the cunning that her fingers possessed.

When they met a little later in Lady Cantourne's uncompromisingly solid and old fashioned drawing room, one may be certain that nothing was lost.

"My aunt tells me," began Millicent at once, with that degage treatment of certain topics hitherto held sacred which obtains among young folks today, "that you know Loango."

"Oh, yes. I live there."

"And you know Mr. Meredith?"

"Yes, and Mr. Oscard also."

"Ah, yes," said Millicent unblushingly. That was her strong point, blushing in the right place, but not in the wrong. "Mr. Oscard. He is associated with Mr. Meredith, is he not, in this harebrained scheme?"

"I believe they are together in it. The similacine, you mean?" said Jocelyn.

"Yes; the similacine. Such a singular name, is it not? I always say they will ruin themselves suddenly. People always do, don't they? But what do you think of it? I should like to know."

"I think they certainly will make a fortune," replied Jocelyn—and she noted the light in Millicent's eyes with a sudden feeling of dislike—"unless the risks prove too great and they are forced to abandon it."

"What risks?" asked Millicent, quite forgetting to modulate her voice.

"Well, of course, the Ogowe river is most horribly unhealthy, and there are other risks. The natives in the plains surrounding the similacine plateau are antagonistic. Indeed, the plateau was surrounded and quite besieged when we left Africa."

"But," cried Millicent, "of course something was done. They could never leave Mr. Meredith unprotected."

"Yes," answered Jocelyn quietly, "Mr. Oscard went up and rescued him. My brother heard yesterday that the relief had been effected."

Millicent smiled again in her light hearted way.

"That is all right," she said. "What a good thing we did not know! Just think, auntie dear, what a lot of anxiety we have been spared!"

"In the height of the season, too!" said Jocelyn.

"Yes-es," replied Millicent, rather doubtfully.

Lady Cantourne was puzzled. There was something going on which she did not understand. Within the sound of the pleasant conversation there was the cliquetis of the foil; behind the polite smile there was the gleam of steel. She was rather relieved to turn at this moment and see Sir John Meredith entering the room with his usual courtly bow. He always entered her drawing room like that. Ah, that little secret of a mutual respect! Some people who are very young now will wish, before they have grown old, that they had known it.

He shook hands with Lady Cantourne and with Millicent. Then he stood with a deferential half bow, waiting for the introduction to the girl who was young enough to be his daughter—almost to be his granddaughter. There was something pathetic and yet proud in this old man's uncompromising adherence to the lessons of his youth.

"Sir John Meredith—Miss Gordon."

The beginning—the thin end of the wedge, as the homely saying has it—the end which we introduce almost

"Before we were married," she complained, "you always engaged a cab when you took me anywhere. Now you think the street car is good enough for me."

"No, my darling, I don't think the street car is good enough for you. It's because I'm so proud of you. In a cab you would be seen by nobody, while I can show you off to so many people by taking you in a street car."

"You dear! Forgive me if I gave you pain in saying what I did."

The Story of a Charm.

A titled English lady has a story of a woman who had a little Japanese charm given her. Every time she wore it some mischance happened, and she generally fell ill. Her son at last took the jewel to the keeper of the Japanese curios in the Paris museum and requested to be informed what the charm represented. "This," said the expert at once, "is the emblem of sickness." The woman never wore it again.

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

Mining operations will be commenced just as soon as weather conditions permit.

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 32. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 16 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concessions of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 20 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 20 acres of J. B. 32 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 6 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 56 feet, and in it shows 6 inch nicolitte, 18 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 673-1283-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 60 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

New Liskeard, 17th November, 1906.

JACOB M. EGGERT, M.E.

We offer a few more shares at Fifty Cents (50c); par value One Dollar ($1.00). The property is being developed as fast as possible, and we cannot promise that stock will be sold at less than par for very long. Don't wait until it is $3.00 to invest, giving others big profits for what you should have bought sooner. We want you to get in on the ground floor and share in the big profits. For a limited time only we will accept subscriptions at 50 cents—the stock is slated for a sharp advance very soon. Send marked cheque or money order.

Losing Muscular Power?

The First Sign of Mental Decay—The Warning of General Break-Down.

Changes in the nervous system manifest themselves slowly.

They show first by muscular weakness—a feeling that threatens paralysis, or by a fullness in the head that indicates approaching apoplexy.

It seems like stiffness but you soon discover there's a lack of power—that the endurance of this or that muscle is not what it ought to be.

Your friends may notice a slight thickness of speech or that your memory is decidedly failing.

These symptoms may grow worse very quickly if they are not treated by Ferrozone. You must build up the nervous system. This can be accomplished in no other way as thoroughly and permanently as by the use of Ferrozone.

This remarkable remedy, which has cured tens of thousands of Canadian people, increases enormously the digestive power, stimulates the formation of blood, the rich, red kind that puts new life into the nerves.

The first result of these changes is increased strength.

Natural circulation quickly follows, and that fullness in the head, so disturbing and alarming, too, quickly passes away.

These changes are wrought in a natural way, for the reason that Ferrozone treats the causes that excite these troubles.

For the aged and weak who need strength—for those run-down and thin—for the sickly and nervous who lack staying power—nothing compares with Ferrozone.

No tonic gives such lasting good health; try it yourself. Sold by all dealers in 50c. boxes.

Auburn Power Co.

The annual meeting of the Auburn Power Company was held yesterday when Mr. John Carnegie, Mr. James Kendry and Mrs. James Kendry were elected directors. At a subsequent meeting Mr. Carnegie was re-elected president of the company.

Purse Presented to Rev. Bright

Yesterday afternoon still another token of the regard in which Rev. A. Bright, assistant pastor of Knox church, who is leaving the city, is held, was demonstrated when a few friends gathered in a Hunter street office and a handsomely lined purse was presented to this popular pastor.

Auburn Mill's Directors Appointed

The annual meeting of shareholders of the Auburn Woolen Co., Limited, was held yesterday when the following directors were elected for the ensuing year:—Messrs. John Carnegie, T. Herbert Kendry and James Kendry. At a subsequent meeting of the directors Mr. James Kendry was re-elected president and managing director, and Miss E. M. Miller, secretary.

Bridges Inspected

County Councillor Mosier, chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee has made an inspection of the Chemong and Pigeon creek bridges. He was accompanied by Commissioners Killen and Scott, and they found everything in good order so far. The ice has not yet gone out of Chemong lake, so that unexpected complications may arise.

To Build a New Line

Officers of the Grand Trunk are now engaged in estimating the cost, etc., of a line between Minden and Eldorado, in North Hastings. A party from Belleville inspected the old road bed between these points last week and also the mines and quarries that would be reached. They are highly satisfied with the prospects for profitable business.

The Carnival Postponed

The roller rink carnival that was to have been held on Friday night of this week has been postponed until Friday of next week. This is due mainly to the fact that Prof. Gemma, who has been temporarily in charge of the local rink, during the absence of Messrs. Sheridan and Henderson, proprietors, in Ottawa, will today leave for Ottawa to take charge of the local men's rink recently established in the capital.

Midland League to Meet

As noted before, but republished by request, we might say that the annual meeting of the Midland Association Football League to draw up the schedule for the season's games will be held at the Y.M.C.A., Peterborough, on Saturday, April 20, at one o'clock. It is not exactly known yet just how many clubs will enter, but it is expected that nine teams at least will be in the three series.

Communications addressed to J. E. Sullivan, secretary of the league, will be fully considered.

Bisley Team to Sail June 14th

The Bisley team will sail from Montreal, on June 14th, on the C.P.R. steamer Empress of Ireland. Col. Tilton, Lt.-Col. Sherwood, C.M.G., Lieut.-Col. Robertson, of Montreal and Lieut.-Col. Macdonald of Toronto, were appointed the programme committee of the executive for the year. Col. Tilton presided, and those present were Col. Sam Hughes, M.P., Col. D. A. Macdonald, Lieut.-Col. W. P. Anderson, Lieut.-Col. A. P. Sherwood, Major Helmer, Major Winter, secretary, and Capt. J. E. Hutchinson.

Conservatives Get Busy

The Liberal-Conservative Association of the West Riding is called together for Friday, April 26th, at 7 o'clock, in the Young Conservative Club rooms, for the annual meeting. There will probably be, in view of the approach of the elections, further business than the election of officers. There will be a grand pow-wow, open to the public, in the Grand Opera House at 8 o'clock, when prominent speakers from a distance will officiate. Every effort is being made to get Conservatives in the townships interested. Friday will be a big day amongst our Conservative friends.

Barnardo Home May Go.

It is now not beyond the bounds of possibility that Peterborough may lose the Barnardo Home for girls, which has been located here for the past twenty-three years. "Hazel Brae," the local home, is now too small for the purpose for which it is used, and unless improvements are made, the home will likely be moved to Toronto. The Toronto Star has an article intimating that the local Barnardo Home may be moved to Bogtown. Should this be accomplished the city loses an old institution fast—

Brewery May be Wound up

A Toronto despatch of yesterday says that a petition has been filed at Osgoode Hall, by the Ontario Bank liquidators for the winding up of the Port Hope Brewing and Malting Co. The Ontario Bank is a creditor to the extent of $62,142, and the Bank of Montreal to the amount of $5,396, but the latter sum is secured by warehouse receipts. Accounts payable come to $6,535, making a total of $74,072. The assets are given as $59,054.

Quite a large number of Peterborough citizens are shareholders in this brewery.

DOCTORS MISTAKES

Are said often to be buried six feet under ground. But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or overbusy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The Physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better by reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

Mill is Running

Yesterday morning, spring operations were commenced with some 75 men at work, on the Peterborough Lumber Co's mills in the east ward. This mill is now one of the most up-to-date saw mills in Ontario. It has recently been equipped with a lot of modern machinery and has a cutting capacity of 75,000 feet per day.

Parents Posted as to Pupils' Record

As decided by the Board of Education at the beginning of the year, a report of the work of each pupil at the Collegiate Institute for the term between the Christmas and Easter holidays is being sent to the respective parents of the students. These are the first reports of the kind sent out by Principal Fessenden, and it is expected that they will prove of considerable benefit.

Huge Rat Chases Two Men

A few days ago two young men belonging to this city, were driving in from Springville, late at night and under the beams of a bright moon. One of them happening to look behind the buggy saw a huge rat following the rig. One of them, who declares the rat was as large as a good sized kitten, jumped out and threw a stone at the rodent. The rat at once made for the young man who made a rapid exodus for the buggy. As they drove on the rat, after following their rig for several hundred yards or last took to an adjoining field. The young men, who, it might be noted, hail come from a local option village, think the rat either had hydrophobia or was crazy. Perhaps it had brainstorms!

A Successful Year

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Cereal Co., held in Messrs. Hall, Medd & Davidson's offices, it transpired that the business of this progressive and up-to-date local company had been most successful. Manager W. H. Meldrum noted that the new cereal, known as Korn Flakes, would be ready very soon. He expected the machinery to arrive this week.

A dividend of 7 per cent., payable half yearly, was declared, and a good substantial balance to the profit and loss account was carried forward.

The old board of directors was re-elected, and after the meeting these gentlemen met and elected the old officers, as follows:

President—W. G. Ferguson.
Vice Presidents—R. R. Hall, M.P., and Adam Hall.

ONLY MORNING DAILY BETWEEN TORONTO AND OTTAWA

VOL XXXV. NO. 92 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, APRIL 18 1907 PRICE TWO CENTS

THREE MEN STABBED IN PETERBORO HOTEL

Frank Cameron, of North Bay, Runs Amuok and Stabs Blindly With the Blade of a Clasp Knife.

Three men stabbed by a frenzied man, who had been ordered out of a hotel, one of whom is now in St. Joseph's hospital, and threats made to shoot the proprietor, was the record made by F. Cameron, of North Bay, yesterday in the Hotel Royal, Hunter street, city. Cameron spent last night in a cell at the police station awaiting charges of, at least felonious wounding, if not murder, and also possibly of assaulting Constable Mahaffy, at this morning's session of the police court.

During the latter part of the afternoon many stories were rife, but of those supposedly true as coming from eye witnesses of the affray, two that were prominent were as follows: One witness or part of the trouble told a Times representative that Cameron entered the bar and seeing several men there, asked two or three that welcome question, "What will you have boys." This was quickly answered, and Cameron paid for two or three rounds of drinks. It then seems that some more of those present, not included in Cameron's invitation began to misuse him and a row began. One important said that when again of the men began to pick on him, Cameron remarked, "Well I can't fight eight of you, but it you don't serve me some I have something here that will make you," and drew a knife. In the fray that followed Cameron stabbed the one man in the face, and inflicted a dangerous wound on a Lindsay man, named Levi Thorndyke, and two others of the men attacking him.

The police were telephoned for, and P. C. Mahaffy it since run over, but Cameron had in the meantime escaped. The officer shortly afterwards caught him on George street between the Customs House and Moore's marble works. At the police station Cameron struck the officer whilst the latter was placing him in a cell.

The story of the fray as told by another man present is that Cameron began the row himself, by picking a quarrel with some men in the bar room. The bartender ordered him out when Cameron ran amuck with his knife cutting all within his reach, aiming his knife blows at their faces. Thornbyke received an ugly cut in the nose and another man had two cuts in the face. Medical attendance had to be called in, and the wounded man is in a serious condition. Two other men received slashes in the face.

A Times representative at the cost of much time and not a little diplomacy, interviewed, later on, others of those present at the stabbing, and the general consensus of the individual accounts is thusly. Cameron (as the stabber called himself at the police station) and a friend shortly before two o'clock yesterday afternoon, called for the first time at the Royal Hotel, and sat down in chairs in the office. Cameron's friend dropping to sleep in the chair, began to snore whereupon the bartender, as the proprietor, Mr. Kelly was at dinner, seeing this man the worse of liquor, proceeded to awake him and told the man to take a walk. On this Cameron became abusive, and warned the wine clerk to leave his friend alone. After some conversation the bartender got the two to leave by the back door leading to the yard, and then, as they returned to the bar, he went to the diningroom and advised Mr. Kelly of the state of affairs. Mr. Kelly requested, and, as this did not suffice demanded that they leave the house. Cameron in front of some eight men in the bar, when Kelly attempted to put him out, after he Kelly had telephoned for the police, said you dirty ——— ——— ———, would you call the 'Bulls' (Anglice constables) in to your house?" "Yes," Kelly replied, "I certainly would and have done so when you act like that in my place." On this, as Cameron's actions looked like fight, a man stepped between the two. Then Cameron remarking, "I'll do some of you ——— ———," deliberately drew a clasp knife from his pocket and as, is said, of frenzied Malays "run amuck." Kelly tried again to keep him quiet, saying, "Now don't act so foolish, do be a good fellow and get out of the house." However, Cameron seemed to be possessed by several scores of devils and with his knife stabbed Levi Thorndyke, a Lindsay man who was to have gone to work at the hotel in a day or two, through the cheek and nose so viciously that Thorndyke dropped bleeding from the nasal organs inwardly. He next attacked "Gib" Blezzard, whom he stabbed in the nose and whose cheek he slashed with his knife. Pat King, of the Rapid Tool Co., was Cameron's next victim, King receiving three knife cuts, two in the face and one in the neck, which latter narrowly avoided severing an artery.

In the meantime, five of the gallant eight previously in the bar, remembered appointments elsewhere and skiddooed to places with a less sultry climate. Cameron then turned his attention to Kelly, who was then behind the bar. With a full sweep of the arm he lunged a knife thrust at the hotel proprietor, but his blow fortunately fell short. Kelly, as well as some other men who came from the office, urged Cameron to leave the place. However the frenzied man made another thrust at Kelly, and missing this, reached to his hip pocket, but not finding what he thought or "bluffed," he had there, savagely hurled the words, "Damn you, if I had a gun I would put a hole through you, and if I see you any time within six months from now, I'll have you," as Kelly. Thereupon, to save his life or at least being stabbed, Kelly knocked Cameron down with a beer bottle.

After recovering, Cameron began to realize the awful crime he had committed, as Kelly and another man, seeing that he, Cameron, had temporarily quieted down, came to where the wounded men were to aid them, promptly made his escape, to be, as noted before, captured later. When searched at the station, Cameron had, besides other articles in his pockets a razor and the blood stained tell-tale knife.

There is no doubt but what on arrival at the Royal Hotel, Cameron had been drinking, as shortly after his arrest he was "dead to the world" in his cell. Cameron, The Times ascertained, found hard to get up a scrap at another local hotel on the preceding evening.

True Bill Brought Against Mrs Perkins

She Will be Tried for Murder at Cayuga.

Cayuga, April 18. — The Grand Jury brought in a true bill against Mrs. Perkins at 11.30 yesterday, after considering the evidence submitted by the Crown not a short time.

The judge ordered that Mrs. Perkins be brought in, and she was promptly escorted to the dock by the high constable.

She was then arraigned and she pleaded "not guilty," in a clear voice.

Asked if she was ready for her trial she replied: "I certainly am."

Mr. Johnson then asked Judge Mabee that if the prosecution presents evidence in regard to attempt to purchase poison at distant points by the defendant, or other testimony of a similar nature which the Crown could have produced at the preliminary hearings, he be given time to meet the evidence.

He said the Crown had stated that it had not, but the wanted a definite arrangement.

Mr. Arnoldi replied that he did not want to be restricted in the conduct of the case, and started off to tell of a witness in Detroit, that hadn't been secured, but who may be secured, and who identified—"

He was cut off at this point. Judge Mabee holding that the Crown counsel should confine his remarks to evidence that will be given by witnesses.

He said that the Crown would show that Mrs. Perkins had poisoned. Further than that he would not divulge the Crown's case.

Mr. Johnston said he did not have any quarrel with the Crown, but as counsel for a woman on trial for her life he did not want evidence sprung on him without an opportunity to meet it. The judge said he would give the defence every opportunity allowed by law to meet testimony offered against her.

The task of choosing a jury was then proceeded with. There were 20 challenges, 14 by the defence and 16 by the Crown. The jury finally selected was composed of Messrs. Jorrell, Rendershot, Marshall, Wren, Hewitt, Lindsay, Perkins, Best, Avery, A. Smith, F. C. Smith, Cranston.

Old Lady of 89 Years Violently Assaulted

Dastardly Affair Committed Near Bowmanville.

Bowmanville, April 18.—An Irish immigrant named T. J. Moore, who has been in this country about a year, appeared before Police Magistrate Hornsey on a charge of breaking into the residence of Mrs. Deacon, 89 years of age, who resides near the cemetery, east of the town. It seems that a week ago Monday night, Mrs. Deacon was awakened about 12 o'clock by some one trying her door. She called out, enquiring who was there, and not understanding the reply given, got out of bed and proceeded to dress. However, the party continued to bang against the door, and, after breaking through three doors, got into the room and assaulted her. Before leaving he lighted his pipe and promised to bring her a present if she kept quiet.

The old lady as soon as morning came hoisted a flag which she has been accustomed to do when wanting anything, and her neighbor, Mr. R. Witheridge, came over, when she related the events of the night, keeping back the worst feature of the story. He at once came up town and interviewed Chief of Police Jarvis, who from the description given soon located Moore.

Chief Jarvis discovered all the facts yesterday, and now Moore will have to answer to a more serious charge, as Mrs. Deacon positively identified him as the man and, in fact, he virtually admitted, after the case was over on Saturday, that he was the man who broke in, the subsequent facts not having been known at the time.

Mrs. Deacon is one of the oldest residents in this vicinity, having lived for some years in the township before removing up town, and is universally respected.

It seems that Moore, who buried his wife last January, then residing at Newcastle, had been drinking at one of the hotels all day.

Was Despondent and Shot Herself

Paris, April 18.—The Countess De-Jottemps committed suicide by shooting herself with a revolver in this city yesterday.

The Countess was a Russian, 27 years old, and possessed of considerable beauty. She was married two years ago against the wishes of her parents to the Count De Jottemps. The couple were constantly in financial straits. Last summer the count was arrested on a charge of pawning certain jewels that had been sent him on approval by a Paris dealer, and was held in custody for two months. Upon his release the countess went to Russia, presumably with the object of appealing to her parents for aid.

Upon her return to Paris she appeared more despondent, and made no attempt to conceal her desperate situation. The fact that her husband, after his arrest, was ostracized by society, added greatly to her anguish, and, it is believed, helped to unhinge her mind.

Ottawa and Bell Company

Ottawa, April 17.—The city and the Bell Telephone Company have come to terms, and the company was given a five-year monopoly for this city. The city receives $5,000 a year, with the sum of $2,500 on account of the year just passed, and for which no payment had been made. A clause agreed to gives the city or a competing company the right, if desired, to erect poles and string wires at any time during the last two years of the monopoly so as to be ready for business at the expiry of the quinquennial period. The rates for phones will be $35 for house and $45 for offices.

Women and Liquor

New York, April 17.—The Colony Club, the new and exclusive woman's club, which has just opened its house on Madison avenue, would like to have a license to sell liquor to its members. Quite a number of the members are firmly against the proposition, but a majority believe they should be permitted to have wine with their meals or at their receptions if they so desire. Unfortunately for the club, diagonally across the avenue, within the 200-foot limit, is the Madison avenue Baptist church, Rev. Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper pastor. Unless Dr. Tupper and his church consent no license can be issued, and so far both pastor and church have proved obdurate.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED

Kill the Germs by Breathing Hy-o-mei Gives Quick Relief.

Many people who have suffered with catarrh for years naturally feel that the disease cannot be cured, and become discouraged.

Their failure to get relief is due to the fact that they have not used the right remedy. Catarrh is an affection of the head, throat and lungs, and cannot be cured by stomach dosings.

The only scientific and natural treatment for this disease is Hy-o-mei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler, so that its healing medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells, kills all catarrh germs, and restores the mucous membrance of the nose, throat and lungs to a healthy condition.

We do not want anyone's money unless Hyomei gives relief and cure, and we absolutely agree that money will be refunded unless the remedy gives satisfaction.

All druggists should be able to supply you with Hyomei or we will send it by mail on receipt of price, $1.00, and every package is sold with the distinct understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures. Booth's Hyomei Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Happenings Around the Local Police Station.

Notwithstanding the bright sunshine of yesterday, quite a number of the Weary Willie Club left their warm brick wards for the close atmosphere and delights of the police court.

Mr. McWilliams, who appeared for Duncan, the man charged with assaulting Mr. Geo. Cochrane, whilst the latter was at Duncan's house to take the boy to the Children's Shelter. Mr. McWilliams before the trial opened observed that Mr. Cochrane had exceeded his powers in this matter. The magistrate, however, remarked that Cochrane was a county constable and as such had power in the city.

Mr. Cochrane, in the box, to Mr. Goodwill, acting for the Children's Aid Society, said that Willie Duncan, a son of the prisoner had been given over to the society in 1903. He had been high constable for about 12 and county constable for some 30 years. He testified to several other children of the prisoner having been placed in good homes by the society, this was done by consent of Duncan. After being in the society's charge for some three years, Willie was returned to the parents, but was only there steady for about one year, on the parents promising to send the child to school regularly. The teacher had sent him home as he was in such a dirty condition so he, Cochrane went after him. The boy has twice been taken from the parents. He went for the boy last Saturday evening between eight and nine o'clock, on an order from the C.A. Society's secretary. He found Duncan, his wife, the boy, John Kelly and two dogs. He told Duncan he, Cochrane, wanted the boy and Duncan said he could not have him. He asked Mr. Henry of the shelter, who had accompanied him to telephone for the police. When Henry left the house to phone, Duncan opened the door, caught him, Cochrane, by his collar and tie and his coat, and told him to get out of the house. They had a tussle. He choked Duncan to make him let go. Duncan made a second run at him, and repeated his first proceeding, but this time struck at him. Then there was a third round. Then Duncan's wife and Kelly got between them. Duncan again made a run at him as did a big dog. Mrs. Duncan then took a hand in with her fists, and Kelly got behind him and grabbed witness. Duncan tried to bite his hand. Then Mr. Henry came in and Duncan made a rush at him, as he entered the door, but Henry shoved him against the wall. He, witness and Duncan then sat down for awhile. As the boy was not in the house they left and met P. C. Meharry. The three entered the house to look for the boy, Duncan kicked away a few steps, and then forward and struck him a heavy blow in the mouth with his fist. Meharry then after a tussle with him, arrested Duncan. The boy is eight years old, who has not yet been found. He smelt liquor off Duncan, and his wife was drunk.

To Mr. McWilliams, the present Mrs. Duncan is second wife. He did not lay so much stress on the boy [illegible] boy as on him, a ward of the society, but on a waggon, gathering rags.

Mr. John Kelly said he was at Duncan's house that night. Duncan was the aggressor in each of the four rounds.

Mr. W. Henry [illegible] shelter, corroborated Mr. Cochrane's evidence.

P. C. Meharry testified to going to make the arrest at Duncan's house and to Duncan striking Cochrane in the mouth.

This ended the case of the prosecution when the magistrate committed prisoner for trial by the county judge.

Ernest Lowes, a boy 16 years old, was charged with stealing a bologna sausage from James Scott, a butcher at the corner of George and Perry streets. He left the place picked up last Friday, except the front door transom. Next morning he found some bologna sausages on the floor. Some on the wall had been moved, but could not say whether any were gone.

Samuel Murphy was passing the butcher shop Friday afternoon and saw a bologna on the sidewalk, and saw a boy crawl out of the transom window, who said something about this cap being thrown into the shop. The boy threw the bologna through the fanlight into the store. The prisoner was not the boy who was in the store, but it was he who was in the store, but it was he who threw the bologna into the shop.

Robert Kingan, a small boy in the box, said he it was that entered the fanlight, prisoner telling him to go in and get a bologna. Prisoner pushed him up to the transom. Prisoner threw this witness, half into the store. A boy called "Squint" threw witness cap into the store.

Mr. Goodwill, who acted for the prisoner, claimed that there was no corroboration of the little boy's evidence. The magistrate allowed the prisoner to go with a warning.

Local Option is Off in Asphodel

Mr. Justice Anglin yesterday quashed the local option bylaw in Asphodel township, Peterborough county on the ground that a polling place in one of the sub-divisions had been changed without public notice having been given, and that voting took place three or four days later than required by the bylaw. The vote stood 219 for and 109 against the bylaw.

TELLS OF THE DEADLY PERILS OF MOROCCO

American After Trip Through Inland Part of the Country Tells of the Dangers There--- Protection is Needed.

Paris, April 17.—George Curtis, an American painter, who has resided in Paris many years, has just returned from several months' sojourn in Marrakesh, Morocco, where Dr. Mauchamp, a Frenchman, was murdered recently by natives. Mr. Curtis said:

"This so-called peaceful occupation of Morocco is too peaceful. You remember the old saying that 'the only good Indian is a dead one?' Well, those Arabs in Morocco carry the same kind of goodness under their skins."

Mr. Curtis, besides painting bright pictures of Arabs in flowing robes, paints a dark picture of the situation in Marrakesh and in all the other inland cities of Morocco.

"Every European will be massacred," he continued, "unless all of them are properly protected, and soon, too. It has already been said, but I repeat it, that the natives in remote districts, like Marrakesh for instance, know nothing of the movement of the French troops upon Oujda. They are entirely ignorant of and never will comprehend the meaning of the French occupation of Oujda as a correction measure.

CANNOT CONTROL SITUATION.

"The Maghzen may be brought to task and it may make reparation for the massacre of Dr. Mauchamp, but the Maghzen cannot control the situation in far-away Marrakesh.

"All through southern Morocco the Viceroy and Caids constitute the supreme authority. They are stronger than the Sultan. Just to illustrate the autocratic powers which these sub-potentates enjoy I will cite a few examples of their regular customs. It may sound like comic opera, but it is a fact.

"The Viceroy is out shooting or taking an airing, for instance, and he notices a prosperous-looking estate which some industrious inhabitant has collected by economy and thrift. The Viceroy decides that he would like to possess the house and grounds, so he goes to the owner and announces that he will buy the property. He makes no inquiry as to the price, but simply tells the man he will give so much, and the latter knows he has disposed of his property."

LIVE ON THE DEFENSIVE.

Life in Marrakesh, according to Mr. Curtis, is somewhat "on the defensive." Foreigners who should be so foolish as to go out walking without carrying a gun and being accompanied by a servant, also armed on a war footing, would probably disappear from local circulation and be forgotten.

Mr. Curtis says that while making sketches he always observed the "useful" habit of taking a rifle with him, leaning it against his easel, while his servant also carried a big gun as an extra precautionary measure.

"Practically speaking," said Mr. Curtis, "nobody goes out of his house at night in Marrakesh. If a citizen invites his friends to dinner they come early and stay in his house until next day. Returning home from a gay party is not considered healthful at night."

Referring to the assassination of Dr. Mauchamp, Mr. Curtis said that fanaticism and sorcery were largely responsible. Dr. Mauchamp was looked upon as a devil. Moreover, the Governor of Marrakesh did nothing for the French physician's security and never checked or punished the natives, who thus became more and more insolent and aggressive.

Most Revolting Cruelty to Boy

London, April 17.—A case of cruelty to a boy, described by an officer of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children as the worst he had seen in fifteen years, was before the Guernsey, Herm, police court yesterday. Frederick Leadbetter, gardener and ex-policeman, of Lukes Road, Kenton, was summoned for cruelty to Freddy Cox, aged six, the son of Dora Cox, with whom the accused had been living.

Mr. Gregory, who prosecuted, said the accused had been in the army and in the Metropolitan Police. Leadbetter seemed to have developed a hatred for the boy, and the headmaster at Kenton Schools noticed that from being bright and intelligent when he first went to the school the boy had grown nervous and shrinking. He further noticed that the boy's hands and thumbs were so swollen that he could not hold a pencil to write. A doctor was called in and the boy was removed to the infirmary.

The inspector found at the house that defendant had erected a trapeze in one of the rooms for the purpose of making the boy swing and exercise. The boy could not do it, and when he was put by his father on the trapeze with his head down and hanging by the legs he fell and injured his shoulder, and was then beaten because he fell off.

Dr. Blake said he found the boy had been disgracefully knocked about. Although it was three days after the beating his hands, thumbs and wrists were swollen and tender. The arms, back and thighs were covered with weals, and on the right shoulder was a large bruise which could have been caused by a fall from a trapeze. They boy had been brutally maltreated.

The defendant had no defence; all he said was, "I simply lost my temper; that is all."

He was fined £5 and 12s. costs.

Miss Maud E. Hay Is Now Mrs. Osborne

Pretty Marriage of a Well Known Young Lady of this City.

Yesterday morning a charming wedding was accomplished at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Snyder, 437 George street, when Miss Maud Evelyn Hay, daughter of Mrs. R. M. Hay, was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Mr. David Osborne, chief operator of the C.P.R. Telegraph Company. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Davidson in the drawing room, before some twenty guests. The bride was charmingly gowned in white silk, trimmed with lace and wearing a white hyacinth hat, entered the room upon the arm of her brother, Mr. Robt. Hay, who gave her away. She was attended by Miss Cora Louise Ostrine, of Listowel.

The wedding party adjourned after the ceremony to the dining room, where an elegant repast, supplied by Mr. T. Hopper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Osborne left on the noon C.P.R. train for a trip to Montreal and Boston. When they return they will reside at 569 George street.

HOUSEKEEPERS who are wise will not be persuaded into purchasing the unreliable baking powders which some dealers wish to sell for the sake of the additional profit derived therefrom. Crudely mixed from low-grade, impure ingredients, such powders cost but half as much to make as the highly refined, absolutely pure Royal Baking Powder, although retailed at the same price. They are unwholesome and lacking in leavening strength.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER gives the greatest value for its cost, and there is no other baking powder or leavening preparation that will give such satisfaction, or make such pure, wholesome and delicious food, or which in practical use will be found so economical.

ULILITARIANISM

The raising of the Assouan Dam in Egypt 23 feet, just decided upon, will, at a cost of $7,500,000, increase the amount of water stored two and one-half times, bring 950,000 more acres under cultivation, add some $13,000,000 to the value of the cotton crop, but it will submerge Philae and flood the temples between Assuan and Wady Halfa. The temples will be strengthened, but archaeologists deplore the treatment to which they will be subjected by a matter-of-fact age. Their protests prevented the dam being built at first to the intended height. Aesthetics and archaeology prevailed over bare utility. But the agricultural profits secured by the storing of water have been so great that the demand for a higher dam and more water has become irresistible. The money interests of the present generation of Egyptians outweigh the interest taken in the works of their remote progenitors.

NOT THE BEST

Everything made in Germany is not the best. Germany's great naval expert, Count Reventlow, has a poor opinion of Germany's naval armament. According to this excellent authority, seventeen of the nation's battleships are nothing better than "floating coffins," being unseaworthy and obsolete. He also unqualifiedly condemns a large number of the auxiliary war vessels. One Dreadbought, Count Reventlow asserts, could smash the whole collection in short order. Germany began her naval building too soon, and as a result she has a navy principally of obsolete ships. Great Britain had preceded her, but Great Britain has retired and broken up her obsolete types and replaced them with modern ships.

The United States is in better shape navally than Germany, but it does not take long to go tout of date in these rapid days.

W. Dossetter Cowper Committed Suicide

London, Eng., April 17.—Mr. W. W. Dossetter Cowper, who was for many years a prominent local politician in St. Pancras, and who poisoned himself at his house last Thursday, left pathetic letters explaining his reason. They were read in the coroner's court.

The old tale—forty years, I am forty-seven (he wrote). I have been in my situation just over twelve years. Before Christmas I was asked to look out for another. What chance have I with my age, and present condition of things, to get one?

He sent an intimate friend, Mr. Dones, a letter before ending his life. He wrote:

Tonight I am going to take the fatal step, I feel I could not remain here and drag my children down.

The coroner remarked that, judging from the letters Mr. Cowper had written—and he had penned a few dozen before taking his life—he was evidently very found of his children.

The under manager of the stock broking firm where Mr. Cowper was clerk said his dismissal had become imperative. It was his habit to have sandwiches for lunch, and immediately after eating them he would doze off in the middle of a calculation, and, as a consequence, serious errors would creep into the books, resulting in losses to the firm.

Mr. Councillor Hewett, a member of the St. Pancras Borough Council, was of opinion that Cowper did not get enough sleep at night, as he used to go home and do a lot of work for the different associations with which he was connected. He had been peculiar lately, and once called the witness a "borough scoundrel," and threw books at him.

Mr. Dones, the friend to whom he had written, said Cowper used to declare that he did not know what he and his children would do when his notice expired. He had always displayed a great interest in parochial affairs, and had done a large amount of gratuitous work.

A verdict of "temporary insane" was returned.

How Clouds and Fogs Differ.

Clouds are bodies of moisture evaporated from the earth and again partially condensed in the upper regions of the air. Fogs differ from clouds only in one respect—they come in contact with the surface of the earth while clouds are elevated above our heads. When the surface of the earth is warmer than the lower air the vapor of the earth, being condensed by the chill air, becomes mist or fog. But when the lower air is warmer than the earth the vapor rises through the air and becomes cloud. Fog and mist differ in this respect—that mist is a fine rain, while fog is vapor not sufficiently condensed to allow of its precipitation in drops.

The Fata Morgana.

The most singular aerial phenomenon is the fata morgana, a sea mirage seen off the coast of Calabria and between Italy and Sicily. It presents the phantoms of cities, houses, temples, palaces and ships, sometimes in their proper position, sometimes inverted, occasionally at an angle. The phenomenon has been known for many ages and formerly occasioned great and widespread alarm, being regarded as an evil omen that betokened some general and severe calamity.

Curious Effects of Frost.

An egg expands when it is frozen so much that the increased bulk breaks the shell. Apples, on the contrary, contract to such an extent that a full barrel will shrink until the top layer will be a foot below the chime. When the frost has been slowly and carefully drawn out they again assume their normal size and appearance. Apples can be transported when the mercury is 20 degrees below zero. Potatoes once touched by frost are ruined.

Invites the tradesman, mechanic, merchant, professional, craftsman and farmer to become shareholders and co-operating profit sharers in the very profitable and up-to-date business of conducting

A Great Co-Operative Department Store and Mail Order Institution

In the City of Cleveland

An Ohio Corporation of $500,000. - Shares $10 Each

BY THE PEOPLE — FOR THE PEOPLE

This Institution saves for the consumer what otherwise becomes the profit of the individual.

$10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER. $10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER.

Our Preferred Stock Bears

7 per cent. guaranteed cumulative dividends and shares in addition to the 7 per cent. in the whole profits of the institution.

Unlimited Dividends

Can be earned in department store investments. A department store near here paid over 50 per cent. in dividends to its investors last year.

Department Store Investments are Good

Because department store merchandising is a very conservative and profitable business.

Our Department Store Investment is the Best

Because our thousands of shareholders will do as owners do and have always done: "talk the business," "boom the business," "advertise the business," and influence their friends and relatives to trade at their own store. This will place our business on a self productive basis immediately. They certainly will do this because they have always done so under the same indentical conditions.

A 5% Discount from Regular Prices will be Allowed Shareholders

in this institution being in itself a very attractive interest to investors in this Company.

A Great Mail Order Department

Will be our accommodation for out of town shareholders and patrons.

Our Business Location is Ideal

For local business, located in the heart of the West Side business center it is, immediately surrounded by a West Side purchasing clientage of 200,000 people and commands the approach of as many more East Side residents and the vast urban population that comes cityward for their supplies.

So in this enterprise we are combining the features that have made

John Wanamaker, Philadelphia and New York City
Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, Ill.,
Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, Ill., and
Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago, Ill.,

each in themselves tremendously successful, having each made millions of dollars for their stockholders.

Limitation of Subscription

There will be no individual control in this Company. We prefer to sell no more than 100 shares to any individual desiring an investment with us, as we desire to obtain the widest possible distribution of our shares.

How the Shareholder is Safeguarded in Every Way

When you secure a certificate of stock you own a valuable piece of property, representing as it does an investment that will secure for you a constant income, aside from the many other advantages to be enjoyed as a shareholder. Note the binding obligations of the Company to those that invest.

Your stock if preferred is guaranteed seven per cent.

Your shares are full paid and non-assessable.

Your dividends are cumulative and participating.

Every dollar received by the Company for stock is going right into the business for active service. You have vote and voice in the management of the business. When we say your stock is preferred, we mean that it is guaranteed seven per cent. per annum, before the common stock can be paid one penny. The preferred stock has absolutely the first claim—in effect a first mortgage on all assets of the Company—the property—the property rights, trade marks, trade rights, etc., and on the net profits of the business.

The following Officers and Directors of this Company, constituted wholly of Cleveland and Ohio men of undoubted integrity and business qualifications, will best bespeak our policy and our substantiability:

OFFICERS:

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered; the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings here out the assesays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 20 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

every day of our lives, little suspecting to what it may broaden out.

"I had the pleasure of seeing you last night," said Sir John at once, "at Lady Fitzmannering's evening party, or 'at home,' I believe we call them nowadays. Some of the guests read the invitation too much au pied de la lettre for my taste. They were so much at home that I, fearing to intrude, left rather early."

He was beginning to wonder why he had been invited—nay, almost commanded—to come, by an imperious little note. And of late whenever Sir John began to wonder he began also to feel old.

At that moment the door opened and there entered a complex odor of hair wash and perfumery—a collar which must have been nearly related to a cuff, and a pair of tight patent leather boots, all attached to and somewhat overpowering a young man.

"Ah, my dear Mr. Grubb," said Lady Cantourne, "how good of you to call so soon! You will have some tea. Millicent, give Mr. Grubb some tea."

Then Lady Cantourne went to the conservatory and left Sir John and Jocelyn at the end of the long room together. There is nothing like a woman's instinct. Jocelyn spoke at once.

"Lady Cantourne," she said, "kindly asked me to meet you today on purpose. I live at Loango; I know your son, Mr. Meredith, and we thought you might like to hear about him and about Loango."

"Yes," he said, with a strange hesitation, "yes, you are kind. Of course I am interested. I wonder," he went on, with a sudden change of manner—"I wonder how much you know."

"I know," she answered, "that you have had a difference of opinion—but no one else knows! You must not think that Mr. Meredith has spoken of his private affairs to any one else. The circumstances were exceptional, and Mr. Meredith thought that it was due to me to give me an explanation."

Sir John looked a little puzzled, and Jocelyn went on rather hastily to explain:

"My brother and Mr. Meredith were at Eton together. They met somewhere up the coast and my brother asked Mr. Meredith to come and stay. It happened that Maurice was away when Mr. Meredith arrived, and I did not know who he was, so he explained."

"I see," said Sir John; "and you and your brother have been kind to my boy. And I dare say," he added, with a somewhat lame attempt at cynicism, "that you have heard no good of me?"

But Jocelyn would have none of that. She was no child to be abashed by sarcasm, but a woman, completed and perfected by her love.

"Excuse me," she said sharply, "but that is not the truth, and you knew it. You know as well as I do that your son would never say a word against you."

Sir John was looking at her keenly, his hard blue eyes like steel between the lashless lids.

"You disquiet me," he said. "I have a sort of feeling that you have bad news to tell me."

"No," she answered, "not exactly. But it seems to me that no one realises what he is doing out in Africa—what risks he is running."

"Tell me," he said, drawing in his chair. "I will not interrupt you. Tell me all you know from beginning to end. I am naturally somewhat interested."

So Jocelyn told him. And what she said was only a recapitulation of facts known to such as have followed these pages to this point. Suddenly he broke into the narrative. He saw, keen old worldling that he was, a discrepancy.

"But," he said, "there was no one in Loango connected with the scheme who"—he paused, touching her sleeve with a bony finger—"who sent the telegram home to young Oscard; the telegram calling him out to Jack's relief?"

"Oh," she explained lightly, "I did. My brother was away, so there was no one else to do it, you see."

"Yes, I see."

And perhaps he did.

Sir John took his leave. He bowed over Jocelyn's hand, and Millicent, watching them keenly, could see nothing—no gleam of a mutual understanding in the politely shining eyes.

"Perhaps," he said, "I may have the pleasure of meeting you again?"

"I am afraid it is doubtful," she answered, with something that sounded singularly like exultation in her voice. "We are going back to Africa almost at once."

And she, also, took her leave of Lady Cantourne.

* * * * * * *

One afternoon Joseph had his wish. Moreover, he had it given to him even as he desired, which does not usually happen. We are given a part, or the whole, so distorted that we fail to recognise it.

Joseph looked up from his work and saw Jocelyn coming into the bungalow garden.

He went out to meet her, putting on his coat as he went.

"How is Mr. Meredith?" she asked at once. Her eyes were very bright and there was a sort of breathlessness in her manner which Joseph did not understand.

"He is a bit better, miss, thank you kindly. But he don't make the progress I should like. It's the weakness that follows the malarial attack that the doctor has to fight against."

"Where is he?" asked Jocelyn.

"Well, miss, at the moment he is in the dug-out yard. We bring him down there for the change of air in the afternoon. Likely as not, he's asleep."

And presently Jack Meredith, lying comfortably somnolent on the outskirts of life, heard light footsteps, but hardly heeded them. He knew that some one came into the room and stood silently by his couch for some seconds. He lazily unclosed his eyelids for a moment, not in order to see who was there, but with a view of intimating that he was not asleep. But he was not wholly conscious. To men accustomed to an active, energetic life a long illness is nothing but a period of complete rest. In his more active moments Jack Meredith sometimes thought that this rest of his was extending into a dangerously long period, but he was too weak to feel anxiety about anything.

Jocelyn moved away and busied herself noiselessly with one or two of those small duties of the sickroom which women see and men ignore. But she could not keep away. She came back and stood over him with a silent sense of possession which made that moment one of the happiest of her life. She remembered it in after years, and the complex feelings of utter happiness and complete misery that filled it.

At last a fluttering moth gave the excuse her heart longed for, and her fingers rested for a moment, light as the moth itself, upon his hair. There was something in the touch which made

The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. The Peculiar Frigate Bird.

The frigate bird is a native of tropical seas and rarely comes to land except during the breeding season. It has the habit, unusual among sea birds, of nesting in trees, large companies of them building together in the tops of the tallest mangroves. Like the cormorant and the albatross, the frigate bird lays but one egg. It lives by fishing and also by robbing other fishers of what they have caught. In plumage the frigate bird is brownish black, with metallic green and purple reflections. The dilatable throat sac in the male is of bright scarlet, while the female, of a duller general hue, has a white patch on the breast. It is a beautiful sight to watch one or more floating overhead against the deep blue sky, the long forked tail alternately opening and shutting like a pair of scissors and the head, which is, of course, kept to windward, inclined from side to side, while the wings are to all appearance fixedly extended, though the breeze may be constantly varying in strength and direction.

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

Mining operations will be commenced just as soon as weather conditions permit.

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 23. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 30 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 20 acres of J. B. 23 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 6 inch nicollite, 12 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1232-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

New Liskeard, 17th November, 1906.

Its first action is upon digestion.

It stimulates the secretion of gastric juice, ensures perfect digestion and prepares the food so as to be easily assimilated.

Thus everything you eat is converted into nourishment that enriches the blood and lends new strength to the nerves.

By Ferrozone the mind is relieved of those brooding tendencies, of morbid unnatural fears, of unwillingness to concentrate attention on things that should be done.

Won't you try Ferrozone?

Won't you give it a chance to win you back to health; it will do it, just as it did for Mrs. Creighton Zinck, of Palm St., Lunenburg, N. S., who says: "I want to give my experience with Ferrozone because I believe it will be of assistance to thousands of women who need it badly. I was very thin, run down in flesh and lacked color. My nerves were in a dreadful state. If anything fell I would jump and start. At night I would suddenly wake up, heart palpitating and all keyed up. Ferrozone went right to work. It restored my poise and balance, gave me self-control, cured my nervousness. Ferrozone increased my appetite and my weight came up so fast that I simply didn't need to use it any longer. Eight boxes cured me!"

Why won't you use Ferrozone also, it certainly will do you good in many ways—sold by all druggists in 50c. boxes.

Another Great Larder Lake Syndicate

The Ottawa, Larder and Opasitika Lake Company Formed.

The wonderful riches of the Larder Lake district, in copper and gold, is now attracting attention from mining men and investors from all parts of the continent. A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres, comprising five claims to the south of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzgerald claims and nine claims near to the celebrated Dr. Teddick claims at the north-east arm of the lake. Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, and close to the King of the North claims and other valuable properties rich in gold and copper.

Only 550 syndicate shares are to be sold at $100 per share, which will entitle the purchaser to one thousand shares in a company capitalized at $1,000,000. As these shares will be snapped up rapidly, and mining operations will begin as soon as climatic conditions render work possible, it will pay those seeking an investment to get in on the ground floor and participate in the increasing values of shares. For full particulars call on Thos. Paterson & Co., fiscal agents, Peterborough, or write Wilson Bros. & Co., brokers, 75 Queen street, Ottawa.

Fine Commodious Hall of Music

Mr. Ruper Glidden, director of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, with his proverbial energy and interest in matters musical, who has long felt the need of a suitable and commodious concert hall for recitals, etc., in connection with the Conservatory is now within sight of a close culmination of his desires, as yesterday, work was begun on a new concert hall.

The new structure, made of brick, will face on Rubidge street, just north of the present building. Mr. James Montgomery has the contract. The edifice will be 100x40 feet and will be modern in every particular. It will be provided with a gallery and ample stage or platform room, and will seat about 800 persons. It is expected that the structure will be completed early this fall.

ROMANTIC DEVONSHIRE

The Land Made Famous by Philpotts' Novels.

Philpotts has made us familiar with romantic Devonshire, in his fascinating novels, "The River," "Children of the Mist," etc. The characters are very human; the people there drink coffee with the same results as elsewhere. A writer at Rock House, Orchard Hill, Bideford, North Devon, states:

"For 20 years I drank coffee for breakfast and dinner but some 5 years ago I found that it was producing indigestion and heartburn, and was making me restless at night. These symptoms were followed by brain fag and a sluggish mental condition.

"When I realized this, I made up my mind that to quit drinking coffee and having read of Postum, I concluded to try it. I had it carefully made, according to directions, and found to my agreeable surprise at the end of a week, that I no longer suffered from either indigestion, heartburn, or brain-fag, and that I could drink it at night and secure restful and refreshing sleep.

"Since that time we have entirely discontinued the use of the old kind of coffee, growing fonder and fonder of Postum as time goes on. My digestive organs certainly do their work much better now than before, a result due to Postum Food Coffee. I am satisfied.

"As a table beverage we find (for all the members of my family use it) that when properly made it is most refreshing and agreeable, of delicious flavour and aroma. Vigilance is, however, necessary to secure this, for unless the servants are watched they are likely to neglect the thorough boiling which it must have in order to extract the goodness from the cereal." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

The Knock-out Blow.

The blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he'd have laughed at him for an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing home to the public a parallel fact; that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but the stomach we are utterly indifferent to, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures "weak stomach," indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 31 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 50 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

TWENTY-FIVE WOMEN BURNED TO DEATH

Terrible Loss of Life Reported in a Fire Which Broke Out Yesterday Afternoon in a Laundry in Montreal.

MONTREAL, April 19.—A fire broke out yesterday afternoon about three o'clock in the premises of the Canada Steam Laundry on St. Justin street, near St. Catherine street. In the building probably upwards of one hundred women were employed and the flames spread with such rapidity among the linen, cotton and other inflammable goods that it is reported 25 of them were burned to death.

The fire brigade responded promptly and worked hard to control the flames, and by their gallant work succeeded in rescuing many of the imprisoned girls, from the awful death trap.

Relatives of employes are in almost uncontrolable grief, fearing that their friends are among the lost. An immense crowd gathered and the police found great difficulty in coping with the confused throng. After a hard and strenuous fight on the part of the firemen the fire was put out but not until the place had been thoroughly gutted. Many of the firemen were severely hurt in their efforts to save the girls.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Happenings Around the Local Police Station.

Yesterday's Police Court was crowded to its utmost capacity, in fact the rattling somewhat resembled a dry-goods bonnet-counter on a bargain day when regular $4.50 hats are marked down to $1.17 each.

The young man, Anglesea, who some days ago pleaded guilty to stealing a chatelaine bag from a young woman of Selwyn whilst in a local hotel, said bag containing $15.10, was up for sentence. Anglesea had been remanded at his trial a few days ago that his record might be investigated before sentence was pronounced. The Magistrate in his opening remarks said: "Anglesea, have you anything to say?" The prisoner said, "No, I am guilty." "Yes," retorted the Magistrate, "you said that before. I remanded you for a week to have your character and record looked into, and the result has been greatly against you. You are a big, able-bodied man, well able to work. You stole this money deliberately and at once proceeded to change the bills to hide your tracks. I had it in mind to give you six months in the Central Prison, but I will err perhaps on the side of leniency. The sentence of the court is that you be confined in the County Jail for three months!" The young lady whose purse Anglesea stole was in court and the purse, together with $8.35 the balance left by the prisoner, was returned to her. The Magistrate advised her to look more sharply after her money in future.

Mr. Gordon pleaded guilty on behalf of his client, F. Gasseen, to a charge of obstructing Stewart street. He made a plea for leniency, as the man had 1100 feet of cars and, whilst obstructing the street, had done all in his power to save delay. The Magistrate noted that he recognized the difficulty the railroad men had at this and other points in the city, but could not set a precedent by letting him go. He imposed a fine of $20 with $1.50 costs, to be paid in 10 days.

Sam Detcher was charged with being drunk and disorderly in a public place. He pleaded guilty. The Magistrate said "Sam Detcher, why we had a Sam Detcher here 100 years ago!" He imposed a fine of $2, to be paid in 10 days.

Samuel McGuire, a man sixty-six years of age who has been in the city for nine years and in the County Jail for some months, was charged with vagrancy and was given six months with hard labor in Castle Nesbitt. It seems that the prisoner has, to use a slang expression, "wheels in his upper storey."

Frank Cameron was charged with having, on April 17th, unlawfully wounded Levi Thorndyke, a Lindsay man. "Cameron," it was evident by his not rising when called by that name, is not the man's name, elected to be tried summarily, i.e., by the Magistrate. When asked, "Are you guilty or not guilty?" the prisoner replied, "I guess I'll have to plead guilty. I think I drew a knife, but I did it in self defence." He also pleaded guilty to having unlawfully wounded Patrick King. The same charge in connection with wounding Gilbert Blezzard was also admitted to be correct. The Chief explained that Thorndyke was in the hospital. Blezzard was in court with a strip of sticking plaster some six inches big across his cheek and nose. The prisoner was remanded for sentence for one week on these charges and also on a charge of resisting P. C. Meharry whilst that officer was arresting him. The Chief arranged to have the prisoner's photograph taken during the morning, presumably to have the portrait sent to Toronto and elsewhere to see if his past record can be traced.

Successful Smoker at Conservative Club

Scotch Night Celebrated and Enjoyed by Large Audience.

Last night this large parlor of the Young Conservative Club was fairly well filled by a most representative lot of Peterborough's young men, who gathered there to help usher in making Scotland's night at the club a success, and a success it was. Among those present was the old Conservative war horse, Mr. John Carnegie.

Mr. Peter Gardiner, chairman of the meeting, introduced the affairs of the evening, by saying he hoped that all present had brought their pipes. He said that this, whilst Scotland's night, noted that it was an unusual time of year for his countrymen to celebrate. The Scotsmen's great feasts were those of St. Andrew's, and Scotland's immortal bard, Bobby Burns. He welcomed the large gathering present. He then introduced Col. Moler, who recited "Glencoe," an Irish piece by a Scotch writer. Without making invidious comparisons, as between the many talented performers present, undoubtedly the star event of the evening was that of Miss Lapsley "Long-yard Watch Song!" rendered upon effectively as a duet by Mr. Greenslade on the clear bell-like tenor and Mr. Paddick, whose magnificent bass voice would easily have put him in the limelight were he with any high class opera company. The program of the evening was as follows:

Recitation ..... Col. Miller
Col. Miller ..... Recitation
Mr. Barr ..... Song
Messrs. Paddick and Greenslade, Duet
Chas. Brown ..... Song
Mr. Paddick ..... Song
Mr. Claiborne ..... Song
Mr. Pratt ..... Song

DON'T DIE AT 45

Cure the Indigestion Which is so Liable to Lead to Apoplexy.

Rush of business, eating too fast and too much, excesses of any kind, soon result in indigestion. Then when the digestive organs cannot care for the food properly the coats of the blood vessels in the brain get little nourishment, become brittle, and finally yield to the fierce blood pressure. One is then said to have a "shock," to be paralyzed, or to die from apoplexy.

People suffering with headache, giddiness, palpitation, sleeplessness, bad taste in the mouth, drowsiness, coated tongue, distress after eating, specks before the eyes, and any other of the many distressing results of a weakened stomach should profit by the discovery of Mi-o-na stomach tablets.

In recent years the greatest advance in medicine has been in the study of diseases of digestion and nutrition and no other prescription has proven itself of as much value as Mi-o-na. It is relied upon as a certainty today in relieving the worst troubles of digestion and assimilation and making a complete cure.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c box of Mi-o-na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents. Booth's Mi-o-na Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Salvation Army Funeral Yesterday

Remains of the Late Charles Fry Buried With Army Ceremonies.

Yesterday a typical Salvation Army funeral was held when the last mortal remains of the late Charles Fry, whose death occurred on Tuesday, took place from the family residence, McDonnel street, to the Salvation Army barracks, where a memorial service was conducted by Adjt. Wiggins, and thence to Little Lake cemetery.

The funeral cortege marched in good order to the solemn strains of a funeral march rendered in perfect tune by the splendid local Army band. The order of the procession was first the band of 27 instruments, the undertaker, Mr. Comstock, the hearse supported by the pall bearers in the Army uniform, viz., Messrs. Dancey, Leader, Parr, Hobbs, Swinning and Holman, then eighteen women and six men, members of the Army, who were followed by private conveyances.

"GET RICH QUICK" PROPOSITIONS

Nevada mines exploited by promoters, using full page advertisements in the eastern newspapers, owning as a protection claims adjoining good mines, and using the money themselves obtained from these advertisements instead of developing their properties, have created a feeling of distrust. Gradually, the good mines have overcome this, and now conservative Eastern buyers include good Nevada properties in their securities.

It is not generally understood why a good mine needs money and should not pay dividends from the start, but it is necessary to open up and prove same, install machinery for the successful working of the ore, before it is on a paying basis.

This accomplished, the stock jumps, even to 1000 per cent., if it is for sale at any price.

We have a good mine, with ore assaying up to $12,000.00. We want money to put in machinery. We can tell you of a bootblack investing one year ago $200.00, and now selling for $42,000.00; of a barber investing $150.00, and selling in eight months for $38,000.00. While these are exceptions, the failures of mines are less than one-half those of banks and only five per cent. of those of mercantile failures.

We want you to write us and we will tell you all about it, also name shareholders near you. Shares are for sale now at 25c. (par value $1.00), but the price will be advanced to 50c. in the near future. Silver Queen Mining Co., 24 Bacon Bldg., Oakland, Calif. Mines in the "Wonder District," Nevada.

Wants Sign Bylaw Made Reasonable

Correspondent Is Against Taxing the Illuminated Signs.

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—It is greatly to be hoped that when the city council meets next Monday night that the question of signs, on our principal streets, will be given earnest consideration. I understand that the Retail Merchants' Association will wait on the city fathers, and if so there should be a large representation from every class not only of the mercantile but the manufacturing elements of our city present. The idea of some of the aldermen seems to have Peterborough an Utopian example of modern unprogressiveness. With no signs, as are in evidence in every progressive city to the world and with all goods usually placed on view and sale as in the past, taken inside the various shops, Peterborough would look as though a blight had fallen on her, and that every business day were a Sunday. In the case of fruit dealers, such merchants in hot weather would not only lose trade but have vast quantities of goods spoiled on their hands. Only one legislation should be enacted and that as concerning fruit and other edibles, which for obvious reasons, should be required to be placed on exhibition not lower than at least two feet above the pavements. The idea of allowing fruit and fish to be placed within one foot of the pavement is unsanitary, indecent and intolerable. As regards the illuminated signs any one who has visited large cities knows the brilliancy and beauty of the streets by night, when hundreds of such brilliant and scintillating signs make such streets a scene of beauty. Instead of demanding a tax on such signs that beautify our main thoroughfares by night, the city should rather give the owners of such a bonus. We want travellers stopping over night in this city to carry away an impression of life, business and go-aheadness concerning Peterborough. One George street merchant who pays over $1,000 a year into the city treasury would have, under the present proposed sign bylaw have to take down or pay $2 a year for his illuminated sign which is an ornament to the street. This seems a penny-wise policy unworthy the good name of our progressive city.

Yours truly,
PROGRESS.

WIFE AND BABY GONE

While Husband Was Tied Fast They Were Kidnapped.

HIRED MAN THE CULPRIT

Had Just Been Discharged by the Farmer on Account of Bad Conduct.

LONDON, April 18.—Frank Attwood, a young farmer living a few miles southwest of this city, in Lobo township, yesterday morning swore out a warrant for the arrest of Arthur Scott, the 21 year-old son of a neighbor, kidnapping is the charge.

Attwood, who is one of the most respected residents of the locality in which he resides, told one of the most remarkable stories that has ever been given to the county police. He says that at three o'clock yesterday morning three men forced an entrance into his house and, after tieing him hand and foot to a bed, drove away with his wife and child, nine months old. Attwood was so securely fastened that he did not manage to extricate himself for two hours, when he notified some of his neighbors, and then drove to London to swear out a warrant. He claims that he recognized the three men, one of whom he claims was Scott.

The county police say the kidnapping was carefully planned. They have learned that a young man, answering to the description of Scott, came to a local livery the preceding night and hired a team of the best horses saying that he wanted to drive to the country. Yesterday morning the team was returned by a boy, who said they had been turned over to him at a hotel by some strangers, who asked him to take them to the livery. The horses gave every indication of having been driven a long distance.

The police have also learned that a man and woman answering the description of Scott and Mrs. Attwood boarded the train which leaves for Windsor at 6.30 a.m.

ACROSS THE BORDER.

Later.—The county police have received information which satisfies that that Scott and Mrs. Attwood went to Detroit on the 6.30 a.m. G. T. R. train, and that they are now beyond the reach of the Canadian authorities. Delay in notifying the police of the kidnapping gave Scott ample time to get to the border. Although Attwood rescued himself at 5 o'clock, it was nearly 12 o'clock before the authorities received word of the affair.

Scott was formerly employed as a farm hand of Attwood's, but was dismissed some months ago because of alleged improper conduct.

Why are the Local Prices for Power so Very High

Correspondent Claims That Orillia After Bringing Power Thirty Miles Sells Cheaper Than This City.

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Sir—I happened to notice an advertisement in a paper of recent date, inserted by the Secretary of the Orillia Board of Trade, in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway having awarded the first contract for its road from Victoria Harbor to Peterborough. The advertisement in question stated that the line would pass through Orillia. The municipality of Orillia is now offering free factory sites to new industries, on property bounded on one side by the G. T. R. and on the other by the C. P. R. line.

Now, sir, this in itself is a great inducement to prospective locators of new industries and is enough to seriously menace the chances of this city for getting new factories, but, what is far more ominous as regards the chances of Peterborough for such industries, Orillia is offering electric power at $16 per annum for a 24 hour service. Again, Orillia is offering electric light on the basis of $1 per annum for each 16 candle-power lamp.

Here is some pretty tough food for mental digestion. Compare the prices that the citizens and factory owners of Peterborough are assessed. Here in Peterborough, with practically unlimited water-power right at our doors, power costs $20 and upwards per horse-power, whilst Orillia brings its power from Ragged Rapids, a distance of some 40 miles, at about 25 per cent. cheaper than this city pays. The prices for electric lighting in Orillia and Peterborough when compared, and, under existing conditions as to distance and consequent expenses of manufacture, are ridiculously different. Why should this city, with power acquired right within the city limits, have to pay 25 per cent. more than Orillia citizens pay under a more costly system of obtaining it?

It seems to me that, everything considered and in the interests of Peterborough's future which is now largely dependent for its growth and progress, the question of power rates here should be brought to the attention of the power commissioners recently appointed by the government.

Yours truly,
"HYDRO-ELECTRIC."

National Debt of England Is Reduced

LONDON, April 19.—No budget statement of recent years has been awaited with so much interest as that of Chancellor of the Exchequer Asquith yesterday. The financial statement issued by the treasury in advance of the chancellor's speech informed the House that the exact realized surplus for 1906-07 was $26,955,000, which, in accordance with the law, would be devoted to the reduction of the public debt. Mr. Asquith estimated the expenditure for 1907-08 at $703,785,000.

The revenue on the existing basis of taxation was estimated to be $720,950,000.

The permanent reduction of the national debt for 1906-07 was announced to be $68,570,000.

The duty on tea was unchanged.

Mr. Asquith opened his speech with a brief review of the past year, pointing out that with the exception of the stock markets, which suffered from the money stringency, trade at home and abroad had been remarkably flourishing. The treasury receipts were over $10,000,000 in excess of the estimates, unanticipated death duties accounting for $6,000,000 of this sum, while the balance was made up of increased receipts from the coal duty and the mint. The latter was due to the increase demand for coinage on account of the prosperous state of trade and the large amount of silver, aggregating $2,500,000.

Put Baby in Hot Oven

MONTREAL, April 19.—Geo. Blanchette, was arrested early yesterday on the heretofore unheard charge of placing his five months' old child in a basket and then putting it in a hot stove oven. It is also alleged that Blanchette plied the infant with whiskey until it had convulsions. The case has been taken up by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Women and Children on the complaint of the prisoner's mother-in-law. She says this man's wife is afraid to make a complaint against Blanchette. The poor infant which has been so abused only weighs five pounds.

Formula of the Ash Fuel Is Discovered

Wonderful Secret of Altoona Man Has Come to Light.

ALTOONA, Pa., April 19.—The remarkable ashes-burning secret discovered by John Ellmore, an Altoona cobbler, which has excited attention almost the world over, is out. Almost every householder in Altoona is now converting his ashes into fuel, with great saving in coal bills.

Several well-known chemists, immediately it was announced that Ellmore had solved the problem of obtaining heat from ashes, set to work to try and discover the formula. They were successful, and here it is; Moisten with either salt water or salt water in which oxalic acid has been dissolved, a mixture containing one part coal and three parts ashes and a better fuel than pure coal is obtained. The ashes of anthracite coal burn as readily as do those of bituminous coal. This mixture will, upon being placed upon a burning fire, fuse into a coke-like mass and deposit but little residue. The salt water may be obtained by the dissolution of common salt in water.

The ash-burning compound is now being used in many large industrial and mercantile places here and it is claimed for it that it manufactured the fuel item more than half. It thus eliminated almost entirely the question of disposing of ashes, which has been considerable where great quantities of coal are consumed.

The discovery has resulted in a number of companies and is featuring the work of paving contractors, who have utilized ashes as a foundation for sidewalks. Heretofore it was possible to secure all the ashes required for this purpose without cost, but contractors are now complaining that it is impossible to get them.

Ellmore, who discovered the secret and focused attention upon the possibilities that furked in ashes, asserts that his patent will protect his secret. He claims to have received an offer from the British government if he can demonstrate the practicability of his compound.

While it is everywhere conceded that Ellmore has conferred a great boon upon humanity, it is feared that he will not derive any tangible benefits from his discovery, in view of the fact that thousands of others have secured the same results, following this lead.

ST. THOMAS, April 19.—John Wilson, farmer, of Aylmer, is suing Mrs. Elizabeth Mills of the same place for $5,000 damages for injured character and reputation, alleging that defendant in conversation with Addie Gilkes and Miss Rutherford, said Wilson "took a hog in off the road, killed it, and ate it, and that other people eat of their property."

PERKINS WAS TAKEN ILL VERY SUDDENLY

Witnesses Say that He Had Always Been in Good Health---Judge Rebukes Talkative Women in the Court Room.

CAYUGA, April 19. — Numerous witnesses were examined yesterday in the Caufield poisoning case, much of the evidence going to show that Henry Perkins was habitually in good health, and complained of illness only a short time before his death. Further light was thrown on matters connected with Perkin's trunk at the Weiland boarding house.

During the night one of the jurors took sick at the sleeping apartments at the court house, and Deputy Sheriff Sheppard sent out for some medicine for him, but he soon recovered.

Mr. Justice Mabee had to wait some minutes for the crown prosecutor and some other officials. He took occasion to lecture the spectators on the noise made, and said that better order must be kept. He noticed that females were the worst offenders," he said, "and they must understand that this is no sewing circle." If the audible conversations were not stopped the crowd order the court room cleared. Later the judge ordered that the doors be bolted, and a large crowd was unable to gain admittance.

PERKINS' HEALTH.

Miss Nellie Maidy was the first witness. She is a milliner in Caufield, and she testified that Mrs. Perkins told her in conversation that "Henry was poorly, and it was only a matter of a few months." Mrs. Perkins said he had piles. This was last fall.

Outhouse Topp said he saw Perkins on Saturday night, and he appeared well. Christmas morning he heard of Perkins' illness, and went to see him. Perkins had convulsions or jerking spells, and his eyes had a glassy appearance. The patient was emitting a froth from his mouth, and toward the end did not speak. Under cross-examination Topp said he had the opinion that Perkins had good health, no matter how many doctors he had examined.

Jacob Chine said he was called by Thomas McDonald to go into Perkins' house on Christmas morning. Perkins was in a fit, and witness held his hands for some time. To Mr. Johnston witness said Perkins did not perspire and didn't ask for water.

Louis Mehlenbacher said Perkins worked for him early in 1906. He was apparently in good health. He was present at Perkins' death bed. Perkins asked for water shortly before he died. Perkins had convulsions and had to be held. Perkins asked his wife to send a telegram to William Spencer, of Welland.

DEFENCE WILL CALL EDGAR.

Dr. J. W. Edgar, the poison expert from Hamilton, who was deposed from the crown's case, left our home yesterday morning. He has been subpoenaed by the defence, and will return here tomorrow. It is stated that the crown prosecutor said that his evidence would not help the crown's case.

More, the Detroit drug clerk, has not yet turned up, and it is not thought he will answer the subpoena to come and tell of the sale of strychnine to "Mrs. Davis, of Canada," last November. He is employed in the Brown Pharmacy Company, Woodward avenue.

UNABLE TO SWALLOW.

On cross-examination Mehlenbacher said that Perkins did not drink the water. He seemed to be unable to swallow it. W. H. Thompson, station agent, at Caufield, was present about half an hour before death occurred. Perkins threw his chin back and raised his back up from the bed and had great trouble in breathing. Witness felt Perkins' pulse and it was about 50. He left before the end came.

NO EVIDENCE OF GRIEF.

He said Mrs. Perkins gave no evidence of grief at Perkins' dying condition, but some time after the death she told him, "I lost a good husband."

She may not show grief as most people.

This brought tears to the prisoner's eyes, for the first time in the progress of the case.

Thompson was given a very rigid cross-examination in regard to his deposition at the preliminary hearing.

He denied having said that Mrs. Perkins was "terribly broken down," after the death.

Perkins told him that he quit his farm because work did not agree with him.

Henry Wilkinson was at the deathbed, and he described the twitching movements of the deceased.

Witness left the room before Perkins died, as he could not stand to see Perkins suffer so much.

To Murder Chiefs of the Opposition

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 19.—A Central American citizen who arrived here yesterday from Mexico, states that the young Guatemalan who recently assassinated ex-President Manuel Barilla, of Guatemala, in Mexico, confessed to Col. Felix Diaz, inspector-general of the Mexican police, that he had been hired to kill Barilla, and that the assassination was only one of several that had been decided on. Two other victims selected were Gen. Francisco Alva, Guatemalan Minister to Mexico, and Salvador Toledo, recently in New Orleans, and who left here to meet Zelaya in Nicaragua, with the purpose of starting a revolution in Guatemala.

The assassin said that he was employed for the assassination of Barilla by friends of the present Cabrera administration, as in this way, by the removal of troublesome leaders of the opposition and would-be revolutionists, the country would be saved the horrors of a revolution and civil war.

No Holiday on May Day in Germany

BERLIN, April 19.—The Executive Committee of the Socialist party has ordered Socialist workmen not to stop work on May Day as they have hitherto done. In stating the reasons for this change of policy the committee says the highly electrical state of the political atmosphere in Europe and the fears that the contending views of the powers respecting the limitation of armaments may accelerate a catastrophe makes it the duty of workers in all countries to show that they wish political peace preserved by all nations.

Furthermore, as employers adhere to their determination to punish the breach of contract involved in taking a holiday on May Day by a ten days' lockout, workers should not incur the loss of wages at a time when heavy financial sacrifices are necessary to enable them to help many thousands of their co-workers in numerous trades in Germany, now unemployed through "the violent measures of the employing class," who have locked out those seeking better terms of employment.

The order of the executive committee has been received with general satisfaction by the workers.

NEW YORK, April 19.—It became known yesterday that Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, one of the alienists who testified for the defence in the recent trial of Harry K. Thaw, spent two hours with Thaw Wednesday night. A. R. Peabody, of Thaw's counsel, was present, but neither he nor Dr. Jelliffe would say anything yesterday.

Thaw had remained in bed yesterday morning until nine o'clock, and only arose to see his counsel, when Warden Flynn suggested to him that if he were ill he might go to the hospital ward.

It was said at the prison that Mr. Peabody had summoned Dr. Jelliffe to attend Thaw, because Dr. McGuire, the regular Tombs physician, is ill.

Many Insurance Suits

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—More than 200 suits against insurance companies for the payment of policies held during the great fire a year ago, were filed yesterday at the county clerk's office, bringing the total well over 100. When the office closed there was a long line of attorneys, clerks and messengers waiting, and it took three clerks nearly an hour to dispose of the overflow. It was practically the last day of the filing of such cases, although in some cases the year allowed did not expire until today.

Just as strength is the natural outcome of pure blood, so is debility and sickness the result of impure blood.

To know how quickly, how surely Ferrozone cures, to see how it rebuilds and restores, you have only to read the following letters—read them carefully—see if the symptoms resemble yours.

Miss Evelyn M. Gaetz, of Kingston, writes: "I have had an attack of blood disorder which broke out in horrid looking pimples. They were ugly, red, disfiguring blotches that ruined the appearance of my face. I tried all sorts of medicine, but the pimples didn't leave. I was recommended Ferrozone and gave it a trial. I noticed an improvement after the second box, and kept up the treatment which finally cleared my skin. As the result of Ferrozone I have a clear healthy complexion and can recommend it to all other young women similarly affected."

Another young lady well known in society circles of Springfield, who derived exceptional benefit from Ferrozone, says: "I felt it my duty to make known the value of Ferrozone. My trouble was poor, weak blood, and as a consequence my lips were pallid, and my cheeks had no color. I wasn't at all strong, and required a bracing tonic. Ferrozone soon brought color to my cheeks, improved my appetite and made me stronger than I have been in years. I favor Ferrozone because it is so simple to take and works so quickly."

No blood remedy exists that has the power to cure, to heal, to restore like Ferrozone; try it, 50c per box at any drugstore.

WORLD WILL WAG ON

Dread of the supernatural is the universal fear. Classed as supernatural are many phenomena of great and small degree for which men have a vague but distinctly tangible horror. Civilization has done much for the human race, but it has not eliminated superstition or credulity. We have the recent ridiculous panics in several quarters caused by the report that a comet was headed for the earth and that when this burning messenger of destruction would hit this poor old globe every living thing and every monument of man would disappear, in a flash, into chaotic gases.

During the past few years there have been increasing evidences of unsasiness within the earth that were ominous warnings of more serious disturbances. Volcanoes that have been considered almost extinct have burst forth in violent eruption. These funnels of fire, lava and vapor have appeared in widely remote points upon the earth's surface and they have created havoc that has not been known from similar causes within the memory of living men. Earthquakes have shook down buildings, destroyed lives and affrighted thousands. Tidal waves in many seas have injured the traffic of the world and laid waste magnificent harbors. Following these undersea convulsions the peaks of mighty mountains have arisen to form islands where islands were never known before. In all things nature appears to be on a jamboree that has struck terror everywhere.

But why should there be so much alarm? We know that for 20,000 years, at least, our earth has spun along on its merry sidereal race track without having been singed by a passing comet. We are assured by recorded word that for many thousands of years a whole people has not been wiped out by a disturbance of seismic origin. Neither volcanoes in eruption nor earthquakes are novelties in the history of man and tidal waves harassed Aeneas and his brave comrades among the gleaming islands of the Ionian sea some 3,000 years ago.

It is the sheerest folly to assume that the earth is about to explode, or that universal destruction of any sort is in contemplation by Providence. What if a great flame should sweep over the earth and kill all living things? That would not be any worse finish than being run over by a train, struck by lightning, killed by a falling brick or crushed in a tornado. And to the humbler, but none the less fatal accidents, all men are liable. Worry and fear will not avert the destined manifestations of nature be they the crashings of pendant worlds or ptomaine poisoning. So let human beings live on in supreme confidence that all will be well unto the end of the uttermost reaches of time.

Paid $12,000 Duty on Marconi Apparatus

Sydney, N.S., April 18.—The Marconi Wireless Company have just completed their installation int, he station at Glace Bay of a set of instruments and other apparatus covering recent inventions and improvements on which they paid $12,000 in duty alone. About $100 duty was paid on three common working ordinary sized screws. They were for delicate parts of the machinery, and required great skill in the manufacture.

The company have had 150 men employed in making changes in their plant both inside and out for the past several months. They have also had a number of expert operators at the station, and a series of tests and experiments are being made with trans-Atlantic distances. The station is now considered the most highly equipped of the entire Marconi system. The success of the tests made are not known.

ROBBED CHILD'S BANK

New York, April 18.—Clifford M. Smith, a 22-year-old youth, who was detected in the act of extracting pennies from a child's bank in a house which he had entered by force in the night, was sentenced yesterday to serve 34 years and four months in Sing Sing Prison. Thirty years of the term was imposed on the burglary charge and the four years and four months for having assaulted Mr. and Mrs. John Oestreicher with a loaded screw driver when they interrupted him.

"You and your kind are a menace to society," said Judge Rosalsky in imposing sentence. "Safety of one's home is one of the essentials of life. I would be derelict in my duty if the sentence imposed upon you were not made extremely severe."

The Wonderful Gold State of Nevada

Good Opportunity to Get a Promising Stock Cheap.

The Denver Bullfrog Co-operative Mining Co., incorporated, which originated with the working men of Denver, Col., who in 1905 sent two mine experts into the celebrated Bullfrog District of Nevada and thus through their efforts and experience secured forty acres of mineral land in the heart of the richest gold-bearing territory on earth. This property, located on a spur of the Bare Mountains, five miles east of the town of Beatty, has producing mines on all sides. These latter include the Montgomery-Shoshone, whose stock is now quoted at $14.50 per share, a rise of $12.50 per share since 1905; the Sunset mine and the Transvaal and Gold Gulch properties. The property has been surveyed and is now the property of the company and free from debt. As the company has little capital to work the property, being composed of working men, they have decided, as every detail of the mine and its operation is run on the most economical basis, to offer stock for a limited time only at Five Cents per share to raise money for development.

The Union Department Stores Company

1696-1712 West 25th Street, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Invites the tradesman, mechanic, merchant, professional, craftsman and farmer to become shareholders and co-operating profit sharers in the very profitable and up-to-date business of conducting

A Great Co-Operative Department Store and Mail Order Institution

In the City of Cleveland

An Ohio Corporation of $500,000. - Shares $10 Each

BY THE PEOPLE — FOR THE PEOPLE

This Institution saves for the consumer what otherwise becomes the profit of the individual.

$10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER. $10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER.

Our Preferred Stock Bears

7 per cent. guaranteed cumulative dividends and shares in addition to the 7 per cent. in the whole profits of the institution.

Unlimited Dividends

Can be earned in department store investments. A department store near here paid over 50 per cent. in dividends to its investors last year.

Department Store Investments are Good

Because department store merchandising is a very conservative and profitable business.

Our Department Store Investment is the Best

Because our thousands of shareholders will do as owners do and have always done: "talk the business," "boom the business," "advertise the business," and influence their friends and relatives to trade at their own store. This will place our business on a self productive basis immediately. They certainly will do this because they have always done so under the same indentical conditions.

A 5% Discount from Regular Prices will be Allowed Shareholders

in this institution being in itself a very attractive interest to investors in this Company.

A Great Mail Order Department

Will be our accommodation for out of town shareholders and patrons.

Our Business Location is Ideal

For local business, located in the heart of the West Side business center it is immediately surrounded by a West Side purchasing clientage of 200,000 people and commands the approach of as many more East Side residents and the vast urban population that comes cityward for their supplies.

So in this enterprise we are combining the features that have made

John Wanamaker, Philadelphia and New York City
Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, Ill.,
Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, Ill., and
Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago, Ill.,

each in themselves tremendously successful, having each made millions of dollars for their stockholders.

Limitation of Subscription

There will be no individual control in this Company. We prefer to sell no more than 100 shares to any individual desiring an investment with us, as we desire to obtain the widest possible distribution of our shares.

How the Shareholder is Safeguarded in Every Way

When you secure a certificate of stock you own a valuable piece of property, representing as it does an investment that will secure for you a constant income, aside from the many other advantages to be enjoyed as a shareholder. Note the binding obligations of the Company to those that invest.

Your stock if preferred is guaranteed seven per cent.

Your shares are full paid and non-assessable.

Your dividends are cumulative and participating.

Every dollar received by the Company for stock is going right into the business for active service. You have vote and voice in the management of the business. When we say your stock is preferred, we mean that it is guaranteed seven per cent. per annum, before the common stock can be paid one penny. The preferred stock has absolutely the first claim—in effect a first mortgage on all assets of the Company—the property—the property rights, trade marks, trade rights, etc., and on the net profits of the business.

The following Officers and Directors of this Company, constituted wholly of Cleveland and Ohio men of undoubted integrity and business qualifications, will best bespeak our policy and our substantiability:

OFFICERS:

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 25 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5300 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assayays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

him open his eyes, uncomprehending at first, and then filled with a sudden life.

"Ah!" he said, "you—you at last!"

He took her hand in both of his. He was weakened by illness and a great fatigue. Perhaps he was off his guard or only half awake.

"I never should have got better if you had not come," he said. Then suddenly he seemed to recall himself, and rose with an effort from his recumbent position.

"I do not know," he said with a return of his old half humorous manner, "whether to thank you first for your hospitality or to beg your pardon for making such unscrupulous use of it."

"Sit down," she said quietly. "You are not strong enough to stand about."

He obeyed her with a little laugh.

"You do not know," he said, "how pleasant it is to see you, fresh and English looking. It is like a tonic. Where is Maurice?"

"He will be here soon," she replied. "He is attending to the landing of the stores. We will soon make you strong and well, for we have come laden with cases of delicacies for your special delectation. Your father chose them himself."

"We did not expect you for another ten days," said Meredith after a little pause, as if anxious to change the subject. "Marie said that your brother's leave was not up until the week after next."

"We do not always take our full term," said she vaguely.

And he never saw it.

"As a matter of fact," she said lightly, "I suppose that you loathe all food?"

"Loathe it," he replied. He was still looking at her, as if in enjoyment of the Englishness and freshness of which he had spoken. "Simply loathe it. All Joseph's tact and patience are required to make me eat even eleven meals in the day. He would like thirteen."

At this moment Maurice came in—Maurice—hearty, eager, full of life. He blustered in, kicking the furniture, throwing his own vitality into the atmosphere. Jocelyn knew that he liked Jack Meredith, and she knew more. She knew, namely, that Maurice Gordon was a different man when Jack Meredith was in Loango. From Meredith's presence he seemed to gather a sense of security and comfort even as she did—a sense which in herself she understood (for women analyze love), but which in her brother puzzled her.

"Well, old chap," said Maurice, "glad to see you. I am glad to see you. Thank heaven you were bowled over by that confounded malaria, for otherwise we should have missed you."

"That is one way of looking at it," answered Meredith. But he did not go so far as to say that it was a way which had not previously suggested itself to him.

"Of course it is. The best way, I take it. Well, how do you feel?"

"Oh, much better, thanks. I have got on splendidly the last week, and better still the last five minutes! The worst of it is that I shall be getting well too soon and shall have to be off."

"Home?" inquired Maurice significantly.

Jocelyn moved uneasily.

"Yes, home."

"We don't often hear people say that they are sorry to leave Loango," said Maurice.

"I will oblige you whenever you are taken with the desire," answered Jack lightly. "Loango has been a very good friend to me. But I am afraid there is no choice. The doctor speaks very plain words about it. Besides, I am bound to go home."

"To sell the simiacine?" inquired Maurice.

"Yes."

"Have you the second crop with you?"

"Yes."

"And the trees have improved under cultivation?"

"Yes," answered Jack rather wonderingly. "You seem to know a lot about it."

"Of course I do," replied Maurice boisterously.

"From Durnovo?"

"Yes; he even offered to take me into partnership."

Jack turned on him in a flash.

"Did he indeed? On what conditions?"

And then, when it was too late, Maurice saw his mistake. It was not the first time that the exuberance of his nature had got him into a difficulty.

"Oh, I don't know," he replied vaguely. "It's a long story. I'll tell you about it some day."

Jack would have left it there for the moment. Maurice Gordon had made his meaning quite clear by glancing significantly toward his sister. Her presence he intimated debarred further explanation.

But Jocelyn would not have it thus. She shrewdly suspected the nature of the bargain proposed by Durnovo, and a sudden desire possessed her to have it all out.

"If you mean," she said, "that you cannot tell Mr. Meredith because I am here, you need not hesitate on that account."

Maurice laughed awkwardly and muttered something about matters of business. He was not good at this sort of thing. Besides, there was the initial handicapping knowledge that Jocelyn was so much cleverer than himself.

"Whether it is a matter of business or not," she cried, with glittering eyes, "I want you to tell Mr. Meredith now. He has a right to know. Tell him upon what condition Mr. Durnovo proposed to admit you into the simiacine."

Maurice still hesitated, bewildered, at a loss, such as men are when a seemingly secure secret is suddenly discovered to the world. He would still have tried to fend it off, but Jack Meredith with his keener perception saw that

"Did he indeed? On what conditions?"

Jocelyn was determined; that further delay would only make the matter worse.

"If your sister wants it," he said, "you had better tell me. I am not the sort of man to act rashly on the impulse of the moment."

Still Maurice tried to find some means of evasion.

"Then," cried Jocelyn, with flaming cheeks, "I will tell you. You were to be admitted into the simiacine scheme by Mr. Durnovo if you could persuade or force me to marry him."

None of them had foreseen this. It had come about so strangely, and yet so easily, in the midst of their first greetings.

"Yes," admitted Maurice, "that was it."

"And what answer did you give?" asked Jocelyn.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

KENNEDY COBALT, Ltd.

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 23. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 30 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 20 acres of J. B. 23 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 20 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 5 inch nicolite, 12 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1283-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

New Liskeard, 17th November, 1906.

JACOB M. EGGERT, M.E.

We offer a few more shares at Fifty Cents (50c); par value One Dollar ($1.00). The property is being developed as fast as possible, and we cannot promise that stock will be sold at less than par for very long. Don't wait until it is $3.00 to invest, giving others big profits for what you should have bought sooner. We want you to get in on the ground floor and share in the big profits. Heaviness, Lassitude, Drowsy and Dull

Do You Feel That Way?

How provoking these symptoms are! You sleep well, but when you awaken there is none of the exhilaration that sleep and rest should confer.

Instead of being alert, having quickness of apprehension, there is languor, dullness, a disinclination to do things.

Three causes for this feeling.

Lazy liver, lazy kidneys, and a mighty lazy stomach which does its work very poorly and compels the other organs to do things they are unequal to for any length of time.

Note the consequences—blood is filled with wastes—poisons weigh down the nervous system—rebuilding processes are absolutely stopped.

You'll note an instant change when you take Ferrozone.

Appetite improves, digestion becomes good as ever—skin grows ruddy and clear, all sense of langour, unsteadiness and depression fades away and finally disappears.

Ferrozone clarifies the brain; supplies tone and vigor, imparts clearness and strength. You feel like a new person, full of life, full of ambition, ready to do things—and able to do them also.

Think it over. Ferrozone is a tonic that uplifts, upbuilds, that nourishes and restores the sick by supplying the elements their weakened system need.

It can't help but do you good. For men, women and children, in fact anyone seeking strength and health, Ferrozone is invaluable; try it, sold by all druggists in 50c. boxes.

Curious Explosion in Kitchen Stove

The Port Hope Guide says;

A young lady who is employed by Mr. and Mrs. Orun Dafoe, township of Hope, met with a singular, yet very serious accident yesterday. She was attending to her household duties as usual, and had just placed some old papers in the fire when, in an instant, a terrible explosion followed. The unfortunate lady was in the act of placing the cover on the stove, which the explosion took place, and her face and head were enveloped in the flames. Her face was badly burned, and the sight of both eyes injured, one probably permanently. The windows in the room were all smashed, and the sash badly shattered.

The cause of the explosion is a deep mystery. There was no gun powder in the house, or, in fact, to Mr. Dafoe's knowledge, no explosive of any description.

Dr. Clementsha in attendance, and under his care the lady is progressing very favorably.

Thief Mutilates the Family Bible

Yesterday a well known local eccentric known as "Gusty" Dundas, who has recently been a guest at Castle Nesbitt for vagrancy, called on County Magistrate Edmison, and told a tale of woe about thefts committed from his house amounting to $50.

"Gusty" intends leaving his home in North Monaghan next week for either Kansas or the Canadian West. He claimed that a resident of the east ward, to whom he sold some apples and a buggy, broke into his house last fall and confiscated almost everything in sight.

His particular grievance, however, is the alleged mutilation of his old family Bible given him by "Old Minister" Taylor," to his Dundas' father, and which contained the family record of births, deaths, etc. This he claims was taken from a locked drawer and mutilated. Gusty wants "to get the law" on the perpetrator of these crimes before he goes away.

Mrs. J. Londerville Has Passed Away

Yesterday at Nicholls' Hospital, Florine L. Puffer, wife of Mr. John Londerville, 56 Sophia street, passed away, after an operation made a few days ago. The deceased was formerly a resident of Hastings, but has lived in Peterborough for the past five years. She was a member of St. Luke's church. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon in Hastings, the remains being taken there on the 8.40 train this morning from 518 Water street.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. "There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 31 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound.

If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

LONGBOAT WINS THE BOSTON MARATHON

Famous Canadian Runner Easily Defeats the Best Athletes of the United States---Beat the Record by Five Minutes.

BOSTON, April 20.—Thomas Longboat, the great Canadian Indian runner from Toronto, Canada, won the Marathon yesterday afternoon, leading all his competitors by a long distance. Longboat ran a game race and showed splendid generalship throughout.

The Indian was installed favorite some days ago, and though he claimed to be ill yesterday, the public did not take his statement seriously, and continued to wager that he would win, even going so far as to buckbim to break the record held by Jack Caffrey, of Hamilton, and established in 1901, when the Hamilton man clipped ten minutes off the previous mark.

He got off well and for the entire distance was well in hand, always looking as if he could win as he pleased.

About ten miles out he started his spurt and after that was never headed, coming in like a railroad train, leaving his competitors straggling in the rear.

Within three miles of the finish he was five minutes in the lead, and then he seemed to slow down, at the request of his friends.

He was still going at a tremendous pace, however, and finished two minutes in front of all competitors covering the distance in the remarkable time of 2 hours, 24 minutes, 20 3-5 seconds.

The second man was Fowler, of Cambridge.

The rest of the runners were strung along the road for miles and came straggling many minutes behind the wonderful Indian and the Cambridge man.

Charles, E. Peach, another Toronto man, finished ninth.

THE NEW FUEL IS TRIED

THE SNOWDEN HOUSE HAS BURNED ASHES.

It Has Been Ascertained that They Will Burn as Well as Coal.

Our readers have in all likelihood read, in many papers, recently of the strange discovery made by an American, that ashes from a furnace or stove, will, if properly treated burn again as well, if not better than the original coal.

A Times representative yesterday happening in to the Snowden House, in semi-facetious manner, asked mine host, W. Snowden, whether he had tried this new discovery. Mr. Snowden enthusiastically replied, "Say, I wish I could get that man (the discoverer of this means of using furnace or stove refuse for fuel) into my house and nothing would be too good for him. He could have whatever he wanted and nothing to pay. Just come down to the cellar and see how I am saving fuel."

The Times man accompanied mine host to the lower regions of the hotel, where, instead of the proverbial inhabitants of the "Lower regions," viz., little demonettes with thumb-screws and tridents, the newspaper man found a modern furnace, even at this time of year, going full pelt, and all drafts cut off, but the furnace still almost red hot.

Now Mr. Snowden, having read and pondered over this proposed system of burning ashes, mixed with certain proportion of oxalic acid, chloride of sodium (common salt) and H.20. (plain water), decided to put this invention to practical test. The oxalic acid was eliminated altogether; but with a good stiff brine of water and salt (by the barrel) Mr. Snowden converted a pile of discarded ashes into a semi-solid mass like mortar. Into the ash mixture he intermixed about one-third of good stove coal. The result of this mixture was that it kept a better, brighter, more enduring and hotter fire than could have been made with three times the same amount of regular hard coal, worth in other towns from $5 to $6.50 per ton, but owing to an alleged coal combine in Peterborough, $7.30 in this city. Mr. Snowden is very enthusiastic over this system of burning theretofore despised and thrown out ashes, by adding a few cents worth of salt, worth $2 per barrel, and water, and getting a better, let alone cheaper, heat than with the combine's $7.30 per ton.

It is now up to our citizens at large to do a little experimenting on their own hook, and if similar success rewards their efforts, the local combine will have to disband and the citizens of Peterborough will get their coal at the same prices as charged in towns where freight from the mines is as expensive as that paid by the local dealers.

It might be added that The Times man proved conclusively by personal observation that the ashes, prepared as above described, did actually give the results claimed, and that the test made covered over 12 hours' experience, with most encouraging results.

New Star in Local Auctioneers' World

Mr. J. H. Gardiner Takes Out a City License.

Mr. J. H. Gardiner, of this city, one of the most successful auctioneers of the Province of Ontario, and who is generally known as the "Silver tongued speaker," has made a new departure in his modus operandi. As is generally known in this and surrounding counties, Mr. Gardiner has, heretofore confined his business to country business. Mr. Gardiner is known as a "producer of the goods" as regards high prices, in this county, Northumberland, Durham, Victoria, Hastings and other nearby counties for several years past. Sale of the farm and farm stock, implement, machinery, etc., sales conducted by Mr. Gardiner have resulted in prices that reflect great credit upon this "silver-tongued" auctioneer. Within the past few months Mr. Gardiner has sold a vast number of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and farm implements as well as the farms themselves and prices that would make the average auctioneer take off his hat and bowing low, say, "Well, Mr. Gardiner, you are the limit in charming the dollars out of your customers' pockets, whilst you have never been known to misrepresent things.

Dr. Gardiner, who has heretofore confined his business to the country and various counties' business, has now entered the arena of city business. This gentleman has taken out the regular $100 per annum, city license, entitling him to sell goods by auction in the city as well as in the county. We venture to predict that Mr. Gardiner will not only get his share of the city's auctioneering, but put some of the older heads in the city auction business a-guessing.

A PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT

Members of Y.W.C.A. Give Enjoyable Entertainment.

Last night a most interesting entertainment was held in the Y.W.C.A., under auspices of the Household Science Committee of that institution. The proceeds will be devoted towards purchasing furnishings for the dining room of that department.

The gymnasium room was well filled by a large and enthusiastic audience, who thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the evening. The chief feature of the entertainment was the presentation of a well-staged farce, played in two acts, entitled "Sunbonnets," in which seven young ladies took part, under the direction of Miss Bawden, head of the Household Science class. The old-fashioned costumes were admirably adapted to the requirements of the various characters in the play.

The scene of the farce was laid in a living room at the "Butterfields," for both acts. The whole play, which involved much clever dialogue and other parts, was leading up to the final consummation whereby two hitherto warring societies are reconciled.

The Mock Tea in the second act was particularly worthy of mention.

Between the acts Miss Reesor sang a solo, with violin obligato, Miss Gumpright gave a piano solo and Miss Kathleen Wallis a violin solo, all of which added much to the pleasure of those present.

The entertainment was brought to a close by the singing of "God Save the King."

Does Coffee disagree with you? Probably it does? Then try Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. "Health Coffee" is a clever combination of parched cereals and nuts. Not a grain of real Coffee, remember, in Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, yet its flavor and taste matches closely old Java and Mocha Coffee. If your stomach, heart, or kidneys can't stand Coffee drinking, try Health Coffee. It is wholesome, nourishing, and satisfying. It is nice even for the youngest child. Sold by J. D. Tully.

The Stabbed Man is Known in Lindsay

Concerning the man stabbed by "Cameron," now in jail, Levi Thorndyke, the Lindsay Post says:

The victim, Levi Thorndyke, was a resident of Lindsay for a couple of months, during which time he was employed as hostler and general helper at the King Edward Hotel, owned by Mr. Ashmore. His home is near Sutherford. He first came to town with the trotters on the Canadian circuit of ice races, and remained behind when the horses left. About February 7th he left for Peterborough, where he was engaged as a bartender at the Royal Hotel until a couple of weeks ago. About a week ago he came to town on a visit, and returned to Peterborough on Tuesday night.

The victim was a familiar attendant at horse races of any importance in Ontario, and was known as "Robin" Thorndyke. His injuries are reported to be serious, the point of the weapon having penetrated nearly to the brain, and he was in a critical condition.

The Jamestown Exposition

The Jamestown Exposition, which opens on April 26th, 1907, promises to be one of the most interesting of the larger expositions which have been held in later years. Its location at Sewall's Point, on the historic Hampton Roads, some nine miles from the city of Norfolk, Virginia, and directly opposite Old Point Comfort, in itself will appeal to many, and the magnificent array of warships that will congregate here from all the countries of the world will attract a tremendous number of people from all parts of the American this Exposition from Canada, in-Canadians who have now had the privilege of visiting the South this event will be the best opportunity that will present itself, and the low transportation rates that are offered will lend an additional attraction.

The only Canadian exhibit at this great Fair will be that of the Grand Trunk Railway System, who have erected a building of their own, in which the resources and attractive features of Canada will be shown, and at which building Canadians will be welcome, and where all information may be obtained. Another feature that is offered is the many different routes that can be taken to this Exposition from aCnada, including rail, river and ocean journeys. The true hospitality of the Southern people, the historicity that surrounds the locality, and the many things to see and do, should be the means of inducing a large number to go from the north. Grand Trunk Agents will gladly give information as to rates and routes.

DUAL SYSTEMS ARE UNNESSARY

Peterboro's Experience Not at all Satisfactory.

MACHINE COMPANY'S RATES

Are Higher Elsewhere than in this City---One Good System is Sufficient.

It will be remembered that the Machine Telephone Company a year or two ago, obtained a franchise from this city, entitling them to erect and equip a telephone system in Peterborough, under certain conditions. It is not the intention of this article to criticise or comment upon whether the company has, or has not, fulfilled its obligations to the city: This is a matter too well known to both subscribers and the general public. Although the company obtained a renewal term for completing its contract, no charge, we believe, is made as yet for 'phones in this city.

One point for consideration by those (and we consider them a majority) who have had experience, in this city or elsewhere, or whose common-sense teaches them intuitively, concerning the intolerable nuisance and increased expense of a dual system of telephones, is the discrepancy in prices to be charged here, should the Machine service ever reach sufficient importance to take toll from their subscribers, and the prices as guaranteed to Brantford and Lindsay, where this company is attempting to place their plants.

When the Machine Company got their franchise from Peterborough it was on the understanding that their charges would be $20 for business places, $15 for residences, or a commutation price of $30 when a subscriber had two telephones, one at home and one in his place of business. In Brantford, where, we understand, this company has, within the past year, erected a few straggling poles (but little else) they propose to charge $25 for business places and $15 for residences, but no reduction for two 'phones by the same party. The company, although only progressed in its operations as far as the erection of a few poles in Brantford, has, we believe, already to ask for an extension of time for completion of its system. Should this company, as now seems likely, require as long, comparatively, in placing its system in shape to be able to charge for service there as it has in this city, both the Brantfordites and the shareholders will doubtless regret that any such thing as a dual telephone system should have ever received serious attention.

Again, in Lindsay, where, it is said, no practical active work has yet been accomplished, the prices quoted by this company, and settled by their franchise, are $25 for business places and $15 for residences, but no reduction for both.

Now, it is one of two things: either the local Machine Company made a mistake in quoting the prices for a presumably satisfactory system here, or the Brantfordites and those living in Lindsay would have to devote part of any possible profits towards making up the loss by cheaper 'phones here. It is almost an axiom that individuals or corporations seeking to foist an unnecessary and unwonted commodity upon the public will sooner or later have some deep thinking before the final settlement of such attempt is consummated.

NEW ORLEANS, April 20.—A long distance telephone message from Clinton, La., early this morning, said that a negro accused of attempting to assault a woman, had been lynched about eight miles from town.

I.O.F. New Quarters are Now Completed

Court Chemong, No. 530, Will Hereafter Meet in the S.O.E. Hall.

As has been noted recently in this journal, Court Chemong, No. 530, Independent Order of Foresters, have been steadily and rapidly increasing its membership. This Court has for a number of years met in the Canadian Order of Foresters' Hall, on George street, and have now completed arrangements whereby henceforth its members will meet in the fine Song of England Hall, Hunter street. All the paraphernalia of Court Chemong has now been completed, ad that their regular monthly meetings will hereafter be held in their new quarters.

In addition to the many new members added to this Court by the efforts of Bro. A. Bradshaw, D.S.C.R., this energetic member of the local order will soon have quite a number more initiated. Bro. F. C. Hooke, who has also gained several recruits to the order, has also been the means of getting more, who will be initiated at the next meeting, to be held on the evening of Thursday, April 25th, in the S. O. E. Hall.

If he can possibly complete arrangements and his many engagements will permit, Bro. G. N. Brown, D.H.C.R., who was in the city recently in the interests of the order, has signified his intention of being present. As this will be one of the most interesting meetings of Court Chemong held for many months, owing both to the newly acquired premises, the large number of new members to be initiated, and the almost assured presence of the D.H.C.R., a large attendance is assured for Thursday evening.

Quarter Century of Successful Banking

Splendid Record Made by the Western Bank of Canada.

Prominent among the many strong banking institutions of Canada stands the Western Bank, whose head office is situated in the nearby town of Oshawa. On Wednesday, April 10th, inst., the shareholders of this bank celebrated their quarter century of progressive and successful business, when Mr. John Cowan, the president occupied the chair at their annual meeting. A pleasing feature of this meeting was that the original directorate of the bank, who 25 years ago launched that institution on the then somewhat troubled waters of finance, viz.: Messrs. John and W. F. Cowan, Hamilton, Dr. McLaughlin, Allin, Patterson and Gibson, have not only guided the bank safely on its financial voyage, but are still on deck with the bank safely and firmly anchored in the harbor of success and public confidence. With these directors is now associated Mr. Robt. McLaughlin, whose advice and experience has materially assisted in bringing the bank to its present high position in the financial world.

During the past year the Western Bank cleared a net profit of $83,941.01, out of which semi-annual dividends at the rate of 7 per cent per annum have been paid, and the balance, $45,296.22, has been carried to profit and loss account. The deposits of the bank have increased $406,735, and the gross assets $408,961 over the preceding year. During the year several subsidiary branches have been opened, and the business in general has more than kept pace with the conservative and successful advance that has always characterized the history of the Western Bank. Mr. T. H. McMillan, the energetic manager of the bank, than whom their is not a better qualified bank officer in Canada has reason to be proud of the Western Bank and shareholders must congratulate themselves on their investment.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Happenings Around the Local Police Station.

Only three victims faced the magisterial music at yesterday's police court. A local man was charged with having been drunk and disorderly. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2. It seems that he had been fighting on the street. A nephew of the former pleaded guilty to the same charge. He was fined $2 to be paid in ten days. Another man who works for an Otonabee farmer, pleaded guilty to having been found drunk. He was also assessed $2 and given ten days to raise the amount.

Miss Ada Curtis is Now Mrs. Stenton

On Thursday evening the residence of Mr Mark Curtis, Douro, was a scene of beauty and mirth when his only daughter, Miss Ada, became the bride of Mr. John Stenton, of Bad Axe, Mich.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Davidson, in the presence of a large number of the friends and relatives of the contracting parties. In the tastefully decorated drawing room.

The bride entered the room leaning on the arm of her father, as Miss Maud Curtis, with good execution played Mendelssohn's wedding march. She was attired in cream San-toy trimmed with baby Irish lace. Miss Bertha Curtis acted as bridesmaid. The groom was supported by Mr. I. Tammet, of Otonabee.

A choice wedding dejeuner was served. A large number of beautiful presents were received by the bride. Among them were $50 in gold from Curtis Bros., silver tea knives and forks from Sunnyside branch of the Women's Auxiliary, a purse of gold from Mr. David Curtis and many others. The groom presented the bridesmaid with a pearl ring, and to the pianiste he gave a gold brooch.

THE LEGISLATURE'S SESSION CONCLUDED

Formal Prorogation Will Take Place This Afternoon at 2.30---End of a Very Busy Session.

TORONTO, April 19.—The prorogation of the Ontario Legislature will take place at 2.30 o'clock on Saturday.

Hon. J. P. Whitney, the prime minister made the announcement at two o'clock this morning toward the close of a sixteen hour sitting of the House, one of the longest on record. But the order paper was cleared and the members packed their parliamentary grips and are off home to their various constituencies.

The closing scenes were happy. The members rose en masse and sang the National Anthem. In moving the final adjournment the prime minister paid a graceful tribute to the Opposition leader and the pleasant personal relations which had existed among all the members during the entire session.

Prior to adjournment the members of the legislature almost unanimously placed themselves on record as the champion of provincial rights. There was one discordant note. On the motion to adjourn Mr. McDougal, Ottawa, filed his protest, but members on both sides of the House cried him down.

The resolution followed a brief statement by the prime minister who drew attention to a bill presented to the Senate by Hon. Mr. Kerr for the Port Arthur Power and Development Company. Senator Kerr, Mr. Whitney explained, was the gentleman who had carried Mr. Conmee's resignation round in his pocket while that gentleman sough Dominion membership with a view to retaining it (a)together if the effort failed. In this bill direct effort was made to escape Provincial jurisdiction and, as it was introduced subsequent to the passing of Senator Ross' resolution, Mr. Whitney believed that Hon. Colonel Matheson's application of the previous day — when he characterized the motion as a "fake"—was not at all inappropriate.

Relative to the Petewawa confiscation the prime minister and Hon. A. G. MacKay conferred on the wording of the resolution, the former accepting several suggestions from the Opposition lieutenant. The resolution as submitted to the House was to the effect that "this House learns with surprise and regret of the action of the Dominion authorities in taking over without the consent of the Province 56,000 acres of Ontario land, with the timbers with the avowed intention not to pay for the land or the timber, and this House approves of the course of the advisers of your honor in resenting this action and authorizes them to take all steps deemed necessary in maintaining the rights of the Province."

"We will stand behind this Government or any other Government along the lines of that resolution," declared Mr. Graham, amid applause.

"Carried," said the speaker.

Mr. McDougal rose to protest.

"The resolution has been declared carried," said the speaker.

On the motion to adjourn, however, the member for Ottawa got his chance. He was opposed to the motion, he said. It was "playing to the gods," playing to the press of Toronto, and Mr. Whitney was trying to make capital out of it.

Mr. McDougal was interrupted from different parts of the House, but continued warmly that he wouldn't place much reliance on Mr. Whitney's legal judgment in the matter.

"I am sorry the hon. gentleman sneers at me," said the prime minister, "but I allow for it, knowing the anxiety of his political friends at Ottawa."

Mr. McDougal persevered amid interruptions from both sides of the House.

"I vote against it in any event," he said.

"A glorious minority," said Mr. Downey, amid laughter.

Then Mr. Studholme assured the House that Mr. Whitney was a second Sir Oliver Mowat and good nature was restored.

Local Fast Mare Goes to Toronto

Mr. John Montgomery, the well-known trainer and driver left yesterday for Toronto, after purchasing that well known bay mare, May Belle from Peterborough's veterinary sporting expert, Dr Johnston, whose office and stables are located on Chambers street near Hunter street. We understand that the price paid for this mare was $300, and, judging by general opinion of local turf experts, cheap at that. This mare has not as yet got a "mark," i.e., her time on the track has not yet been recorded, so that her owner may legitimately place her in any class that suits the exigencies of the occasion. The mare however, has very indication of speedy travelling, and will doubtless make a good record on the track. May Belle is only five years old at most and will likely, within the next season or so, be a strong favorite with the bookies.

The Cunard Line to Hold Its Own

LIVERPOOL, April 20. —Presiding yesterday at the annual meeting of the Cunard Steamship Company, Chairman Watson said he had no positive announcement to make as to whether the company proposed to move from Liverpool to a channel port, regarding the reductions with competitors the chairman said they were much the same as last year. Although there were no binding agreements regarding rates, they remained practically unchanged.

Overtures had been made to the Cunard Line to ally itself with Continental competitors, but terms suggested were of such a nature that this could not be considered. The Cunard Line wished to live in peace with its competitors, but it must be peace based on such a share of business as the Cunard Line was entitled to. The state that the Cunard Company had sold its interests in the Hungarian-American trade was incorrect.

Haileybury Miner Blown to Pieces

HAILEYBURY, April 19.—Haileybury's business and bustle was arrested yesterday by the explosion of about twenty sticks of dynamite. A man by the name of Harry Bayne, of Wenh, England, was in the act of thawing the explosive out on a toaster on the cook stove when it exploded. He was horribly mangled. He lived about an hour, but never gained consciousness. Mrs. Prentice, who was housekeeper, was rendered unconscious, and it is feared received some internal injuries. The doctors entertain hopes of her recovery, however. The building belonged to Messrs. Beach and Williams, and is a total wreck; the loss is estimated at about two thousand dollars.

BERLIN, April 20.—Colonial Director Dernburg stated yesterday that a cable message had been received from the governor of the Bismarck Archipelago announcing that a disastrous typhoon swept over the Caroline Islands on Good Friday last, and that 230 of the 800 natives of the Duithi group were drowned. Cocoanut trees were destroyed, and famine threatened the surviving natives.

WORTHLESS LEGISLATION

The British Columbia Legislature seems to have acquired the habit of passing measures, says The London Advertiser, which it is a foregone conclusion will be disallowed by the Governor-General in Canada. Notwithstanding past experience the legislature is evidently determined to stick to its favorite form of amusement, its apparent object being to make a record in vetoed legislation.

At present there is a bill before the assembly aiming at the restriction of alien immigration. It provides that the immigration into British Columbia of any person who, when asked to do so by the officer appointed under the act, shall fail himself to write out and sign, in the English language, as an application to the provincial secretary for permission to enter, as well as read in English any text submitted to him by the aforesaid officer, shall be unlawful. A further provision is that any immigrant securing entry into the province in contravention of the provisions of the act, shall be refused a license to engage in any trade or calling that is subject to provincial legislative authority, and shall not be entitled to acquire and hold land, or to any of the rights or privileges of a free miner, or to a free miner's certificate or to exercise the franchise.

No one knows better than do the legislators of British Columbia that alien immigration is a matter solely under the control of the federal authority. Besides, the Anglo-Japanese treaty, to which the Parliament of Canada has given approval, furnishes a special reason for the Governor-General-in-Council refusing assent to such a measure as that in question. The treaty, besides being a reciprocal trade arrangement, provides that the subjects of each contracting country shall possess complete liberty to enter, travel, reside in and pursue their callings in each others' territories; so that, even should the measure not be disallowed, any aggrieved Japanese could appeal to the courts and be sustained.

MAY LEASE SPANISH ARSENAL

MADRID, April 19.—The Epoca says that an English engineer, a member of an English shipping firm, who visited the minister of marine, Capt. Fernandez Nino, recently, did so to discuss the leasing of the arsenal at Ferrol. He submitted plans and offered all possible guarantees. The minister maintained great reserve, and stated that he would consider the matter.

It was reported in Madrid last month that the Government had already decided to lease the arsenal and that several vessels on the new naval program would be built there. One of the conditions of the lease was said to be that some of the members of the board of directors should be Spaniards.

The arsenal at Ferrol is one of the principal in Spain and the harbor is one of the finest in Europe. It forms of defence, as it is approached by a long and narrow strait, along which forts could be erected. The arsenal and dockyard were founded in the latter part of the eighteen century by Charles III. They cover twenty-five acres and contain many magnificent docks and warehouses.

PE-RU-NA DR. HARTMAN'S FAMOUS PRESCRIPTION THE TALK OF THE CONTINENT.

READ AND BE CONVINCED.

Just A Few Of the Sincere Letters Written To Dr. Hartman By Honest People.

Owes Good Health to Pe-ru-na.

Miss L. Wall, 350 N. Dale street, St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"Last spring I had a very severe case of catarrh of the stomach and bowels. I was very much run down in strength and lost my appetite.

"I took three bottles of Peruna and found myself gaining very quickly in every way.

"I also had catarrh in my head, which has been entirely cured.

"I thank Peruna for the health I am enjoying."

The World's Greatest Medicine Factory.

The rapid growth of the Peruna Medicine Company is as phenomenal in the business world as the universal popularity of their famous remedy, Peruna. The plant covers a number of acres, and employs several hundred people. No other medicine firm in the world reaches anything like the volume of business done by Dr. Hartman's firm.

Although Peruna is a proprietary medicine, the details of its compounding are in strict accordance with pharmaceutical discoveries and nothing gives Dr. Hartman greater pleasure than to show his intimate professional friends through the laboratory where Peruna is made.

A Doctor's Prescription.

For years Dr. Hartman used Peruna in his private practice as a regular prescription. He had no thought of manufacturing it or advertising it as a proprietary medicine until there was a demand made upon him by his many friends, who clamored for the original prescription.

Forty Thousand Patients.

Dr. Hartman estimates that he must have prescribed Peruna for over forty thousand patients before it was advertised as a proprietary medicine.

Relieved in Four Weeks of Severe Cold on Lungs.

Miss Josie Schaetzel, Gen. Del., Appleton, Wis., writes:

"I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs in very short order and it was not long until it developed into a serious case of catarrh. Every morning I would raise a lot of phlegm, which was very disagreeable. My digestion was poor and my lungs sore.

"After a few doses of Peruna I began to mend, and felt that if I kept on taking it, it would not be long until I would be well. I was right, for in four weeks I was well again.

"I think Peruna is a grand medicine, and wish to add my testimony to the many others you have."

Catarrh is almost universal. Catarrh is difficult to cure. Many doctors do not care to treat catarrh at all.

Followed Doctor Hartman's Advice — A Grateful Letter.

Mrs. Anthony Rauch, 438 Johnston street, Bucyrus, Ohio, writes:

"I was suffering from obstinate constipation and torpid liver when I took your advice and purchased six bottles of Peruna and Manalin.

"When I had taken only one bottle I felt much better and since I have taken two more bottles I feel entirely well, but I will continue taking the medicine for a short time to make sure of my cure.

"I think Manalin is one of the finest remedies for constipation that I ever tried. I will never be without it. It has made me so strong. I can do a day's work and never tire.

"I am so glad I do not get those dizzy spells any more. I have't had one since I took your medicine.

"I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me. All sick people should give it a fair trial."

Pe-ru-na's Popularity.

Peruna is not like so many other remedies that pass away as soon as the first few bottles are used. The longer Peruna is used in any community, the more popular it becomes.

Finds Relief in Pe-ru-na After Suffering Twenty Years.

Mrs. M. S. Davis, 1505 Buena Vista street, Nashville, Tenn., writes:

"After having been a constant sufferer from catarrh for more than twenty years and after trying almost every remedy advertised, and having lost all hope, I very reluctantly began the use of Peruna about two years ago.

"Everybody says I look younger now than I did twenty years ago, and I actually feel younger and better, and weigh more.

"I am recommending it to my neighbors and all with whom I come in contact."

Pe-ru-na Removes the Cause of Catarrh.

Peruna has no bad effects upon the system and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years.

Pe-ru-na Actually Relieves.

The reason why Peruna has become a standard catarrh remedy the world over, is simply because it eliminates catarrh.

This explains why Peruna has become so popular. It relieves catarrh. This is an amply sufficient reason why it should become popular.

It therefore follows that when a remedy is devised that can be used in the home at a moderate cost, such a remedy should inevitably become popular.

Keeps Pe-ru-na in the House.

Mrs. Jessie Smith, 408 Buttles Ave., Columbus, Ohio, writes:

"I have used your Peruna for catarrh of the head and stomach, and have been greatly relieved from it.

"Therefore, I cannot praise Peruna too much and can recommend it to any one having the above disease, as there is nothing better.

"I always keep it in the house."

There are a great many catarrh cures in the world. The most of them are local applications. Few of them are to be used internally.

Unfortunately, a large number of these catarrh remedies, especially the ones prescribed by the doctors, contain narcotics of some sort. Cocaine, opium, and other narcotics are used.

These remedies give temporary relief. The patient thinks he is better right away.

In a few weeks, however, he discovers his mistake. Not only is his catarrh no better, but he has acquired the habit of using some narcotic.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind.

Peruna is perfectly harmless, if taken according to directions on the bottle. So used, it can be taken any length of time without acquiring a drug habit.

Kings Embrace on the Royal Yacht

GAETA, Italy, April 19.—The British Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, with King Edward and Queen Alexandra on board, arrived here at about 9.30 o'clock yesterday morning from Malta, escorted by the British armored cruisers Suffolk and Lancaster. King Edward was received by King Victor Emmanuel, who was on board the Italian Royal yacht Trinacria, surrounded by 12 Italian warships and twelve torpedo boats. The usual salutes were exchanged, and hearty cheers greeted the British King from the people ashore and the sailors on board the warships.

The two kings embraced each other repeatedly when they met on board the Trinacria, and King Victor Emmanuel kissed Queen Alexandra's hand.

The Mayor of Gaeta sent her majesty a bouquet of orchids and roses with a card bearing the words of welcome and admiration to the most powerful Queen in the world.

A lunch on board the Trinacria followed. It was mainly attended by military and naval officers, the only local official invited being General Del Rosso, commander of the Fort of Gaeta. The presence of Marine Minister Mirabello, the strong advocate of increasing the strength of the Italian navy, and the commanders of so many men-of-war before one of the chief strongholds in the Mediterranean accentuated the martial character of the repast. The toasts exchanged were simply expressions of friendship between King and Great Britain.

A crowd of Spanish women who were permitted to witness King Edward's arrival from the high bastions of the fort gave vent to their patriotism by singing "God Save the King," which was acknowledged by the British Royal yacht dipping her ensign.

Light of the Stars.

Various attempts have been made to estimate the light of stars. In the northern hemisphere Argelander has registered 324,000 stars down to the nine-and-one-half magnitude, with the aid of the best photometric data. Agassiz Chuck's "System of the Stars" gives the sum of the light of these northern stars as equivalent to 1,460 of full moonlight, and the total light of all stars similarly enumerated in both hemispheres to the number of about 900,000 is roughly placed at 1,980 of the lunar brightness. The combined light of still fainter celestial bodies is difficult to estimate. By a photographic method Sir William Abney in 1900 called the total starlight of both hemispheres as 1,300 of full moonlight, and Professor Newcomb in 1901 from visual observations of diffused sky radiance found the light power of all stars to be equal to 1,048 of the light of the full moon. Astronomically, however, the heavens would be totally dark if all the stars were blotted out. Certain processes make the upper atmosphere strongly luminous at times, and one never sees the moon-shadow-like night in absence.

Why Horses Sag.

The doctor stood at a piano of public repute, and the rider mumbled of "ride the mud."

"It is well for the world," said an admonisher, smiling, "that it is sometimes the horse for a moment. The horse is a half blind beast, with the mind of a baby. No wonder, then, that when overtaxed one lives to be dropped before the spring-back on us.

"His main trouble is his eyes. He peers in the horse's sight that he mistakes a bunch of snow from the wheels beast. A mud puddle at his feet is a yawning chasm. A shadow flung in his path is a black terror scaling his lithe frame—the weak-minded, nervous, powerful horse goes through the battle himself with fear. He is so nerve-to-hot-strained than a maniac, and, like a maniac, he sees a monster watching him at every corner. His eyes on his back, feels that we are"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

CRUSOE THE SECOND.

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay.

Copyright, 1905, by E. C. Parcells.

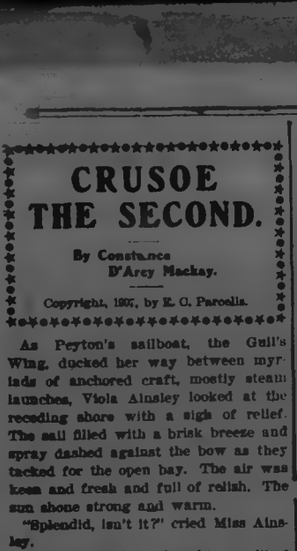
As Peyton's sailboat, the Gull's Wing, ducked her way between myriads of anchored craft, mostly steam launches, Viola Ainsley looked at the receding shore with a sigh of relief. The sail filled with a brisk breeze and spray dashed against the bow as they tacked for the open bay. The air was keen and fresh and full of relish. The sun shone strong and warm.

"Splendid, isn't it?" cried Miss Ainsley.

Peyton smiled. I thought you liked that sort of thing better?" he said, with a backward glance at the summer colony of Cliffcrest, rows of cottages and a big hotel that stood a little back from the water front.

"Don't I look as if I was enjoying myself?" she parried.

"For a person not addicted to the simple life, I must confess you do."



"SHE WENT SWIFTLY IN PREPARING IT."

said Peyton, regarding her as she perched on the seat before him in her trim white yachting suit.

"What a salty tang!" she sniffed. "It's strange, but one never seems to get the full flavor of it near the shore."

"One has to get out, away out, to get the full flavor of most things, I fancy," Peyton answered, his brown hand on the tiller, his keen eyes looking straight ahead.

"Why did you come here at all, then?" Viola questioned. "You must have known what a summer hotel would be like!"

"One has one's duty to one's family, you know, and my mother and sister are here. And then there's another reason for my coming. I followed a girl."

"A girl!"

"Yes, a girl I saw on the train. She had the seat across the aisle from me, and there were a lot of people with her, a very gay, noisy, fashionable crowd. The girl was laughing with the rest of them, and I thought she was their kind till I saw her eyes. And then I knew, for they were neither hard nor shallow nor full of surface lights. They were deep, deep and beautiful. If she were moved by love I think they could be exquisitely tender."

"But who is she?" cried Miss Ainsley in utter innocence and then flushed suddenly as Peyton's look answered her.

"Oh!" she said breathlessly and turned away her head.

"Of course I know it was extremely foolish of me," Peyton Fernald went on, "because rumor has already engaged her to Millionaire McNugget."

Miss Ainsley bit her lip. "Rumor," she said, "is often very impertinent."

"Then it isn't true?"

"It is not true—yet," said Miss Ainsley, and dabbled her hand over the edge of the boat.

"Ah!" he began.

"No," she said quickly; "you've made a great mistake. The girl isn't at all as you've imagined her. She's very fond of money. She's hard and selfish and doesn't care for simple things a bit. She'd hate not to have lots of houses and clothes and a good time."

"You think, then," said Peyton, "that because I'm not very well off in this world's goods it would be quite useless if I asked her to marry me?"

"Quite useless, I'm afraid," returned Miss Ainsley gently, "though I know what the girl's missing, for there aren't many men in the world who"— She paused as the boat gave an abrupt lurch, nearly sweeping her from her feet. Peyton reached out a strong arm and steadied her. The keel of the Gull's Wing scraped against something hard and slippery; then, with a slide and splash, the boat righted herself and went on. But the cockpit was rapidly filling with water.

"A derelict dory, by jingo!" cried Peyton as a dark object drifted past them beneath the surface of the water. "Take the tiller and the main sheet," he directed, "and put for that little island over there. I'll have to bale like blazes."

Viola did as she was bid, crouching on the seat to be out of reach of the water that swished in the bottom of the boat. The trees of the little island they were approaching stood out sharply against the blue sky. Its sandy beach lay white and shining in the sun.

"Do you think we'll make it?" she asked quietly.

"We'll try," he answered, with equal repression. Their eyes met in the understanding of a common peril. There was much against them, but wind and tide were with them, and when the Gull's Wing sank it was within a few feet of the island's shore.

Peyton stepped out and carried Miss Ainsley to land. Then he pulled in the boat as far as he could and made it fast.

"Marooned!" cried Miss Ainsley lightly. She did not refer to their past danger, nor did he, save to say solicitously, "Miss Ainsley, you're soaking wet!"

"So are you! But the sun's strong and hot on this little beach, and we'll soon dry. When do you think they'll come for us?"

"I'm afraid we won't be missed till nightfall, and it's only 3 o'clock now. Thank heaven my matches aren't damp, and we can build a fire!"

"Crusoe the second!" laughed Miss Ainsley. "Do you think the wreck will yield us anything? It should, according to the best story books."

"Nothing but the bailing pail and a coffeepot and two tin cups in the stern locker."

"Get them," she besought. "We'll use them to cook with."

"Cook what?"

Miss Ainsley's eyes danced. "Oh, Crusoe, Crusoe! Haven't you any imagination? Don't you know there's always food on a desert island—sea gulls' eggs and things like that? Come along and let's explore."

"There! I told you!" she exclaimed as their wanderings brought them to a little spring. "Isn't that pretty, the way it bubbles up between the moss and ferns? And I do believe there's been a picnic here. Look at that bit of orange peel."

"Yes, and see this!" cried Peyton, emerging from a thicket with a brown paper parcel in his hand.

"Something the picnickers forgot!" cried Miss Ainsley ecstatically. "Open it, quick!"

Peyton caught the fire of her enthusiasm. "Tea and sugar and a loaf of bread," he laughed.

"Bread!" exclaimed Miss Ainsley. "Do you think that it's stale?" She pulled a bit from the heel of the loaf and nibbled it furtively. "No! It's fresh. There must have been a picnic here this morning. We'll have a feast, a regular feast."

Time went swiftly in preparing it. Peyton found some blackberries, and Miss Ainslie made plates of leaves. They built a fire of driftwood on the beach, and over a pile of stones the coffeepot sang pleasantly. It was sunset when they seated themselves luxuriously on the sand and ate what Viola Ainslie called the fruits of their toil.

"This tea is the best I ever tasted," Peyton declared.

"You didn't know I was such a good cook, did you?" Miss Ainslie inquired as she sat opposite him poking at the fire.

"They will be coming for us soon," said Peyton, "and then our day will be over."

"Yes," said Miss Ainslie with something strangely like a sigh.

Behind them the woods of the little island were deepening into the shadow; the waves broke softly on the beach; the rosy flames of the fire shone brightly out into the gathering dusk.

"Listen," she added. In the distance could be heard the faint, steady puffing of a steam launch. "They've seen the fire," she exclaimed, shielding her eyes with her hand.

"There's McNugget," cried Peyton almost savagely, "and I suppose you're glad." He was kneeling on the sand picking up the tin cups.

Miss Ainsley smiled. "Oh, Robinson Crusoe," she said softly, "how very blind you are!"

Peyton dropped the cups and stared at her. "You mean"— he breathed.

"I mean that—this afternoon when I thought that perhaps we—we wouldn't reach the shore—it didn't seem as if the other things mattered at all. I knew then what really counted most. I knew that wealth was nothing and that I only wanted you — you — you!" The last words were almost inaudible, and Peyton had to lean very near to catch them. Then the voice of the millionaire McNugget reached them through the megaphone.

"Coming!" cried Miss Ainslie in answer. "Hurry up, Crusoe. Why on earth are you carrying that old coffeepot under your arm?"

"It's a trophy," said Peyton, "of a shipwreck that has made me the happiest man on earth."

Cautious.

A few days ago a new male resident of this city, recently arrived from Ireland, having made a favorable impression upon the manager of a wholesale house on Market street, secured a position. The merchant the next day, having made out a large number of statements, called the new employee into his office, directing him to "go out and post these bills." "Where?" inquired the young man. "Oh, yes," said the business man, "I forgot that you have only been in this country a short time. There's a mail box on the telegraph pole at the corner. Post the bills there." The son of Erin soon returned, laying the bills on the merchant's desk. "I may be a little green yet, sir," said he, "but I'm not posting them bills with a big policeman watching the box." "Not posting them? Why not? What about the policeman?" asked the astonished storekeeper. "That's all right, but you're not fooling me all the same, if I do appear to be green. Sure, didn't I see the sign on the pole over the box, 'Post no bills under penalty of the law?'"—Philadelphia Record.

Dog That Climbed a Tree.

Can a dog climb a tree? A correspondent writes: "While on a walk on snowshoes in New Hampshire we tracked a porcupine to a balsam fir, in which it had taken refuge. My Scottish terrier climbed the tree, pulling herself up from branch to branch to a height of about seven feet, where a space of bare trunk separated her from the porcupine, which had watched her progress with evident alarm. The terrier made several ineffectual attempts to scale the smooth bark and finally jumped down into the snow." And of another curious trait the same writer continues: "This little dog and her mate, now dead, though enthusiastic fire worshipers at home, never sat near the bonfires built at luncheon or tea time on winter walks, but dug holes in the snow at a little distance, in which they curled themselves up after the manner of their primitive ancestors."—Chicago News.

How Nature Provides.

Our Beauty, Health and Happiness.

Is it not possible, and altogether probable that elements necessary for the body-health are contained in the medicinal roots found in the earth, digested in the plant laboratory of Nature and made ready for man or animal?

There is a growing belief among scientists that the vegetable kingdom furnishes us with the necessary elements for blood making and to keep that delicate balance of health that the human animal is so apt to disturb by wrong methods of living. Thus we know that we should get the phosphates from the wheat in our bread—or some cereal foods, and iron from certain vegetables, such as spinach and greens.

If there is ill-health then our best method for recovering our standard balance of health is to go to Nature's Laboratory—the plant life which will furnish the remedy.

Buried deep in our forests is the plant known as Golden Seal (Hydrastis) the root of which Edwin M. Hale, M. D., Professor of Materia Medica at Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, states "In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states." Dr. Hale continues: "Prof. John M. Scudder says, 'It stimulates the digestive processes, and increases the assimilation of food. By these means the blood is enriched, and this blood feeds the muscular system.' 'I mention the muscular system because I believe it first feels the increased power imparted by the stimulation of increased nutrition. The consequent improvement on the nervous and glandular systems are natural results.'"

Stillingia or Queen's root is another root which has long been in repute as an alterative (blood purifier) and Prof. John King, M. D., says of it; "An alterative unsurpassed by few if any other of the known alteratives; most successful in skin and scrofulous affections. Beneficial in bronchial affections —permanently cures bronchitis—relieves irritation—an important cough remedy —coughs of years' standing being cured. Aids in blood-making and nutrition, and may be taken without harm for long periods."

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., combined an extract of the two above roots, together with that of Stone root, Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Mandrake and Glycerine—into a prescription which he put up in a ready-to-use form, and called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It was most successful in correcting and curing such ailments as were due to stomach and liver derangements, followed by impure blood.

In cases of weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia, ulceration of stomach or bowels, torpid liver, or biliousness, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has never been excelled as a tonic and invigorator which puts the affected organs "in tune" and enables them to perform their proper functions.

This alterative and tonic is indicated when you have symptoms of headache, backache, in fact "ache all over." When your appetite is gone, tongue furred, bad taste in month, foul breath, when you feel weak, tired, blue and discouraged, then is the time to take this natural restorative of Dr. Pierce. "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a secret, or patent medicine, because all its ingredients are printed on the bottle wrapper. It contains no alcohol; or other harmful, habit-forming agents—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used as a solvent and preservative.

A good medical book, written in plain English, and free from technical terms is a valuable work for frequent consultation. Such a work is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It's a book of 1008 pages, profusely illustrated. It is given away now, although formerly sold in cloth binding for $1.50. Send 21 cents, in one-cent stamps, to pay for cost of customs and mailing only for paper-covered copy, addressing Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.; or 50 cents for an elegantly cloth-bound copy.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative, two or three cathartic. Easy to take as candy.

A Caustic Rejoinder.

A physician who had for fifteen years been one of the doctors of the Actors' fund and who attended hundreds of actors with no compensation whatever, wrote to a prominent manager and asked for some theater tickets. His request was refused, the manager asking what the doctor had ever done that he should be entitled to receive theater tickets gratis. The physician immediately replied. His letter contained a brief recital of his services to theatrical people. In conclusion he said: "Despite my services, as named above, I should not have thought of asking you for tickets had it not been that upon the occasion of the death of Mr. Blank you assured me that if you could ever serve me in any way whatever you would consider it a favor if I would call upon you. However, I bear you no ill will on account of your present action. I was very glad to attend Mr. Blank when he died in your box office, and I should be happy to do as much for you at any time."

Tom Corwin's Education.

The father of Tom Corwin, the famous Kentucky statesman, orator and wit, felt that he was too poor to make a scholar of more than one child of his large family, and so the elder brother, Matthias, was kept at school and Thomas placed at hard work on the farm. The breaking of a leg proved a happy incident in the life of the boy, as the enforced confinement gave him time for devotion to his beloved books, and he committed a Latin grammar to memory. Upon his recovery he again importuned his father to send him to school and, meeting a refusal, deliberately broke his leg the second time that he might have leisure to study. His heroic determination to learn resulted in his being placed in the same institution attended by his brother, where his natural ability and great industry gathered a thorough knowledge of the best English literature and a fair acquaintance with the Latin classics.—Ohio Magazine.

"Oh, I told him to go and hang himself—or words to that effect," was the reply, delivered with a deprecating laugh.

"Was that your final answer?" pursued Jocelyn, inexorable. Her persistence surprised Jack. Perhaps it surprised herself.

"Yes, I think so."

"Are you sure?"

"Well, he cut up rough and threatened to make things disagreeable; so I think I said that it was no good his asking me to do anything in the matter, as I didn't know your feelings."

"Well, you can tell him," cried Jocelyn hotly, "that never, under any circumstances whatever, would I dream even of the possibility of marrying him."

And she was gone.

CHAPTER XIX.

FEEL like gettin' up to breakfast, do you, sir?" said Joseph to his master a few days later. "Well, I am glad. Glad ain't quite the word, though!"

And he proceeded to perform the duties attendant on his master's wardrobe with a wise, deep seated shake of the head. While setting the shaving necessaries in order on the dressing table, he went further—he winked gravely at himself in the looking glass.

"You've made wonderful progress the last few days, sir," he remarked. "I always told Missis Marie that it would do you a lot of good to have Mr. Gordon to heart you up with his cheery ways—and Miss Gordon, too, sir."

"Yes, but they would not have been much good without all your care before they came. I had turned the corner a week ago—I felt it myself."

Joseph grinned—an honest, open grin of self satisfaction. He was not one of those persons who like their praise bestowed with subtlety.

"Wonderful!" he repeated to himself, as he went to the well in the garden for his master's bath water. "Wonderful! But I don't understand things—not bein' a marryin' man."

During the last few days Jack's progress had been rapid enough even to satisfy Joseph. The doctor expressed himself fully reassured and even spoke of returning no more. But he repeated his wish that Jack should leave for England without delay.

"He is quite strong enough to be moved now," he finished by saying. "There is no reason for further delay."

"No," answered Jocelyn, to whom the order was spoken. "No, none. We will see that he goes by the next boat."

Jocelyn entered the drawing room with a smile. She met Jack at the door.

"The doctor is pleased with your progress," she said. "He does not seem to want to see you any more, and he told me to be inhospitable. He told me to turn you out. You are to leave by the next steamer."

"This is no joking matter," he said, half seriously. "The worst of it is that you seem rather pleased."

"I am—at the thought that you are so much better." She paused and turned quite away, busying herself with a pile of books and magazines. "The other," she went on too indifferently, "was unfortunately to be foreseen. It is the necessary drawback."

He rose suddenly and walked to the window. It was she who spoke at last.

"He also said," she observed in a practical way, "that you must not come out to Africa again."

He turned as if he had been stung.

"Did he make use of that particular word?" he asked.

"What particular word?"

"Must."

Jocelyn had not foreseen the possibility that the doctor was merely repeating to her what he had told Jack on a previous visit.

"No," she answered. "I think he said 'better not.'"

"However," she added, "you can decide when you get home."

He laughed.

"The least pleasant part of it is," he said, "your evident desire to see the last of me. Could you not disguise that a little, just for the sake of my feelings?"

"Book your passage by the next boat and I will promptly descend to the lowest depths of despair," she replied lightly.

"I wonder," he said slowly, "if you are doing this for a purpose. You said that you met my father"—

"Your father is not the man to ask any one's assistance in his own domestic affairs, and anything I attempted to do could only be looked upon as the most unwarrantable interference."

"Yes," said Meredith seriously. "I beg your pardon. You are right."

He went to his own room and summoned Joseph.

"When is the next boat home?" he asked.

"Boat on Thursday, sir."

Meredith nodded. After a little pause he pointed to a chair.

"Just sit down," he said. "I want to talk over this simiacine business with you."

Joseph squared his shoulders and sat down, with a face indicative of the gravest attention. Sitting thus he was no longer a servant, but a partner in the simiacine. He even indulged in a sidelong jerk of the head, as if requesting the attention of some absent friend in a humble sphere of life to this glorious state of affairs.

"You know," said Meredith, "Mr. Demero is more or less a blackguard."

Joseph drew in his feet, having previously drawn his trousers up at the knees.

"Yes, sir," he said, glancing up.

"He wants continual watching and a special treatment. He requires some one constantly at his heels."

"Yes, sir," admitted Joseph, with some fervor.

"Now I am ordered home by the doctor," went on Meredith. "I must go by the next boat, but I don't like to go and leave Mr. Oscard in the lurch, with no one to fall back upon but Durnovo, you understand."

Joseph's face had assumed the habitual look of servitude. He was no longer a partner, but a mere retainer, with a half comic resignation in his eyes.

"Yes, sir," scratching the back of his neck. "I am afraid I understand. You want me to go back to that platter, that God forsaken platter, as I may say."

"Yes," said Meredith; "that is about it. I would go myself"—

"God bless you, I know you would!" burst in Joseph. "You'd go like winkin'. There's no one knows that better nor me, sir, and what I says is, 'like master, like man.' Game, sir; game it is! I'll go. I'm not the man to turn my back on a pal, a—a partner, sir, so to speak."

"You see," said Meredith, with the deep insight into men that made command so easy to him—"you see there is no one else. There is not another man in Africa who could do it."

"That's true, sir."

"And I think that Mr. Oscard will be looking for you."

"And he won't need to look long, sir. But I should like to see you safe on board the boat; then I'm ready to go."

"Right. We can both leave by Thursday's boat, and we'll get the captain to drop you and your men at Lopez. We can get things ready by then, I think."

"Easy, sir."

The question thus settled, there seemed to be no necessity to prolong the interview. But Joseph did not move. Meredith waited patiently.

"I'll go up, sir, to the platter," said the servant at length, "and I'll place myself under Mr. Oscard's orders; but before I go I want to give you notice of resignation. I resigns my partnership in this 'ere simiacine at six months from today. It's a bit too hot, sir, that's the truth. It's all very well for gentlemen like yourself and Mr. Oscard, with fortunes and fine houses, and, as sayin' goes, a wife apiece waiting for you at home—it's all very well for you to go about in this blamed country with yer life in yer hand, and not a tight grip at that. But for a poor soldier man like myself, what has smelt the regulation powder all 'is life, and hasn't got nothing to love and no gal waiting for him at home—well, it isn't good enough. That's what I say, sir, with respects."

Lowell Got His Whacks.

In his volume on the practice of diplomacy John W. Foster relates an illuminating anecdote concerning James Russell Lowell when he was our minister at Madrid. At a royal reception Minister Lowell, in plain evening dress, was preceded up the palace stairway by a minister from Central America, gorgeously appareled, wearing a jeweled sword, who was saluted at each landing by the magnificent halberdier with a heavy whack of the battle ax on the marble pavement. As Mr. Lowell wore no insignia of office, he received no attention. At last, his patriotic blood boiling, he addressed the halberdier in excellent Spanish, "Do you know who I am?" "I don't." "Well," said Mr. Lowell, "I am the minister plenipotentiary of the United States of America, the greatest nation on earth, and if you don't whack the next time I pass you I will forget you at Christmas!" And the halberdier whacked thereafter as directed.

Child Cynics.

A London writer exclaims at thinking "there is really nothing to account for the extraordinary critical mood which the modern child has developed in regard to toyland." The modern child will simply not make believe. Little boys and girls alike become sticklers for the "correct thing," and if the build of a steamship or a motor car, the cut of a doll's frock or the mysteries the eye does not usually see are not "just like" the real thing there is trouble. It is said that toy makers have even now to employ scientific experts and French milliners if they hope to pass the critical eyes of the "new child." The fact is the modern child is born a cynic and a sated little darling. It has no emotions, no desires save to destroy and be lived and breathed for by necessary parents.

Romance of a Necklace.

Some years ago an old Frenchwoman died in a poor part of Dublin, and her little effects were put up for auction. Among other odds and ends was a necklace of dirty looking green stones, which did not attract much attention. However, a shrewd pair of dealers thought there might be "money in it" and decided on purchasing, clubbing together £5 for the purpose. On taking it to a well known jeweler he promptly offered £1,500, which sum they refused and sold the necklace of purest emeralds for £7,000 in London, where Lord Rosebery on his marriage purchased it for something like £20,000. The old Frenchwoman's mother had been attached to the court of France, and the emeralds had once formed part of the crown jewels.—London Answers.

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

Mining operations will be commenced just as soon as weather conditions permit.

KENNEDY COBALT, Ltd.

is recommended

Mr. Eggert, M.E., in his report on this property, says:

J. B. 32. This claim is situated on Trout Creek, not 15 chains from water's edge, in Temagami Forest Reserve, on the first bend of the Montreal River, directly at the head of Bay Lake and opposite V. and VI. concession of Coleman. Lease has been granted.

The claim is a 30 acre one and about 60 feet high with the exception of the most westerly part through which the creek runs and a small swamp to the south. Through it from one boundary line to the other runs the celebrated Nadeau vein following the contact between the middle Huronic quartzites and the diabase.

This vein, which comes up from the water on the Kay Foster claim is stripped all the way across the 30 acres of J. B. 32 at which southern end it dips down in a swamp to come up at the Nadeau.

It has a width of 5 feet, carrying a large amount of cobalt bloom, and in it runs a calcite vein 12 inches wide. Parallel with it runs an 18 inch vein of quartz richly mineralized with copper and iron sulphides.

This last vein has been traced for 4 chains while the first one, as already said, is uncovered for all of 30 chains making it plainly seen that the vein crosses the whole lot.

At the Nadeau, for which $100,000.00 was refused, has been sunk a shaft to a depth of 50 feet, and in it shows 5 inch nicolite, 12 inch smaltite together with cobaltite. Assays gave 672-1283-492-1161 oz. silver, or an average of over 900 oz. silver, which at the present price of 70c. is equal to $630.00 per ton, exclusive of cobalt values. The Edison Mine is right above on higher land.

The property is well situated right at water, has enough timber for all purposes and is one which needs only a shaft of 50 feet depth to be ready as a producer.

ANIMAL SAGACITY.

The Instinct That Leads the Ostrich to Protect Its Eggs.

The nature students—everybody is a nature student nowadays—were trying to outdo one another.

"Eagles when the sun is overhot shade their young with outspread wings," said the first. "On August afternoons I have seen a mother eagle stand patiently two full hours, her left wing spread like an umbrella, while in its cool shade her nestlings slept."

"Squirrels," said the second, "can tell whether a nut is good or bad without opening it. A chestnut, a walnut, a shellbark, they lift it in their little paws, hold it to their faces a moment, then if it is bad cast it aside. How do they tell? By the weight, by the sound? I incline to think they do it by the smell."

"Ostriches never sit," said the third. "They lay their eggs on the pale Saharan sands, and the sun does the rest. But before the ostriches depart from their eggs they place on the top of each a pinch of sand, for they know that the germ will mount to the top and that the sun's heat would kill the germ were it not protected."

"A trained elephant," said the fourth student, "danced very badly at a matinee performance and was accordingly beaten cruelly by its master. That night, hearing a shuffling noise outside, the master crept forth, and there in the moonlight he found the elephant carefully practicing its dance steps."

A PRIVILEGE RESERVED.

Ceremonies Witnessed at a Jeweler's Ring Counter.

"I want a plain gold ring for a lady. Best you've got in the store."

"For this lady?"

"Sure! Who else would it be for? Pull off your glove, Katie, and let the gentleman measure your finger."

The girl withdrew her woolen glove and bashfully extended her small hand, red and toil worn, toward the clerk.

"There, that's about the size," said the jeweler to the girl.

"Do you wish him to put it on?"

"No—not yet," said the blushing girl. "When he puts that ring on, it's on to stay."

Size, quality and price at last were settled satisfactorily, and the young man pulled from his pocket a shining coin.

"Here you are, gold for gold!" he exclaimed proudly. "Nothin' but gold I'll pay for that ring."

"Haven't you anything smaller?" asked the sordid clerk.

"Plenty, but nothin' good enough to pay for that ring."

"Bit of sentiment, eh?" queried an interested bystander.

"Oh, yes, sir," said the girl, with evident pride. "He's been saving that twenty dollar gold piece for nearly four months, waiting to buy this ring."

Your Own Body.

Think deliberately of the house you live in—your body. Make up your mind not to abuse it. Eat nothing that will hurt it; wear nothing that distorts or pains it. Do not overload it with victuals or drink or work. Give yourself regular and abundant sleep. Keep your body warmly clad. At the first signal of danger from any of the thousand enemies that surround you defend yourself. Do not take cold, guard yourself against it. If you feel the first symptoms, give yourself heroic treatment. Get into a fine glow of heat by exercise. This is the only body you will ever have in this world. A large share of pleasure and pain of life will come through the use you make of it. Study deeply and diligently the structure of it, the laws that should govern it, the pains and penalties that will surely follow a violation of every law of life or health.

Torpedo Boats.

Torpedo boats and torpedo destroyers are thin skinned, unarmored craft. Often the steel hull is only about half an inch in thickness, but they travel as fast as many railway trains, some thirty or thirty-five miles an hour. They discharge their deadly bolt and run. A dark, stormy night is their chance. Then, without a light showing, they dash in and launch their torpedo, escaping, if they can, the hail of rapid fire that is sure to deluge them. —Frank E. Channon in St. Nicholas.

Force of Habit.

Realizing that he should pay her a compliment, the chronic debtor hesitates before the beautiful woman. At last he says to her:

"Just make a little tab for me, and next time I'm down your way I'll tell you how well you are looking."

But the look on her countenance was enough to make him realize that compliments must be paid on face value and that beauty keeps no books.

PLIGHT OF THE ACTOR.

Behind the Scenes He Is, in a Manner, a Prisoner.

In a way, behind the scenes is a prison. It is surely one of the very few places where intelligent men and women are locked in their place of work and where no message from the outside world is allowed to reach them. There is a tradition that actor folk are of unusually emotional temperament, and if therefore a telegram is received at the stage door it is never delivered until after the performance. The message might be an invitation to supper, or it might announce that the actor's favorite brother has been hanged, or it might be an offer in a stock company to play twelve times a week, or it might tell the actor that he was the father of twins or that his wife would die without seeing him again unless he came at once to her bedside, but all of this information is supposed not to be good for the actor's emotional disposition, and the telegram is therefore given the same distinction as the "mash" note and kept until after the performance is finished. It cannot be said that the actor's emotional disposition is very seriously considered beyond the cast iron rule in regard to telegrams. His comfort and intelligence have been slightly flattered in a few theaters of very recent date, but for the most part the condition of behind the scenes in most playhouses is not calculated to breed particularly high thoughts of any kind. As a matter of fact, he is treated little better than when he was only a "strolling" player—a gypsy—several centuries ago.—Charles Belmont Davis in Outing Magazine.

"PLUG" TOBACCO.

An Old Farmer's Story of How the Name Originated.

In the jury room at the courthouse a few days ago an old time farmer said as he took a chew of tobacco:

"All the difference in the world in tobacco. I've tried twenty different kinds, and none is as good as that we used to make ourselves down on the farm. We would take a maple log while 'twas green and bore a dozen holes in it with a two inch augur. They were our molds. We selected our choicest tobacco and soaked it for a week or more in wild honey. Then we'd take the leaf to the log, get a good hickory tamping stick and go to work.

"A little ball of the honey soaked tobacco would be put in the auger hole and tamped in with the stick and a hammer. We'd pound it in solid. Ball after ball would be rammed in and pounded until the whole became a solid plug. When the hole was nearly full, we would pound in the plug, and then the log would be put away to season. As the wood dried the moisture would be drawn from the tobacco. And when it was split the sweetest tobacco ever made was taken from it. We called it 'plug' tobacco, and that's where the name originated."

Cat Laughter?

What was the origin of the phrase "Enough to make a cat laugh?" Dr. Murray's Dictionary notices only "Enough to make a cat speak," which is explained as signifying something extraordinary, especially something very good to drink. "Old liquor able to make a cat speak" is quoted from an early eighteenth century source, and therewith Stephano's remark to Caliban is compared, "Open your mouth; here is that which will give language to you, cat." Miss Squeers' maidservant said that only to see Miss Squeers' friend, Miss Price, toss her head was "enough to make a tomcat talk French grammar." But even that is not exactly laughing. Has it anything to do with the mythical Cheshire animal?—London Chronicle.

Dress in Old Massachusetts.

There was an ancient law in Massachusetts that ladies' dresses should be made long enough to hide their shoe buckles. In 1600 an act of the general court prohibited short sleeves and required garments to be lengthened so as to cover the arms to the wrists and gowns to the shoe buckles; "immoderate great breeches, knots of ribbon, broad shoulder bands, and they be, silk roses, double ruffs and cuffs" were forbidden. In the same colony, in 1653, I. Fairbanks was tried for wearing great boots, but was acquitted.

The Early Worm.

Entertaining a children's party at a certain millionaire's house in New York, a woman professional teller of stories to juveniles happened to employ the old proverb, "The early bird catches the worm." A little boy questioned the proverb promptly. "But wasn't the worm foolish," he asked, "to get up early and be caught?" "My dear," said the story teller, "that worm hadn't been to bed at all. He was just getting home."

Experts agree that the rich veins from which the Sandstorm is getting such fabulously rich ore, which is equal to any taken from the Mohawk, is a continuation of the Mohawk vein, and extends right through our property.

The Desert Rose mine, joining the Last Dollar, one of our properties, has produced ore worth $20,000 a ton in gold.

PULL SNAKE'S TEETH.

Eighteen Men Sit on Python While Operation Is Performed.

Feast day for Salome, the longest python in the Zoological Park, proved to be the busiest day the attendants have had for many months and the liveliest occasion in her career. After all arrangements had been made to feed a brace of rabbits to the twenty-four foot serpent the discovery was made that fourteen of the snake's teeth were decayed, and the intended feast became a tooth pulling.

Salome eats only once in a while. Her last feast was on New Year's Day, when the attendants forced five rabbits down her throat. A peculiar restlessness during the following days led the attendants to believe that she was feeling the pangs of hunger again and plans were made to feed her seven rabbits. These were dressed and tied together, Salome was unhitched and hoisted into a corridor and twelve sturdy men were instructed to range themselves along her coils. Dr. Dittmars stood by with a ten foot pole, to be used in placing the rabbits in the proper place, and at the proper moment the jaws were pried open.

A Patient Python.

Up to this point Salome had been a patient python. She hadn't so much as opened her eyes. But when her jaws were forced she writhed and squirmed and kept the dozen bodyguards busy. Dr. Dittmars was surprised to find that fourteen of the forty teeth in the upper jaw were decayed and the whole mouth badly swollen.

Pincers of large size were obtained, and while eighteen men held excited on the snake, which made desperate efforts to switch its massive tail and wiggle out of the grasp of the impromptu dentists, Dr. Dittmars drew out the affected teeth.

Salome was left in a rather ugly mood, and no effort was made to force upon her the delectable feast that had been prepared. Instead she was carefully rolled up into the conventional coils and was carried back to her cage. Dr. Dittmars says she will recover from the operation and will be an improved python.

In two or three weeks she will be fed—if her condition is normal. If the feast were delayed for several months it would not worry Dr. Dittmars, the attendants said. Eating is the least of her worries.

par value $1.00. As a result of last summer's work numerous veins of rich ore were uncovered, assaying from $10 up to $5000. There is every indication that this property will prove sensationally rich, and with the low capitalization of $500,000, $150,000 of which is in the Treasury, the dividends should be large, and the stock become very valuable. This is a thorough business mining proposition, and will stand the most critical examination. As there are only a limited number of shares offered, intending subscribers should send in their orders without delay.

the judges of the High Courts of Justice, and is usually created a peer of the realm on his retirement or promotion, which latter fate has overtaken that genial Irishman, Sir Richard Henn Collins, who now becomes Lord Collins, and who will be remembered in this country as one of the arbitrators of the Venezuelan boundary controversy.

Sea Songs.

Despite the time the Lords of the Admiralty devote to schemes for the cutting down of Britain's fleet, they still find a space of that fleeting commodity to issue an official song-book for the use of bluejacket vocalists.

One recently published contains seventy-two songs, which have all been selected to suit naval requirements. The first is, as one might imagine; the National Anthem, and the book closes with, "Off to Philadelphia."

Other old favorites contained in the volume are "The Death of Nelson," "Tom Bowling," and "They All Love Jack." Of course, the sister countries are all represented with songs, and those of Scotland, Ireland, and Wales respectively are "Bonnie Dundee," "Father O'Flynn," and "Men of Harlech." Instructions have been issued to all naval and marine bands to obtain a copy of this book.

Moods.

Can one help having the "blues?" Can one help having a bad temper? Certainly. Moods are as subject to the will as any mental faculty, asserts a woman writer. The difference between the successful, popular woman and the woman who by her disagreeableness drives every one from her is simply the power of the former to control her moods and her temper.

Rosy Cheeks

The Ambition of Every Woman

Hollow cheeks with dark lines, sallow complexion—how a woman hates them.

But rosy cheeks, clear skin, bright eyes—give them to a woman and she is happy.

In the blood is found the first sign of trouble.

It grows thin and watery, its color fades, and increasing pallor and sallowness give the outward evidence of the change within.

Soon the nerves weaken, the heart easily tires and palpitates, strength declines.

The delicate mechanism of the womanly functions is interfered with, and pleasures, activities and even duties are loaded down with the burden of declining health.

Why is it that women neglect the first warnings?

Usually she waits till she is ready to drop—often then it's too late.

These conditions are easily checked, easily cured at the beginning,—but even when long established Ferrozone will remove the cause and cure the trouble.

Ferrozone's action aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination.

By strengthening digestion it forms an abundance of rich, red blood—this gives good color.

By perfecting assimilation Ferrozone supplies nutrition—this gives strength, vim, stability.

Elimination is assured because Ferrozone quickens the actions of the liver, kidneys and bowels—this guarantees the maintenance of vigorous health.

Ferrozone puts you on the right road—the one that leads to health.

Not a man, woman or child needing blood, vigor, endurance—not a person who is weak, nervous or sickly, not a person in ill-health who won't receive immediate help from Ferrozone.

As a tonic and restorative, as a health-bringer and body-builder, Ferrozone is unrivalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. Try it yourself—sold everywhere in 50c. boxes.

Peterboro Man's Heavy Stock

Yesterday Mr. M. Pappas the George street cigar and tobacco dealer, after getting in a consignment of 15,000 of a certain cigar took stock of the cigars in his store. It will surprise our readers and particularly those acquainted with cigar stores and cigar stocks to learn that this local dealer found that in his store on the west side of George street, were over one hundred thousand cigars of all kinds and prices. We question whether any strictly retail cigar dealer in Canada outside the cities of Toronto, Montreal, or Winnipeg has on hand 104,800 cigars in stock. This speaks well for the wealth and spending ability of the citizens of Peterborough, that a retailer can keep a stock that would be a credit to many a wholesale establishment.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes ch, pure blood and so invigorates and gulates the stomach, liver and bowels, nd, through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

THE KNOW HOW

To Feed Children and Get Good Results.

There are more nervous persons made so by undigested food lying in the stomach than the average individual would suppose.

If food remains undigested in the stomach, it begins to ferment, set up gas and a large portion is thus converted into poison.

That's why imperfectly digested food may and often does cause irritation of the nerves and misery of the mind—brain and nerves are really really poisoned.

"My daughter had complained for some time of a distressed feeling in the stomach, after eating, which set me thinking her diet was not right," writes an anxious and intelligent mother.

"She had been fond of cereals, but had never tried Grape-Nuts. From reading the account of this predigested food, it seemed reasonable to try Grape-Nuts for her case.

"The results were really wonderful. The little brain that seemed at times unable to do its work, took up new life and vigor. Every morning, now, before going to school, she eats the crisp little morsels and is now completely and entirely well, she seems to have a new lease on life—no more distresses in the stomach, nor headache, but sound and well every way." SAYS AUSTRALIA WILL TAKE CARE OF HERSELF

Premier Deakin Says They Will be Able to Fight Without Britain's Assistance---Laurier Is Attacked.

LONDON, April 21.—Field Marshal Lord Roberts presided at a banquet given at Claridge's by the Pilgrim's Society last evening, in honor of the colonial premiers, who are in London to take part in the Colonial Conference. It was the most brilliant of the honors accorded the visiting prime ministers since their arrival here.

Sir Edward Grey, in his address, referred to the mistake Great Britain made in her colonial policy in a former century, and said he was sure this would not be repeated.

Lord Roberts and Mr. Smart spoke of the reunion of the Anglo-Saxon nation, and reminded their hearers that Americans were taking part in the celebration of the evening.

The most striking addresses were delivered by Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Alfred Deakin. Sir Edward remarked he feared the colonists found the colonial office much further from the colonies than the colonies were from the colonial office.

TO DEFEND HERSELF.

Mr. Deakin talked from the shoulder and dealt with international problems in straightforward words. He said that it was a fact that the colonial office was further from the colonies than the colonies from the colonial office, and he emphasized the claim that the colonies should be independent nations. He said it was "refreshing" to come to London and talk with the government face to face. He promised that Australia next year would inaugurate a system whereby she could defend herself in the event of war without assistance from the Mother Country.

He emphasized the fact that the problems of Australia were not the problems of England, saying the Mother Country had no Asiatic population as menacing rivals.

WARNING FOR BRITAIN.

Then, referring obviously to the German occupation of the New Hebrides, the Premier of Australia said he wished it to be noted that England had not allowed a rival European nation to secure a foothold close to Australia without a warning from Australia. While the British navy had not been called on in a test of sea supremacy during the past century, the speaker said this would happen in the next hundred years. Without mentioning nations by name, he predicted pointedly that there would be a war for the supremacy of the Pacific with Germany and Japan.

ATTACK ON LAURIER.

The Evening Post strongly attacks Laurier for his attitude on the question of the imperial council and the colonial office secretariat, and editorially alludes to his strange defection from the cause of the imperial alliance and his assisting Lord Elgin to bring about further subordination of the conference to the colonial office. Richard Webb writes: "It seems almost incredible that Laurier should have ranged himself on the side of the old bureaucracy against the self-respecting ambition of colonial nationalism. Shall it be said of him that he stood silent, if he did not actually lend his hand, while the bureaucracy strangled in its cradle that Imperial offspring of Canadian nationalism?"

PREHISTORIC MEXICO

Mexican Excavations Expose Old Temple.

New York, April 20.—Recent excavations have been made in Mexico in one of the tumuli that form the row of the Street of the Dead. Here have been discovered a number of rooms, which are apparently a part of an ancient temple, with rooms and patios. Below these, stairways lead to a large room some thirty feet in length. Apparently there are other rooms on this level connected with one another. There are the first subterranean houses that have so far been found in the valley, and they show that in this buried city the houses were two and three stories high. The upper stories had been destroyed by fire, but the lower remained untouched, and upon them there still remains the red paint which was the characteristic color of Teotihuacan. Among the interesting things found is the skeleton of a man supposed to have been one of the ancient Toltec kings. Beside the human skeleton was that of a tiger, and both were painted red. In addition to these there were also found large quantities of seashells, obsidian heads, jade and obsidian idols, knives, snakes, and polished stone masks representing heroes who lived 9,000 years ago. Many spiral sheels were also encountered which had holes drilled through them, showing that they had been used as beads. They were beautifully polished. Many copper, bronze, chicheuite, and perite objects were also found among the others, showing that the dead man must have been of great importance in his day. Many of these were beautifully polished and of extraordinary size.

Another Promising Cobalt Proposition

Hiawatha Cobalt Silver Mining Company's Splendid Property.

Now that the excitement created by the recent wonderful discoveries of silver laden ore in the Cobalt district, it is interesting to learn that the Hiawatha Cobalt Silver Mining Co., Ltd., has not only secured but is actually carrying on development work on the veins already exposed in their property.

Mr. E. C. Kingswell, one of Canada's best known mining engineers and experts in ore, in writing about the Hiawatha property, says that by trenching for a thousand feet the ore assayed up to $40 per ton or over. He added, and this is an important feature, that "the claim is beautifully stratified and that the ledges will no doubt go down to an indefinite depth." He further says that in 21 years' mining experience, "I have every confidence in strongly recommending this claim as one of more than ordinary merit."

The company has placed 200,000 shares of their capital stock for public subscription, each share having a par value of $1, fully paid up and non-assessable at 25 cents per share. This offer however, terminates on May 1st, when the prices will be materially advanced. For full particulars write Mackeen & Slattie, Brokers, 106 1-2 Sparks street, Ottawa.

No Boodling Next Time

Washington, D. C., April 20.—The next Republican presidential campaign will be conducted on vastly different lines from the campaign of 1904, as far as contributions are concerned, if Mr. Roosevelt has anything to do with it. That the President believes he will have something to say as to its conduct is shown by the fact that the Corrupt Practices bill to be introduced in the next Congress will have his support. He wants "open books." The President has told some of his friends that by the time Congress meets he is hopeful that some measure which he can fully and unreservedly endorse will be prepared and presented.

The Jamestown Exposition

The Jamestown Exposition, which opens on April 26th, 1907, promises to be one of the most interesting of the larger expositions which have been held in later years. Its location at Sewell's Point, on the historic Hampton Roads, some nine miles from the city of Norfolk, Virginia, and directly opposite Old Point Comfort, in itself will appeal to many, and the magnificent array of warships that will congregate here from all the countries of the world will attract a tremendous number of people from all parts of the American this Exposition from Canada, including Canadians who have not had the privilege of visiting the South this event will be the best opportunity that will present itself, and the low transportation rates that are offered will lend an additional attraction.

The only Canadian exhibit at this great Fair will be that of the Grand Trunk Railway System, who have erected a building of their own, in which the resources and attractive features of Canada will be shown, and at which building Canadians will be welcome, and where all information may be obtained. Another feature that is offered is the many different routes that can be taken to this Exposition from Canada, including rail, river and ocean journeys. The true hospitality of the southern people, the picturesque that surrounds the locality, and the many things to see and do, should be the means of inducing a large number to go from the north. Grand Trunk Agents will gladly give information as to rates and routes.

Travelling Libraries Are Recommended

Government Report Gives Statistics of Local Mechanics' Institute Library.

The annual report upon public libraries issued by the Ontario Government, has just reached The Times. We notice in the long list of cities, towns and villages which, according to this report have "free and public libraries," that Peterborough is included. Without wishing to be captious we cannot but think the word "free," is a misnomer in regard to the local library, presumably referred to the Mechanics' Institute Library, on Water street. This institution flaunts a sign "Public Library," and so it is provided one pays $1.50 per annum for the head of a family and is...may more dollars for other members of the same family. Whilst the prices charged are not excessive, the terms "free" or "public," do not rightly apply. The local Mechanics' Institute gets an annual grant of $190.39 from the Ontario Legislature, $541.35 from members' fees, $701 from bequests and other sources, for last year had an income of $1432.74; its expenditures were $1,136.09, there were 401 members, the library had 10,393 volumes in it, of which 13,945 were issued. There are 88 papers and publications in the rooms and the assets of the library last year amounted to $12,636.74. We notice that the little town of Lindsay, has a library with assets of $17,256.04, still a bone of self respect is better than the charity fat wrung by Carnegie from his toiling employes.

To assist in a practical manner the encouragement of the general use of books in small places where extensive libraries are not available, the inspector of public libraries, Toronto, strongly recommends the use of "travelling libraries." He says each library should consist of about fifty books, to be sent out in a convenient case. Said libraries should be loaned to the small public libraries for three months. By establishing circuits of from ten to twelve libraries in a county or group of counties the cost of changing the libraries would be reduced to the minimum. A few of the libraries should be made up to suit the needs of special organizations, clubs or localities. The local library would pay transportation charges and for any volumes lost or damaged beyond ordinary wear.

Hooliganism Is Rife in France

PARIS, April 21.—M. Hamard, the famous chief of the Paris police, has narrowly escaped becoming the victim of a Paris hooligan, or, as the picturesque city prefers to style the class, Apaches. He sustained a painful though not a dangerous wound.

A young man named Dallin, wanted for murder, had been traced to an hotel in the Choisy avenue, and M. Hamard, accompanied by a policeman, went to arrest him. As he door of the room occupied by Dallin was not opened at his summons, the great detective burst it open with his shoulder, but as he entered Dallin aimed a knife at his chest. Mr. Hamard caught the blow on his arm, which was ripped from elbow to wrist. Dallin was then secured by the policeman.

Two policemen have been murdered during four days.

Cobalt Free of Smallpox

Toronto, April 20.—The statement that smallpox has been epidemic in the town of Cobalt is emphatically denied by Chairman Graham, of the local Board of Health. Mr. Graham says that since February there have been five cases reported in the camp, and as a result; two mines, the Columbia and the Drummond, were for a time under quarantine. All the cases were of a mild type. The patients have now recovered and the quarantine has been raised.

Food of Prison

Montclair, N. J., April 20.—The Warden of the Essex County penitentiary, at Caldwell, assisted by several keepers, had a hard time last night to induce Charles Coleman to quit the institution and grounds after his sentence had expired.

The keepers had to force Coleman out of his cell and to the grounds outside the penitentiary. This happened early in the afternoon, and at 9 o'clock the same night Coleman was discovered by outside guards trying to break his way back into the penitentiary.

He was hustled toward the street, but came back several times, and it was only after several shots had been fired in the air that he became frightened and concluded to board a trolley car for Newark.

Thaws Come to Agreement

New York, N. Y., April 22.—The sensational letters written to Evelyn Thaw by Stanford White, which the defence was unable to get before the jury at the trial just closed, will be used by Harry Thaw in his next fight for life. With the approval of his mother and her added assurance of financial backing, Thaw has assumed full charge of his fight to escape both the death chair and the madhouse. He won his mother's consent at two long conferences in Tombs. Insanity at the time Thaw killed White and complete restoration of his mental facilities since the tragedy will be the basis of defence. There will be absolutely no attempt to appeal to socalled lawritten law. The young wife will again be the central figure in the new trial.

WOULDN'T GO BACK

To Old Days of Coffee Misery for Millions.

A N.Y. lady is emphatic about coffee, and in comparing her former condition when using it, with her later improvement under Postum Food Coffe, says:

"We have used Postum instead of coffee for the past four years and have been greatly benefitted by the change.

"I have always had a weak stomach from childhood, and about five years ago one doctor told me I must leave off coffee entirely. I thought I could not, but tried it for a few mornings, using cocoa in its place, but tired of it.

"Then I went back to coffee and kept getting worse, until my stomach was unable to hold or digest much of anything.

"One day I got hold of a little booklet, 'The Road to Wellville,' I read it and decided to try Postum.

"I got better as time went on and we all learned to like it so well that now we use it to the exclusion of everything else in the line of drink at table.

"This summer I went away for two weeks and my husband took his meals at the restaurant. As he did not drink coffee he asked for Postum. They brought it to him, 'pale, weak stuff,' made in a hurry.

"But the first morning after I returned home he said, 'Oh, it seems good to have a cup of Postum that's made right.' At the restaurant, he said, they did not boil it long enough. (Postum must be well boiled to get the delicious flavor—see directions).

"I would not use coffe again and go back to the old days of suffering for millions. I have a friend who drank Postum for two weeks, during a siege of typhoid fever, the only nourishment she took in all that time, and she came out all right. I would be willing to give $1,00 a toz for, Postum rather than use coffee." Names given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville." In pkgs. "There's a reason."

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"The King of Tramps"

A large audience greeted the musical comedy, "The King of Tramps," at the Grand Opera House Saturday night. Mr. Dave Derden admirably impersonates the "King of Tramps," and keeps the house alive with his catchy Light comedy. Mr. Derden is also a musical genius, and extracts beautiful music from a set of cow bells, a number of common tin cans used as a dulcimer, and from an arrangement of brass rods that he manipulates in a marvelous manner with gloved hands. The company is under the capable management of Mr. Oscar O'Shea, son of Mr. James O'Shea, of this city. He also plays the heavy lead, and is rapidly developing into a very clever actor. His voice is powerful, his delivery good, and he has well cast the character of Mark Hanley, the unscrupulous cousin. Mr. Oscar O'Shea has made no mistake in the choice of his profession.

SAN FRANCISCO'S PROGRESS

Million a Week is Being Spent in Wages.

San Francisco, April 22.—The following is an abstract of the address of President Frank J. Symmes at the annual dinner of the Merchants' Association of San Francisco.

"The insurance companies of the world were called upon as they had never been before. Loss claims were filed for $225,000,000, and of this sum $13,000,000 was against two San Francisco companies. One of these companies assessed its stockholders (fifty per cent. of whom were residents of San Francisco) three times its capital. The other, having 10 per cent. of its capital locate...

LAWYER POKES FUN AT NEW THEOLOGY

He says that Rev. Campbell's Book Furnishes Fine Material for a Good Cross-Examination.

LONDON, April 21. — "The New Theology," the Rev. R. J. Campbell's exposition and defence of his Christian views, is not intended for theologians; and the Daily Mail has accordingly submitted the book to men immersed in the daily struggles of life—the classes to whom it is addressed—to ascertain what they think of the epistle.

A business man of culture said the language jarred by its familiarity in dealing with reverent matters; the treatment was vague; and the writer doubted if the teaching was Christianity at all.

A barrister-at-law gives his impressions, and they are not favorable.

The barrister's views are as follows;

"What grand material for cross-examination purposes is in this book, which the author in his preface does not claim speaks for anyone else but himself. There is a modesty sublime in the belief that the name invented by critics, has 'to all appearances' come to stay, and is 'gradually acquiring a marked and definite content.' To my mind, on perusal of this volume, was recalled Darnell's epigram in reply to a long speech from an opponent, that the honorable members had said many new things and many true things, but the new things were not true, neither were the true things new.

MAY NOT HAVE LOST HOLD.

"Doubtless the writer honestly feels his point of view and believes that Christianity will recover its hold—that it has lost its hold will not be admitted by us—as soon as his interests shake themselves free from theologians—the defenders of systems of belief couched in the language of a bygone age.

"All religion begin in cosmic emotion,' starts the second chapter of this eagerly expected essay, and as I read I felt a thrill go through me such as I used to feel when ushered into the presence of the headmaster. My idea of 'cosmic emotion' has been that of a feeling which suggests the world is moving round and round me, but, perhaps I am most religious when I feel worst, which, I believe, is the case with a good many of us.

POINTERS FOR CONVERTS.

"Again I read; "The mysterious universe is always calling, and, in some form or other, we are always answering." This dictum must have reached an Old Bailey habitue, who, only a few days ago pleaded in defence to a charge of larceny, that he could not help himself, he had to thieve, for a mysterious something was asking him to do it—and he did it. Alas! judging by the verdict, juries will be required to be educated up to the subtlety of a defence based upon the new theology.

"Mr. Campbell alleges that theologians employ 'figures of speech which are distinctly misleading;' but what is one to think of this metaphor on page 5; 'The wagon of secularism needs to be hitched to the star of religious faith!'

WILL WRECK ITSELF.

"To my ordinary mind, the author of the work is endeavoring to alter that which (to use a legal phrase) has been a res judicata for centuries, and he possesses apparently little or no authority for so doing. This undermining of old faiths and doctrines is no new departure. It may give the wavering ones cause for doubting, but, like other attacks, made ever since Christ lived on earth, will doubtless wreck itself upon the rock of steadfast and well-tried belief."

Game of Billiards Leads to Wedding

LONDON, April 21.—The story of the romantic engagement of Captain Godfrey-Faussett, equerry to the Prince of Wales, to Miss Eugenie Dudley Ward, is likely to make the game of billiards exceedingly popular among ladies.

The romance began last November, while Captain Godfrey-Faussett was in attendance upon the prince at Headham, where they were guests of Lord and Lady Stradbroke. Another guest was Miss Dudley Ward, who is a keen billiard player. Captain Godfrey-Faussett is also very fond of the game, and the two frequently played as partners at Headham. After a particularly interesting game, shortly before the close of the visit, the captain suggested to his fair partner that they should adjourn from the room, and the lady consenting, her admirer proposed another kind of partnership.

That her answer was her friends learned a few days later in the announcement that a marriage has been arranged between Captain Godfrey-Faussett and Miss Eugenie Dydley Ward.

The Prince and Princess of Wales have taken a keen interest in the engagement, and were present at the wedding, which took place at the Chapel Royal on April 11. Their Royal Highnesses were also present at the reception after the marriage.

VIENNA, April 21.—The anti-Magyar movement is spreading and growing in intensity in some of the districts of Hungary inhabited jointly by Roumanians and Muggars.

The movement is an outcome of the jealousies and racial feeling aroused by the aggression of the Magyars, who seek to examinate the situation politically and otherwise.

Military Occupation of Finland Threatened

ST. PETERSBURG, April 20.—The officers of several of the cavalry and artillery regiments of the guard have been notified that manoeuvres in Finland may be substituted this year for the usual exercises in the summer camp at Krasnoe-Selo.

The news has caused considerable alarm among the Finns, who regard the step as a prelude to the military occupation of Finland.

The recent captures of cartridges from abroad, which are supposed to have been destined for insurrection into Russia through Finland, and the capture of cartridges in Finland itself, intended for the revolutionists in other parts of the empire, have strengthened the hands of the anti-Finnish advisers of the emperor.

Two squadrons of torpedo boats have been formed to guard the gulfs of Bothnia and Finland, and wireless telegraph stations are being established at Ramsaremd, Nikolaistad, Abo and other ports.

The Toll of the Lakes

Ottawa, April 20.—According to a return prepared by the Department of Marine, 205 lives have been lost by wrecks on lakes Huron and superior, since 1881. The greatest marine catastrophe on the lakes during that period was the foundering of the steamer Asia, with a loss of 92 lives, on September 11, 1882. Last fall eight wrecks were reported, with a total loss of $371,000.

The Train Didn't Stop

LONDON, April 21.—A man named William Zeiss, while impersonating a signalman bound to the railroad line by robbers in a moving picture representation of a train wrecking scene, was killed by a train near Croydon, yesterday.

The train ought to have stopped, but failed to do so owing to the error in the signaling.

Salt and Ashes as Fuel is Dangerous

Concerning the most recent fad, that of burning salt and ashes with coal, Dr. Sheard, medical health officer, Toronto, says;

"It is more than foolish; it is dangerous. People should be cautioned as to the use of salt and water with ashes. When brine is thrown on a hot fire, hydrochloric acid is formed, which is one of the most rapid rusters known. A very little of it will very quickly rust out the pipes and all the iron attachments in connection with a furnace. Chloride of iron is produced instantly, and the air and heat reduce it to oxide of iron, which is another name for rust.

"The present experiments are being carried on with danger to boilers, and without saving of coal beyond what might be saved by sifting the ashes.

"All there is to the discovery," he continued, "is the fact that in every ash heap there is a certain amount of waste coal; that is, unconsumed coal which has not been sifted out, and that, of course, will burn. There is nothing in ash to burn any more than there is in stone.

The Dust Nuisance Is Commented On

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—If the cause as well as the act of swearing is jotted down by the Recording Angel, the city councillors of Peterborough must have got a bad record on Saturday. The dust was flying in clouds, particularly in the morning, but more or less all day Saturday. In conversation with several merchants whose stocks suffered quite a tangible damage from the ever present dust, these gentlemen used, in some case pretty husky expressions and language not adapted to books for a Sunday school library. They thought if the city fathers instead of standing to, and wasting time over their little dinkey 18-inch sign bylaw, and legislating against privileges enjoyed by both merchants and professional men, since Peterborough's inception, and against which not a complaint has ever been made, would give the merchants and their stocks, not to mention the general public, some protection against the volumes of choking dust that annoyed every class of the community, they would command greater respect. I understand that this sign bylaw will be discussed by a deputation of merchants at the council meeting tonight; if so I hope this recent fad will be dropped and the council's attention devoted to matters that are of some greater importance.

Yours truly,

RATEPAYER.

Peterboro Stabber Is an Ex-Convict

Cameron's Name is Chambers and He is a Desperate Character.

It will be remembered that The Times in its issue of Saturday noted that Chief Russel had had a photograph taken of the man who stabbed three men in a local hotel a few days ago, and had sent the photo for identification purposes to Toronto and North Bay. The Toronto Sunday World says that this man's name Fred Chambers, not Frank Cameron. The article goes on to say, regarding the photograph sent to Toronto;

The detective department placed him as Fred Chambers, who has recently been released from Kingston Penitentiary, where he was serving a ten-year sentence for one of the most daring and brutal assaults ever committed in Toronto.

Chambers, with one George Slack, entered the grocery store of Henry Aspdon, at 216 Victoria street, during the afternoon of Feb. 28, 1899.

They struck down Aspdon, an old man, and felled his daughter with an axe. They escaped, but were brought back from Buffalo, where they had fled.

Chambers was given ten, and Slack twelve years in the penitentiary. The latter is still in that institution.

"He is one of the most dangerous criminals with whom we have to deal," said Inspector of Detectives Duncan. "We have been wondering where he has been for some weeks, and this clears it up."

The maximum penalty for the Peterborough offence is nine years.

ESTABLISHED 1882

A Strong Protestant Organization Formed

An organization more powerful than the P. P. A. of ancient memory and surrounded with a thicker veil of secrecy has been launched in Toronto, and bids fair to rival anything of its kind ever formed in Canada.

Only Protestants of the staunchest type are admitted into membership. It will be a political organization, giving allegiance to no political party, and will endorse and support only those who approve of the Protestant succession.

The name of the new society and the names of the officers have not been made known. Only those who have been accepted as members are made acquainted with the places of meeting.

Several public men in high position in the city have allied themselves with the organization, and are among its most energetic workers. One public man is authority for that statement that the society will have 10,000 members inside of a year, and will wield a powerful influence at the next Provincial and Federal elections.

What inspired the organization of the new society has only been hinted, but it is said that the appointments to office made by the Whitney Government have not satisfied those who are at the back of the new movement. It is claimed that the completion of the Ontario Cabinet is too pronounced by Roman Catholic, and that too much consideration is being given to those of that religious faith by the present Conservative administration.

IMPROVE YOUR COMPLEXION

Give Up Cosmetics And Seek The Cause of Your Bad Color.

When it's so easy to bring back the bloom of youth, to remove the blemishes and fill the hollows, isn't it foolish to plaster on cosmetics?

Sallowed skin and fallen in cheeks are produced by disorders of the alimentary canal.

Remove the cause—correct the condition that keeps you from looking as you ought. Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills and very soon you'll have a complexion to be proud of.

Just imagine how much happier you will feel when those pimples and murky look have gone.

Dainty looks came to Miss Vrooman, a well known resident of Belfast, from using Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I used to look so yellow I thought it might be jaundice. There was simply no color in my cheeks at all. Today my skin is clear and never gets that murky, dull appearance, it had before. Dr. Hamilton's Pills have also given me a good appetite and improved my general health also."

Not only the complexion, but every organ of the body is strengthened, cleansed and made healthy by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Buoyancy, vim and a feeling of vigor invariably follow their use. Sold in yellow boxes by all dealers; 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

IN THE VAN OF PROGRESS

Hats off to the Premier of Nova Scotia! says the Industrial World. And every success to his project for the establishment of technical schools! the Premiers of other Provinces have steadily avoided the subject for fear they might be regarded as faddists, Premier Murray by this one act has raised himself to the level of a statesman and has placed his own Province in the front rank of educational progress.

The system of technical education which his bill provides for is based on sound and comprehensive lines. When worked out in all its details it will place at the disposal of the young man in Nova Scotia facilities for industrial training, the equal of which can be found nowhere else on this side of the Atlantic.

In the smaller technical schools, to be established with a view to meeting the requirements of local population and local industries, working men can train themselves in the theoretical and scientific principles upon which their vocation in life is based, and acquire some familiarity with the most advanced practice of their trade in other parts of the world. The schools of mining which have already been in operation for some time furnish an excellent example of the success with which this system can be applied. In the higher school, of institute of engineering, instruction will be given those students desiring to qualify themselves for engineering professions, while at the same time research work will be carried on by a corps of scientific experts with a view to determining how best the raw materials supplied by the Province can be utilized in the manufacturing industries.

Such a policy cannot fail to give a tremendous impetus to industrial development, and if the other Provinces will only follow the lead of Nova Scotia, and resolve upon some concerted action in the matter of technical education, Canada can be made to forge ahead at a rate hitherto undreamed of. Will they do it?

"O, WHAT A ROW."

LONDON, April 20.—Hon. Mr. Brodeur, interviewed respecting the terms of the resolution for an Imperial Council, cabled by the Canadian Associated Press last night, admitted the cable was "not altogether incorrect." It is stated Lord Elgin submitted the resolution at the meeting of the Cabinet today. The final draft will be decided by the Premiers today.

Sir Arthur Biggs, a prominent Liberal, speaking to the Canadian Associated Press, said: "What a row there could be if, at any Liberal convention, our guests dined seated on a carpet made in the form of a faithful representation of the Union Jack, as did the guests dined by the 1900 Club last night."

Came to Toronto with Two Girls

Toronto, April 20.—At two o'clock this morning Frederick W. Miller and Jenny Johnston were rudely awakened by Detective Mackie and Sheriff Williams of Batavia, N.Y., on a house in Adelaide street, and taken into custody.

Miller, who is but 22 years of age, left a wife and two children in Batavia and came to Toronto with the Johnston girl and one named Lillian Putney, who is but 16 years of age. Miller is wanted in Batavia on a charge of forgery and rape.

Miller come before Judge Winchester this morning and consented to return without extradition proceedings. The two girls were taken into custody, and with Miller left on the noon train.

THE SHORT NOSES.

Something to Be Said in Favor of Those Who Wear Them.

"Physiognomists tell us that the big nosed people do the world's work," said a short nosed man the other day, "and they generally add a lot of rubbish about Napoleon's big nose and how he always selected big nosed men to carry out daring undertakings.

"That Napoleon story was invented by some one with a nose like Cyrano de Bergerac, who wanted an excuse for his proboscis and therefore pretended that his nose was but the introduction to a massive, imposing character. It is true that a big nose is sometimes indicative of firmness and determination, but only when it is associated with a strong jaw and long chin. A big nose with a retiring chin is almost idiotic in the expression it gives to the countenance. Every cartoonist knows this. Whenever you see a cartoon of a society dude it shows a long nose and a small chin.

"But there is something to be said in favor of the short noses. The short nose shows wit, imagination, tact, judgment, discretion. Socrates had a snub nose, and of the lively imaginative writers in almost any language a considerable proportion was short nosed people. Long nosed men may do their share of the world's work, but the short noses write the clever books and the entertaining plays. If Shakespeare had had a nose like the Duke of Wellington, do you ever suppose that he would have written the "Merry Wives of Windsor?" He might have been a successful theater manager, but would never have become a literary artist.

POLITICAL SPIES.

They Are Quite Common All Over the Continent of Europe.

On the continent of Europe it is quite a common thing for royal personages to be subjected to espionage, mainly, of course, for political reasons.

In France, Spain, Russia, Germany and Austria the practice obtains. At one time during the reign of Napoleon III. a small army of political spies was engaged in watching royal subjects. In fact, the vigilance of the different parties was so great that there were three or four distinct secret services. The emperor had his; the empress had hers; the government and the republicans respectively had theirs—all employed to watch the other parties and their spies.

Moreover, Bismarck had his spy over the emperor. So that France was overridden by spies, the most important, however, being Bismarck's, to whom the war was indeed to a great extent due.

This secret service agent was a German doctor, whose advice the unfortunate emperor even preferred to that of his own court physicians, and thus Bismarck knew even better than Napoleon the real state of the latter's health, which was, of course, a very important factor in the political situation of those times.

He Could Run.

He could run, all right, all right. Richard-do. Talk about your amateurs that ought to run or starve, as a boy, an' he-dummy-forgot how. Why, say, when he-dum-himself loose from a vicinity it seemed like the whole landscape was crippled. I used to try him out by givin' him a start an' shootin' at him. If he-dum the bullet, we figgered he was up to form, but if the lead overtook him we'd call it an off day an' unload the cartridges. I've seen him scare a jack rabbit up till it was workin' under forced drafts, then limp up to it from behind an' kind of yawn an' stretch, an' then goad it to wake up or else get off the trail an' let somebody run that knowed how.

Oh, Yes, of Course.

Of the many children and women in Nazareth, Palestine, who have picked up a little English all have a way of saying "of course" instead of a simple "yes." The expression which French people catch up as characteristic of the American and Englishman is always "Oh, yes!" A correspondent, who has cycled down the Rhone valley, about Provence and along the Riviera, found himself greeted with "Oh, yes!" by the children in the streets of nearly every town. And he discovered when his attention had been called to the point in this way that "Oh, yes!" was really what he and his companions were always saying.

"GET RICH QUICK" PROPOSITIONS

Nevada mines exploited by promoters, using full page advertisements in the eastern newspapers, owning as a protection claims adjoining good mines, and using the money themselves obtained from these advertisements instead of developing their properties, have created a feeling of distrust. Gradually the good mines have overcome this, and now conservative Eastern buyers include good Nevada properties in their securities.

It is not generally understood why a good mine needs money and should not pay dividends from the start, but it is necessary to open up and prove same, install machinery for the successful working of the ore, before it is on a paying basis.

This accomplished, the stock jumps, even to 1000 per cent., if it is for sale at any price.

We have a good mine, with ore assaying up to $13,000.00. We want money to put in machinery. We can tell you of a bootblack investing one year ago $200.00, and now selling for $42,000.00; of a barber investing $150.00, and selling in eight months for $38,000.00. While these are exceptions, the failures of mines are less than one-half those of banks and only five per cent. of those of mercantile failures.

We want you to write us and we will tell you all about it, also name shareholders near you. Shares are for sale now at 25c. (par value $1.00), but the price will be advanced to 50c. in the near future. Silver Queen Mining Co., 84 Bacon Bldg., Oakland, Calif. Mines in the "Wonder District," Nevada.

An Ohio Corporation of $500,000. - Shares $10 Each

BY THE PEOPLE — FOR THE PEOPLE

This Institution saves for the consumer what otherwise becomes the profit of the individual.

$10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER. $10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER.

Our Preferred Stock Bears

7 per cent. guaranteed cumulative dividends and shares in addition to the 7 per cent. in the whole profits of the institution.

Unlimited Dividends

Can be earned in department store investments. A department store near here paid over 50 per cent. in dividends to its investors last year.

Department Store Investments are Good

Because department store merchandising is a very conservative and profitable business.

Our Department Store Investment is the Best

Because our thousands of shareholders will do as owners do and have always done: "talk the business," "boom the business," "advertise the business," and influence their friends and relatives to trade at their own store. This will place our business on a self productive basis immediately. They certainly will do this because they have always done so under the same identical conditions.

A 5% Discount from Regular Prices will be Allowed Shareholders

in this institution being in itself a very attractive interest to investors in this Company.

A Great Mail Order Department

Will be our accommodation for out of town shareholders and patrons.

Our Business Location is Ideal

For local business, located in the heart of the West Side business center it is immediately surrounded by a West Side purchasing clientage of 200,000 people and commands the approach of as many more East Side residents and the vast urban population that comes cityward for their supplies.

So in this enterprise we are combining the features that have made

Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago, Ill.,

each in themselves tremendously successful, having each made millions of dollars for their stockholders.

Limitation of Subscription

There will be no individual control in this Company. We prefer to sell no more than 100 shares to any individual desiring an investment with us, as we desire to obtain the widest possible distribution of our shares.

How the Shareholder is Safeguarded in Every Way

When you secure a certificate of stock you own a valuable piece of property, representing as it does an investment that will secure for you a constant income, aside from the many other advantages to be enjoyed as a shareholder. Note the binding obligations of the Company to those that invest.

Your stock if preferred is guaranteed seven per cent.

Your shares are full paid and non-assessable.

Your dividends are cumulative and participating.

Every dollar received by the Company for stock is going right into the business for active service. You have vote and voice in the management of the business. When we say your stock is preferred, we mean that it is guaranteed seven per cent. per annum, before the common stock can be paid one penny. The preferred stock has absolutely the first claim—in effect, a first mortgage on all assets of the Company—the property—the property rights, trade marks, trade rights, etc., and on the net profits of the business.

The following Officers and Directors of this Company, constituted wholly of Cleveland and Ohio men of undoubted integrity and business qualifications, will best bespeak our policy and our substantiability:

OFFICERS:

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assassays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

"Respectfully submitted,

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by HARPER & BROTHERS

He added the last two words by way of apology for having banged a very solid fist on the table.

Joseph rubbed his hands slowly together and departed, leaving his master to begin a long letter to Guy Oscard.

And at the other end of the passage, in her room with the door locked, Jocelyn Gordon was sobbing in a wild burst of grief because she had probably saved the life of Jack Meredith, and in doing so had only succeeded in sending him away from her.

When Jack Meredith said that there was not another man in Africa who could make his way from Loango to the simiacine plateau he spoke no more than the truth. There were only four men in all the world who knew the way, and two of them were isolated on the summit of a lost mountain in the interior. Meredith himself was unfit for the journey. There remained Joseph.

In coming down to Loango Joseph had had the recently made track of Oscard's rescuing party to guide him day by day. He knew that this was now completely overgrown. The simiacine plateau was once more lost to all human knowledge.

And up there, alone amid the clouds, Guy Oscard was, as he himself tersely put it, "sticking to it." He had stuck to it to such good effect that the supply of fresh young simiacine was daily increasing in bulk. Again Victor Durnovo seemed to have regained his better self. He was like a full blooded horse—tractable enough if kept hard at work. He was a different man up on the plateau from what he was down at Loango. There are some men who deteriorate in the wilds, while others are better, stronger, finer creatures away from the luxury of civilization and the softening influence of female society. Of these latter was Victor Durnovo.

Of one thing Guy Oscard soon became aware—namely, that no one could make the men work as could Durnovo. He had merely to walk to the door of his tent to make every picker on the little plateau bend over his tree with renewed attention. And while above all was eagerness and hurry, below, in the valley, this man's name insured peace.

The trees were now beginning to show the good result of pruning and a regular irrigation. Never had the leaves been so vigorous, never had the simiacine trees borne such a bushy, luxuriant growth since the dim, dark days of the flood.

Oscard relapsed into his old hunting ways. Day after day he tranquilly shouldered his rifle, and, alone or followed by one attendant only, he disappeared into the forest only to emerge therefrom at sunset. What he saw, there he never spoke of. Sure it was that he must have seen strange things, for no prying white man had set foot in these wilds before him; no book has ever been written of that country that lies around the simiacine plateau.

Oscard was thinking of Millicent Chyne one misty morning while he walked slowly backward and forward before his tent. His knowledge of the country told him that the mist was nothing but the night's accumulation of moisture round the summit of the mountain, that down in the valleys it was clear and that half an hour's sunshine would disperse all. He was waiting for this result when he heard a rifle shot far away in the haze beneath him and he knew that it was Joseph, probably making one of those marvelous long shots of his which roused a sudden sigh of envy in the heart of this mighty hunter whenever he witnessed them.

Oscard immediately went to his tent and came out with his short barreled, evil looking rifle on his arm. He fired both barrels in quick succession and waited, standing gravely on the edge of the plateau. After a short silence two answering reports rose through the mist to his straining ears.

"It isn't good enough. That's what I say, sir, with respects."

He turned and found Victor Durnovo standing at his side.

"What is that?" asked the half breed.

"It must be Joseph," answered Guy, "or Meredith. It can be nobody else."

"Let us hope that it is Meredith," said Durnovo, with a forced laugh, "but I doubt it."

Oscard looked down in his sallow, perverted face. He was not quick at such things, but at that moment he felt strangely certain that Victor Durnovo was hoping that Meredith was dead.

"I hope it isn't," he answered, and without another word he strode away down the little pathway from the summit into the clouds, loading his rifle as he went.

Durnovo and his men, working among the simiacine bushes, heard from time to time a signal shot as the two Englishmen groped their way toward each other through the everlasting night of the African forest.

It was midday before the newcomers were espied making their way painfully up the slope, and Joseph's welcome was not so much in Durnovo's handshake, in Guy Oscard's silent approval, as in the row of grinning, good natured black faces behind Durnovo's back.

Joseph's arrival with ten new men seemed to give a fresh zest to the work, and the carefully packed cases of simiacine began to fill Oscard's tent to some inconvenience. Thus things went on for two tranquil weeks.

"First," Oscard had said, "let us get the crop in, and then we can arrange what is to be done about the future."

So the crop received due attention, but the two leaders of the men—he who led by fear and he who commanded by love—were watching each other.

[To be continued]

An Easier Trip.

"The president of this road," remarked the man in the corner of the smoking compartment, "is one of those old fashioned railroaders. He began as a brakeman. Instead of riding over the line in a private car to inspect it, he walks over it." "I don't blame him," declared the man who was making his first trip on the road.—Cleveland Press.

A Lasting Impression.

"Well, Bertha, I hear you met Mr. Cooke yesterday. Did you like him?"

"Do you know, dear, he made an impression upon me that nothing will obliterate."

"Really! How—what did he say?"

"It wasn't what he said; it was what he did. He spilled a cup of tea over my new white silk dress."

Succeeded.

His Business.

"My husband," she sighed, "is up there, but he is looking down. Perhaps he sees all that we do."

"How long has he been dead, ma'am?" we inquired gently.

With a frown, she answered:

"Dead? He isn't dead. He's an aeronaut."—Exchange.

Suspicious Signs.

"How come?"

Catarrh

To prove unquestionably, and beyond any doubt, that Catarrh of the nose and throat can be cured, I am furnishing patients through druggists, small free Trial Boxes of Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure. I do this because I am so certain, that Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure will bring actual substantial help. Nothing certainly, is so convincing as a physical test of any article of real, genuine merit. But that article must possess true merit, else the test will condemn, rather than advance it. Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure is a snow white, healing antiseptic balm, put up in beautiful nickel capped glass jars at 50c. Such soothing agents as Oil Eucalyptus, Thymol, Menthol, etc., are incorporated into a velvety, cream like Petrolatum, imported by Dr. Shoop from Europe. If Catarrh of the nose and throat has extended to the stomach, then by all means also use internally, Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Stomach distress, a lack of general strength, bloating, belching, biliousness, bad taste, etc. surely call for Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

For uncomplicated catarrh only of the nose and throat nothing else, however, need be used but

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

Mining operations will be commenced just as soon as weather conditions permit.

Gold in Thunder Bay District

THE
DOUGLAS MINING COMPANY, LIMITED

Has secured after careful prospecting by mining experts six claims (240 acres) in the Eastern Section of The Sturgeon Lake Goldfields in the Thunder Bay District, and invite subscription for 50,000 shares of par value $1.00. As a result of last summer's work numerous veins of rich ore were uncovered, assaying from $10 up to $5000. There is every indication that this property will prove sensationally rich, and with the low capitalization of $500,000, $150,000 of which is in the Treasury, the dividends should be large, and the stock become very valuable. This is a thorough business mining proposition, and will stand the most critical examination. As there are only a limited number of shares offered, intending subscribers should send in their orders without delay.

Treasury Stock at 80 cents per share

Sure Cure for Sciatica.

Sciatica is really inflammation of the sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body.

This painful inflammation is the product of a run-down condition, and in every case you may be sure the nerves are worn down fine.

The pain is the cry of the nerves for more food—for richer, redder blood.

Rubbing on a greasy liniment can't help very much—you must treat the blood and rebuild the nervous system.

This can be promptly done with Ferrozone.

No builder of nerve force is more powerful.

No tonic so quickly fortifies the muscular system, imparts such strength, such endurance and vigor.

Any traces of Uric Acid and rheumatic poison are quickly driven out by Ferrozone. The powered condition of the system is changed into a reserve of vigor that defies further attacks of Sciatic.

Marvellous in its preconstructive and rebuilding power, quick to give relief, absolutely sure to cure,—where can you find a better treatment than Ferrozone? Sold by all druggists in 50c. boxes; try Ferrozone.

Market Peddler Does Good Trade

On Saturday Mr. Geo. Lewis attracted large crowds on the market square as he demonstrated the virtues of a really wonderful quartz sharpening stone. The stones sold by this gentleman are wonderful. Mr. Lewis would take a knife or scissors, blunt the same on a horse shoe, and Hey Presto! with a rub or two on one of his sharpening stones, the blunted blade would slice thin paper. On Saturday Mr. Lewis disposed of between 600 and 700 at 25c each including another tool.

Attractions for Our Fall Fair

Arrangements have been made with a New York syndicate for amusements for this fall's Peterborough Industrial Fair. A contract has been signed for the appearance here of a line of attractions which Mr. Leary believes will please the patrons. A troupe of trained dogs, one of which makes a high leap of fifteen feet, George and Georgie, who perform many marvellous acrobatic feats, and a lady contortionist are among the features which those who attend the fair this year will have an opportunity of seeing before the grandstand.

It is evidently the determination of the management to make the fair as attractive as possible.

Steamer Monarch Reaches the City

This season's navigation is now open. The steamer Monarch of Gore's Landing, Capt. Harris, arrived Saturday morning at the railway wharf, on her first trip this year. The Monarch left Gore's Landing at half-six in the morning and was unable to get into Harwood on account of ice. The trip up was unusually slow on account of the very swift current. The boat arrived at 10.30, but she must have gone down a great deal faster.

On board the Monarch were between 35 and 40 passengers. Next Saturday, Capt. Harris expects to get his boat right up to the Wolfe street wharf.

Port Hope Brewery on Its Feet Again

President Alex. Elliott, of Peterborough, occupied the chair at a meeting of the Port Hope Brewing Company, when the bank made a proposition to the company to accept $20,000, and take a mortgage for $37,000 in full for their claim.

Three offers for the purchase of the plant have been received, and all are much larger than the amount of the Company's indebtedness. A deputation will wait upon the bank and endeavor to receive a better proposition than the one offered, and we understand in good authority that the plant will be in running order this week.

Fined for Child's Misconduct

At Saturday's police court, Truant Officer Geo. Cochrane, charged Geo. Windover and Mrs. Windover with not sending their son William, between 8 and 14 years of ages, to school. Windover when asked by the magistrate, "Have you not got a strap?" replied, "Yes, but I cannot get him to go, if I strap him, he goes to bed and stays there." The magistrate fined Windover $5 to be paid in ten days. His worship told the defendant, "We are not going to have the child a burden on the community. If the boy is bad it is you who have made him so. Take a strap, cut it into little straps and apply it where it will do him the most good and the least permanent harm possibly."

Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nervine. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeons' knife, would, it is believed, seldom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

City Stand Pipes Frozen

It seems that Jack Frost had a quiet smile on Saturday, when he saw the water waggon drivers attempt to fill their carts from the stand pipes, as they had done a fortnight ago. These pipes were all frozen. The Board of Works we understand will this spring have things changed. The water commissioners will be required to provide turn-offs at each standpipe, so that freezing will be prevented.

Farm Laborers are Scarce

Mr. Geo. Howson, local immigration agent, has said that there is a marked scarcity of farm laborers in this county. He thinks that a good percentage of the immigrants who weekly pass Peterborough to seek places on farms in the far west, could get positions right in this county at as good wages comparatively, taking the whole 12 months of the year into consideration as they are paid in the West. Why cannot Peterborough city fathers or the county councillors take steps to secure a good number of these immigrants for our home needs?

Hiawatha Cobalt Silver Mining Co., Ltd. CAPITAL, $1,000,000

The property of the Company is in the centre of one of the richest and most promising ore areas in the whole of the famous Cobalt Camp, and adjoins some of the best shipping mines.

Mr. E. C. Kingswell, consulting engineer for the Red Rock Mine, Temiscaming, and other properties, writing under date the 22nd February, says: "Good Silver float was found upon this claim by trenching and the lead of Calcite and Quartz was trenched for a thousand feet and assayed up to forty dollars in Silver. The rock upon the claim is beautifully stratified and no doubt the ledges go down to an indefinite depth. * * * Altogether I believe there are five veins exposed upon this claim. I saw three, and I have no doubt there are a dozen more undiscovered. * * * I have been in this camp for eighteen months and have mined all over the Southern Hemisphere for twenty-one years, and during my term here I have prospected a dozen and I have every confidence in strongly recommending this claim as one of more than ordinary merit."

In another report upon the same property Mr. Kingswell points out that all the good ledges upon Red Rock lead directly into the Hiawatha property.

The Hiawatha Company is now carring on development work on veins already exposed. There can be no reasonable doubt that the claim itself will be one of the very valuable properties in that part of the camp in which it is situated.

WEST PETERBOROUGH LICENSES SETTLED

All Present Licenses Renewed Except Proprietor of Royal Hotel Who Has Three Months to Sell Out---Mr. Pearson's Application at Hall's Glen Refused.

Last night the license commissioners of West Peterborough, Messrs. Dr. Morrison, Jas. Kendry and H. LeBrun, met in License Inspector Jos. Stewart's office, in the old Bradburn House block, to consider granting licenses or renewal of former licenses for the year beginning May 1st. prox.

After long deliberation very few changes were made in the city licenses, the only change made being that of Mr. James Kelly, proprietor of the Royal Hotel, who was given three months to dispose of his business. A new applicant for a license was Mr. Nantheniel Pearson of Hall's Glen in the township of Harvey. Mr. Pearson's hotel is situated just across the river from that of Mr. Tom Eastwood, the popular proprietor of the Buckhorn Hotel. As is generally known Mr. Eastwood's hotel is at present debarred from the possibility of a license, it being in a local option township, and that Mr. Eastwood strictly observes the law. Mr. Pearson's request was not granted. Of the houses outside the city all licenses were renewed. It seems that without some eighty signatures of men living within from one to ten miles distant from Mr. Pearson's place endorsed his application, letters were received by the license commissioners from prominent residents of that part of the county, saying that should a license be granted it would only mean so much more expense for the township to carry (an assumed but not, by its opponents an acknowledged certainty). In view of this fact the commissioners decided not to grant the license asked for.

STORE LICENSES.

The applications of Messrs. A. Rountree, Alex. Elliott, J. F. B. Mitchell and John Sullivan, for shop licenses, were all favorably considered and passed.

It might be mentioned that in the case of the Crown Hotel as the present proprietor, Mr. Jackson, is about to transfer his business, and incidentally the license to Mr. Clarke, formerly in the hatter and fur business on George street, the commissioners were not able, under existing circumstances to transfer the license until the present deal is fully consummated. This however looks like a simple desire on the part of the commissioners to transact business on business principles.

The matter of the bar tenders' licenses will be considered later on.

The children of the deceased are: Michael, city; David, Emsimonby; Joseph and Thomas, Chicago; William, New York, and Mrs. Devlin, Mrs. O'Brien, Chicago; Mrs. Owen Woods, Chicago; Mrs. Fraser, Trout Creek, and Miss Elizabeth, Peterborough.

The funeral will take place this morning, from the family residence, Hunter street, to St. Peter's cathedral, and thence to the Catholic cemetery.

Does Coffee disagree with you? Probably it does! Then try Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. "Health Coffee" is a clever combination of parched cereals and nuts. Not a grain of real Coffee, remember, in Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, yet its flavor and taste matches closely old Java and Mocha Coffee. If your stomach, heart, or kidneys can't stand Coffee drinking, try Health Coffee. It is wholesome, nourishing, and satisfying. It is nice even for the youngest child. Sold by J. D. Tully.

Lakefield Boys Had to Pay Court Expenses

County Magistrate Edmison went to Lakefield yesterday to conduct county police court. Five young of that village were accused of disturbing a public gathering there on April 9th, the occasion of a concert given by Mr. Gilbert Shorter and Miss Annie Adams.

The magistrate showed the boys to go after warning them not to repeat their offence, and make them pay all costs in the court.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Happenings Around the Local Police Station.

At the Police Court yesterday morning James Kelly, proprietor of the Hotel Royal, was charged with a break of the liquor license laws, i.e., with having permitted disturbances in his hotel; the charge was made for the blank day of April. Mr. McWilliams, who acted for Mr. Kelly, demanded that a specified day or specified days for such alleged disturbance should be set. The Magistrate thought that the information was too vague as to dates. The Chief claimed the act permitted him to go back thirty days, and that the information covered the thirty days back of the charge. The Magistrate noted Mr. McWilliam's objections.

A slight hitch in the court proceedings here took place. An officer was sent to the market square to stop a peddler running his graphaphone, as the noise interrupted the court proceedings.

The testimony of Frank "Cameron" the prisoner now in the County Jail for stabbing three men in the Royal hotel, was then heard.

Cameron said that on Wednesday last, the day of the stabbing, he and his friend went into the hotel. He did not have any drinks then, as there was a general fight on when he went in. He was not sober. He saw his friend, Joe Lenar, in the fight and went to his assistance. He, Cameron, was set on and beaten by several men, who threw him out the back door. He reentered by the front door to buy a few drinks and show that he was a good fellow "as far as he went." He tried to explain matters, but did not get a chance as they went at him again. He was hit on the face by a soda water, or beer, bottle. He drew his knife and threatened to cut the first man who came near him. He cut one man, who fell against the bar; he cut a second, but does not remember slashing the third man. He did not see the bartender, being "too busy." He claimed to have found next morning that he himself had been stabbed through the boot and his foot cut. Had been in the house Tuesday night. He had $1 when he went to the hotel, but did not have it when arrested.

To Mr. McWilliams: Was in no room but the bar, and was not asleep in the house. Could not recognize any of the men in the court as being in the fight, except the proprietor. He admitted having served a ten-year term in Kingston Penitentiary for attempted robbery.

The case was then enlarged until Thursday to enable Mr. McWilliams to get witnesses, etc. The Chief declined to state specified dates on which the charge of disorderly conduct were committed. The Magistrate endorsed the Chief's contention, and, provided Mr. McWilliams could show his authority for demanding the exact dates, would sustain his objection. The Magistrate thought if the Chief had his evidence to prove a case, he should specify the dates noted; this the Chief would not do unless compelled.

Delmas Explains Why He Left Thaw

New York, April 22.—That he had sent a letter to Harry Thaw's mother severing his connection with her son's case was asserted yesterday by Delphin M. Delmas. The lawyer said he had been implored by Thaw's relatives to remain on the case, but he had told them he would not under any circumstance. In his letter to Thaw's mother Delmas said he could not reconcile his dignity as an attorney with what Thaw demanded of a counsel. Thaw he said, was not as much in need of a lawyer as he was of a valet. The prisoner wanted his attorneys to be at his beck and call at all hours. To gratify an erratic defendant's whims did not conform to Delmas's views of the relations that should exist between an attorney and client.

Ice Interferes With Stony Lake Boats

It seems that natural conditions, the result of ice, not yet cut of some of the upper lakes is keeping the Stony Lake Navigation Co. steamers from attending to considerable towing this spring for the lumber companies. These steamers will begin work as soon as the ice in the upper lakes disappears. Their boats will tow down a considerable quantity for the McDonald Company, about 25,000 pieces for the McBurney Lumber Co. and about 45,000 pieces for the Peterborough Lumber Co.

The ice in Clear and Stony lakes is still several inches in thickness, and although it is melting from the shores, it will be some time before navigation will open north of Young's Point.

First Boat Through the Locks

Yesterday morning the "Floradora" gasoline yacht belonging to Mr. W. Flint, passed through the locks to the south of the city, with a party on the way to Keene, on a pleasure trip. She was the first boat to go through the locks this season. After passing through the lock she pulled in at Ryce's boat house to take on a canvass covering.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED

Kill the Germs by Breathing Hy-o-mei Gives Quick Relief.

Many people who have suffered with catarrh for years naturally feel that the disease cannot be cured, and become discouraged.

Their failure to get relief is due to the fact that they have not used the right remedy. Catarrh is an affection of the head, throat and lungs, and cannot be cured by stomach dosings.

The only scientific and natural treatment for this disease is Hy-o-mei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler, so that its healing medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells, kills all catarrh germs, and restores the mucous membrance of the nose, throat and lungs to a healthy condition.

We do not want anyone's money unless Hyomei gives relief and cure, and we absolutely agree that money will be refunded unless the remedy gives satisfaction.

All druggists should be able to supply you with Hyomei or we will send it by mail on receipt of price, $1.00, and every package is sold with the distinct understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures. Booth's Hyomei Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

CHINAMEN FOR WESTERN MINES

Winnipeg Business Men Want Government to Withdraw Restriction.

IF STRIKE IS DECLARED

Anything Preferable to Business Disorganization.

Winnipeg, Man., April 22.—At a meeting of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, attended by all the representative business men of the city, a strong sentiment was manifested in favor of asking the Dominion Government to withdraw the restriction on Asiatic labor entering the country and being utilized in the mines, in case the coal miners in Alberta and British Columbia carry out their expressed intention of ignoring the provisions of the Lemieux Conciliation Act. The supporters of this extreme action expressed themselves as opposed to Chinese labor on principle, but they considered anything would be preferable to business disorganization, and other calamities which would follow in the wake of a miners' strike at present time.

The matter will come up for discussion this evening, and unless in the meantime the miners are prevailed on to resume work pending settlement of the dispute a strongly worded resolution along the lines indicated will be wired to the Government and also to other Boards of Trade throughout the West, inviting them to co-operate in forcing the authorities to take the desired action.

An Interesting Event in Harvey Township

Bobcaygeon Independent says;

We had another glorious evening last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Bushie, when over thirty people came to have a dance. Ham. Freeman sawed off the music and kept it going till morning. Ham is a dandy and there is no relieving assistant needed when Ham is present. Albert St. Thomas, with his soft and mellow saxophone, called off the sets. Refreshments were served at 12, and Olive again distinguished himself as sandwich man. Mrs. Nelson St. Thomas and Mrs. Ed. St. Thomas assisted Mrs. Bushie with the refreshments which were very nice and much enjoyed. Mr. Bushie received a hearty vote of thanks for his kind hospitality and his energetic attention to his guests in seeing that their horses were given the best of attention. Everything went off fine and we are now expecting another in the near future at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Thomas.

Young Boy Suicides

JERSEY CITY, N.J., April 21. — Oscar Kearn, 15 years old, shot and killed himself last evening.

The boy was a member of the graduating class of the Guttenberg Grammar School, and yesterday was reprimanded by his teacher and afterwards expelled from the school by the principal. He was the treasurer of his class, made an accounting to his classmates, and after telling some of them that he would never see them again, went down the road and shot himself.

A Sarcastic Civic Exposure Frustrated

Three Members of the Board of Education Forgot a Simple Table.

Last night a Times man walking down George street, in an arithmetical state of mind, tried to remember that old time school table, which begins, 12 lines one inch; 12 inches one foot; 3 feet one yard; 5 1-2 yards one rod, pole or perch; but when it got to the number of acres, our representative's arithmetical memory ran short. With an uncontrollable smile of victory (sic) he saw looming up prominent member of the Board of Education. To this trainer of the way the youthful mind should be bent, our correspondent in parrott-like tones, after explaining the situation, began 12 lines one inch, etc., until he balked at 30 rods. This educationalist hummed and hawed and said, "Well that's just slipped my mind, you better go over and see George Morrow." Unfortunately Mr. Morrow had gone home. A few minutes later another of the Board was met. To him The Times man asked direct "Can you tell me how many acres there are to a mile or how many furlongs to a league?" This exponent of modern education at once said, "Wee let me see, the old table ran like this, 12 lines one inch; 12 inches one foot; 3 feet one yard, and er-er-erh, well, to tell the truth I forget the rest. In despair the newspaper man wended his way homeward to haunt one of his pupils school arithmetics through. At a corner of George street, by luck, he met still a third member of the Board, and asked, "Say for the Lord's sake, can you tell me how many feet, yards, rods or roods or any odd measure there are to the mile?" This last afflicted educationalist, stammingly, but in a paying way for our ignorance, replied, "Why don't you remember that old time tune, 12 inches 1 inch, 12 inches 1 foot, 5 feet one yard, 7 1-2 yards one rood——. Here we despaired our superior knowledge and corrected this exponent of how education as she stands to-night is administered here, but he, like our representative struck on the last two or three sessions of the table, we had to go home and get our 10-year-old niece to untangle the arithmetical tangle and thereby were too late to print for this issue a cooking sarcastic story or civic mismanagement of our streets.

Rockefeller to Give Missions a Huge Sum

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 23.—Rev. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the Broadway Baptist church, and a close friend of John D. Rockefeller, announced during a mission sermon that plans for a forthcoming princely gift by Rockefeller are almost complete. "I can say to you," said Rev. Mr. Jones, "that the greatest benefactor of the Baptist Church has about completed the arrangements for a gift of $50,000,000 for the education of the Chinese."

The Law Strikes With Iron Heel

KANSAS CITY, April 23.—Twelve years ago the post office of a small Oklahoma town was robbed. William Jannity had been seen about the place that night. He was arrested, charged with the crime and sent recently to five years in the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas. For three years Jannity was a model prisoner and his sentence was commuted for good behavior. With only eight more months between him and freedom, Jannity was walking in the yard of the prison one night. He saw a guard asleep. The temptation was too great. Past the guard he ran.

The next day Charles W. Anderson made his appearance in this city. He found a position in a restaurant. Some of the employees were more zealous than Anderson. For years he struggled on, leading an upright life and saving a little money. Then, seven years ago, he met the woman who was to be his wife. He was only 29 years old, and the girl was 19 years old. They were married about a year later and lived in a snug little home at 1117 Bluxom street, a devoted husband and wife.

To her his life had always been exemplary. She knew of nothing wrong. Then, three years ago, the baby came, which was a little girl. As the child grew up Anderson worked and the harder and saved more money. Finally he got enough money to start a restaurant of his own. The years passed with still the happiness in the little home. Business was good at the restaurant.

Yesterday he was recognized by Federal detectives, arrested and returned to the Government prison.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 23.—The British ship Barnstable, Captain Davidson, arrived here yesterday from Port Antonio, Jamaica, with a large hole in her port side and her stem twisted. She was run into at full speed yesterday morning by the steamer Old Point Comfort, which runs from Cape Charles City, Va., to Old Point, Va.

No one was injured on either vessel, and the Barnstable was able to proceed to Baltimore unassisted. Captain Davidson of the Barnstable, could not account for the collision.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER EXPLAINS HIS STAND

Says the Reason He Opposed an Imperial "Council" Was Because He Did Not Wish to Cause Trouble in Canada.

LONDON, April 23. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier, interviewed by the Canadian Associated Press, said, "It is well known my views were against an Imperial council. I was against it as I did not wish that resolutions might be passed over here that might cause trouble in Canada. For you know," said Sir Wilfrid, with a smile, "we have some firebrands in Canada—Bourassa, and others, if wanted an Imperial Civil Committee, to work under the supervision of the Colonial Office, so that in any dispute that might arise, we would have a responsible minister to deal with. I pointed to the difficulty we had in Canada when the war in South Africa broke out, when there was some misgivings on the part of French-Canadians, who were finally brought round. In New Zealand and Australia, where they have all one nationality, matters are made easier."

To the suggestion that the result of the present conference will only be that representatives from different parts of the Empire will become better acquainted, Sir Wilfrid replied that the fact that General Botha and Gen. Jameson, the two men who fought against each other, were members of the conference would tend greatly towards the confederation of South Africa.

SIR WILFRID IS RIGHT.

OTTAWA, April 23.—"Proof" says the Ottawa Free Press, "of the judicial attitude which Sir Wilfrid is assuming, is the manner in which he is being criticized and condemned by the press of the jingo imperialistic school in England. If he can satisfy neither the supremacists of the Hughes school in Canada nor those of the BORDEN WELL SATISFIED.

LONDON, April 23.—Sir Frederick Borden, who belongs to the Canadian press yesterday, expressed himself as well satisfied with the result of the discussion of the question of imperial defence at the conference. There was nothing whatever of an acrimonious nature during the discussion. Sir Frederick did not feel, at liberty, just at present, to say more.

CHAPTER OF TROUBLE.

LONDON, April 23.—A Sydney cable says Premier Deakin's attempt to get rid of cabinet office intervention is exciting keen interest. It is understood that history of the relations between the Colonial Office of the Australian colonies has been one long chapter of dissatisfaction.

FRENCH ARE JOYFUL.

MONTREAL, April 23.—La Presse of Montreal published the following in its Saturday edition;

"The despatches which follow were exchanged yesterday between the managing editor and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The reply of the Prime Minister will be welcomed with joy by all our population;

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hotel Cecil, London; All newspapers announce report there that you have accepted Imperial council. Kindly advise. (Signed) Thomas Cote."

The reply of the prime minister reads as follows: "No foundation for report. (Signed) Wilfrid Laurier."

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"The Royal Chef"

Fraze & Wade presented their glittering musical comedy, "The Royal Chef," to a mammoth audience at the Grand Opera House last night. The piece is brimming, pleasing, and replete with amusing incidents and brighty catchy singing. It is elaborately staged, the costumes being superb, and the company carrying a sufficiency of court beauties, pretty maids, soldiers and sailors, to give a charming effectiveness to the whole production. The chorus is strong in voice, and nimble and graceful in their many evolutions and dances.

Harry Hermsen in the chief role of Lemphanuser, who is made royal chef to the Rajah of Oolong, is irresistibly funny. He takes full advantages of the many opportunities the piece affords him to indulge in his natural witticisms and versatile comedy; he kept the house convulsed with laughter, and his vocal numbers, especially "In the Morning," were encored again and again.

The songs are of the kind that might be dubbed "whistleable." Herman's "It's a Way They Have in Chicago," and "Let Me Go Back," are among the favorites; also Elsie Frazee's "O'Reidy," and Gertrude Hutcheson's "What's the Matter with My Man in the Moon?" Every song calls for one or more returns, and the company are generous in responding.

Mr. Oscar Raphael has a splendid conception of the character "The Rajah of Oolong." He has an excellent and powerful voice, and his comedy with the "Royal Chef," is very acceptable.

The play closes with an effective tableau, but last night this was merely an anticlimax, the real climax coming when the whole house participated in a confetti shower. Hundreds of yards of colored paper was thrown in the form of streamers from stage to balcony, enwrapping the audience as they sought the exits.

"The Royal Chef" is indeed a glittering and pleasing musical offering, and affords a charming evening of mirthful fun. It is one of the best plays that has been at the Grand this season, and Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons are certainly securing the best companies tackling in the circuit.

Between the second and third acts, Mr. Lockman, a member of the company, sang in splendid voice "The Flower of Japan," an exceedingly pretty song written by Mrs. Croyland Yorkome, of this city.

Brockville Cheap Bread

Brockville, April 23.—The workingmen of Brockville have taken the initial steps towards organizing a co-operative company for the manufacture of bread, and prospects are bright that the scheme will go through.

The shares are fixed at $1 each, and sufficient money will be subscribed to instal a plant. It is proposed to sell the bread at 4 cents per 1 1-2 lb. loaf, which, it has been figured, will cover the cost of production and operating expenses. The bakers are selling the 1 1-2 lb. loaf for 6 cents.

Benedict Gimble Dead

NEW YORK, April 22. — Benedict Gimbel, the wealthy Philadelphia merchant, who cut his throat and wrist with broken glass in a hotel in Hoboken soon after he had been arrested on serious charges in this city, died in St. Mary's hospital, shortly before three o'clock yesterday morning. His wife was at his bedside, with his two brothers. In a statement the family notified the public that Benedict Gimbel had been ill for some weeks as the result of overwork and that this had undoubtedly dethroned his reason.

Are You Often Bilious?

Read This and Learn How to Prevent Attacks.

Biliousness is merely a term applied to a condition that exists when the body is over-loaded with bile.

The complexion turns yellow, eyes look dull, pimples, itching and eczema break out, headaches are ever present.

Biliousness has two great causes, constipation and defective liver action.

When Dr. Hamilton's Pills are taken they not only correct the bowels, but act directly on the liver, regulating its bile secretion.

Unlike ordinary medicines which purge and give temporary relief. Dr Hamilton's Pills remove the condition which causes biliousness; thus permanent cures are effected.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills do cure biliousness and liver ills under all circumstances.

We prove this by the statement of Mr. Fenwick Luddington, of New Harbor, N.S., who writes: "Three months ago I had no expectation of ever getting free from periodical bilious attacks. They were preceded by dizziness and dreadful headaches. If I stooped over my head would swim and a nauseous feeling crept into my stomach.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills fixed up my liver, drove all the bile out of my blood and made me a well man in a few months. Today I enjoy a good appetite, excellent digestion, and the best of health. Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today. Sold by all dealers; 25c per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn, U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

A STRONG, SAFE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Galt Reporter: For the past two or three years the people of this country have been forced in self defence to concern themselves with the business methods of our life insurance companies Public clamor finally led the Government to appoint a Commission to investigate their affairs and that body did its work thoroughly. The company that came out of the severe ordeal with flying colors was the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada, the head office of which is in the neighboring town of Waterloo. The investigators found nothing in its record calling for condemnation. Its affairs were shown to have been shaped by men who had not been led away by the speculative tendencies of the times. All its investments were made within the limits of the statutes governing the disposal of the surplus funds of life insurance companies. No side deals were exposed to lessen the confidence of the policyholders in the institution. In short, the facts brought out by the Commission at its sitting in Waterloo made for the elevation of the Mutual Life of Canada to a front position in our insurance world. It had stuck to its legitimate business in a legitimate manner.

The country owes the Mutual Life of Canada a debt of gratitude for presenting so clean a sheet; for steadying public opinion with regard to the operations of managements at a time when individuals in every community were scoffing at the methods of the companies and unsettling the public mind. Now that the annual meeting of the Company has been held and a statement laid before the policyholders that challenges their admiration we may expect a continuation of that prosperity which the Mutual Life of Canada has well earned; in the earning of which it has traversed only safe lines, much to the satisfaction of its thousands of grateful policyholders.

BURNING MARTYRS.

Cost of the Funeral Pyres Told in a Curious Old Bill.

A bill for the materials with which to burn Cranmer and his fellow martyrs is probably the most curious and suggestive document ever presented for payment. The execution of Latimer and Ridley took place on Oct. 16, 1555, while Cranmer did not suffer until March 21 of the following year.

The memorandum of the bill is included in the book which was found by Strype when he wrote his "Memoirs of Archbishop Cranmer" in 1693, in which the expenses of the martyrs were entered during their imprisonment. This book is probably somewhere among the manuscripts of Oxford university, now a grim, matter of fact witness to the fanatical hatred of the day.

The following are exact transcripts from the bills by the person who had charge of the funeral pyres:

"Paid for the burning of Archbishop Cranmer and his two fellow sufferers, Ridley and Latimer: For one hundred of wood fagots, 6s.; for one hundred and a half of furze fagots, 3s. 4d.; to the carriage of them, 8d.; to two laborers, 1s. 4d.; to three loads of wood fagots to burn Ridley and Latimer, 12s.; item, one load of furze fagots, 3s. 4d.; for carriage of these four loads, 2s.; item, a post, 1s. 4d.; item, for chains, 3s. 4d.; item, for staples, 6d.; item, for laborers, 4d."

REAL COUNTRY LIFE.

Why the American Farmer Grows Old Early in Life.

Any one who has lived on a farm does not need to be told the reason farmers grow old early, for he knows of the strain under which the American farmer lives during the five months of spring and summer. His workday is from 4 or 5 in the morning until 8 or 9 at night, including chores—fifteen to seventeen hours of the hardest kind of physical labor, and every minute of it at high tension, especially during harvest. Then comes a period of relaxation in the fall, the one time in the year when he has just enough muscular exercise to keep him in health; later, the winter season, approaching stagnation, in which he takes on flesh, gets "logy," and then a furious debauch of hard labor through the spring and summer again. No wonder that by forty-five he has had a sunstroke and "can't stand the heat," or has "a weak back," or his "heart gives out," or a chill "makes him rheumatic," and when you add to this furious muscular strain the fact that the farmer sees his income put in peril every season and his very home every bad year, so that each unfavorable change in the weather sets his nerves on edge, it can be readily imagined that the real "quiet, peaceful country life" is something sadly different from the ideal.—Woods Hutchinson, M. D., in Harper's.

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Sold by J. D. Tully.

An Optical Illusion.

An interesting optical experiment may be made with the ordinary incandescent light. Gaze steadily at the light for a few seconds, then suddenly extinguish it. The experiment is best performed in a very dark room. In about half a minute you will see the perfect image of the light, with the fine strands of wire plainly visible. It will be red at first. In a few minutes it will turn purple and then a bright blue. Later it will apparently move to the right. As you turn your gaze it will continue moving to the right. If you keep your gaze fixed, it will come back. It is surprising how long the illusion will last. It will be seen for fully five minutes, perhaps longer, and if you turn on the light and look away from it you will see the old image for several minutes, though more faintly than in the darkness.

Only Slight Mistakes.

Mrs. Lombard is a zealous and loyal friend, and she means withal to avoid exaggeration. "It's perfectly wonderful to see the way Cousin Henry counts bills at the bank," she said to a patient friend. "Why, I think they are so lucky to have him! He'll take a great pile of five and ten and twenty dollar bills and make his fingers fly just like lightning and never make a mistake!"

"Never?" said the friend, who knew Mrs. Lombard's weakness and could not forbear the question.

"Why—no—at least—why, perhaps he might get 5 or 10 cents out of the way, but not any more, ever." And Mrs. Lombard spoke with the air of one who has taken a stand and refuses all chances to retreat.

The Union Department Stores Company

Invites the tradesman, mechanic, merchant, professional, craftsman and farmer to become shareholders and co-operating profit sharers in the very profitable and up-to-date business of conducting

A Great Co-Operative Department Store and Mail Order Institution

In the City of Cleveland

An Ohio Corporation of $500,000. - Shares $10 Each

BY THE PEOPLE — FOR THE PEOPLE

This Institution saves for the consumer what otherwise becomes the profit of the individual.

$10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER. $10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER.

Our Preferred Stock Bears

7 per cent. guaranteed cumulative dividends and shares in addition to the 7 per cent. in the whole profits of the institution.

Unlimited Dividends

Can be earned in department store investments. A department store near here paid over 60 per cent. in dividends to its investors last year.

Department Store Investments are Good

Because department store merchandising is a very conservative and profitable business.

Our Department Store Investment is the Best

Because our thousands of shareholders will do as owners do and have always done: "talk the business," "boom the business," "advertise the business," and influence their friends and relatives to trade at their own store. This will place our business on a self productive basis immediately. They certainly will do this because they have always done so under the same indentical conditions.

A 5% Discount from Regular Prices will be Allowed Shareholders

in this institution being in itself a very attractive interest to investors in this Company.

A Great Mail Order Department

Will be our accommodation for out of town shareholders and patrons.

Our Business Location is Ideal

For local business, located in the heart of the West Side business center it is immediately surrounded by a West Side purchasing clientage of 200,000 people and commands the approach of as many more East Side residents and the vast urban population that comes cityward for their supplies.

So in this enterprise we are combining the features that have made John Wanamaker, Philadelphia and New York City Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, Ill., Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, Ill., and Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago, Ill., each in themselves tremendously successful, having each made millions of dollars for their stockholders.

Limitation of Subscription

There will be no individual control in this Company. We prefer to sell no more than 100 shares to any individual desiring an investment with us, as we desire to obtain the widest possible distribution of our shares.

How the Shareholder is Safeguarded in Every Way

When you secure a certificate of stock you own a valuable piece of property, representing as it does an investment that will secure for you a constant income, aside from the many other advantages to be enjoyed as a shareholder. Note the binding obligations of the Company to those that invest.

Your stock if preferred is guaranteed seven per cent.

Your shares are full paid and non-assessable.

Your dividends are cumulative and participating.

Every dollar received by the Company for stock is going right into the business for active service. You have vote and voice in the management of the business. When we say your stock is preferred, we mean that it is guaranteed seven per cent. per annum, before the common stock can be paid one penny. The preferred stock has absolutely the first claim—in effect a first mortgage on all assets of the Company—the property—the property rights, trade marks, trade rights, etc., and on the net profits of the business.

The following Officers and Directors of this Company, constituted wholly of Cleveland and Ohio men of undoubted integrity and business qualifications, will best bespeak our policy and our substantiability.

Manhattan Gold Field

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assassays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

"Respectfully submitted,

"Go on," said Oscard to him.

"Where's the wages you and Mr. Meredith has paid him for those forty men?" pursued Joseph. "Where's the advance you made him for those men at Msala? Not one ha'penny of it have they fingered. And why? Cos they're slaves! Fifteen months at £50—let them as can reckon tot it up for theirselves. That's his first swindle—and there's others, sir! Oh, there's more behind. That man's just a hotbed o' crime. But this 'ere slave owning is enough to settle his hash, I take it."

"Let us have these men here; we will hear what they have to say," said Oscard in the same dull tone that frightened Victor Durnovo.

"Not you!" he went on, laying his hand on Durnovo's shoulder again; "Joseph will fetch them, thank you."

One evening when the work was done Oscard's meditations were disturbed by the sound of angry voices behind the native camp. He turned naturally toward Durnovo's tent, and saw that he was absent. The voices rose and fell; there was a singular accompanying roar of sound which Oscard never remembered having heard before. It was the protesting voice of a mass of men—and there is no sound like it—none so disquieting. Oscard listened attentively and suddenly he was thrown upon his feet by a pistol shot.

He shook him as a terrier shakes a rat.

At the same moment Joseph emerged from behind the tents, dragging some one by the collar. The victim of Joseph's violence was off his feet, but still struggling and kicking.

Guy Oscard saw the flash of a second shot, apparently within a few inches of Joseph's face, but he came on, dragging the man with him, whom from his clothing Oscard saw to be Durnovo.

Joseph was spitting out wadding and burned powder.

"Shoot me, would yer, yer skulking chocolate bird? I'll teach you! I'll twist that brown neck of yours."

He shook him as a terrier shakes a rat, and seemed to shake things off him—among others a revolver which described a circle in the air and fell heavily on the ground, where the concussion discharged a cartridge.

"'Ere, sir," cried Joseph, literally throwing Durnovo down on the ground at Oscard's feet, "that man has just shot one o' them poor niggers, so 'elp me God!"

Durnovo rose slowly to his feet, as if the shaking had disturbed his faculties.

"Oh, don't make a fool of yourself," he said in a hissing voice; "you don't understand these natives at all. The man raised his hand to me. He would have killed me if he had had the chance. Shooting was the only thing left to do. You can only hold these men by fear. They expect it."

"Of course they expect it," shouted Joseph in his face; "of course they expect it, Mr. Durnovo."

"Why?"

"Because they're slaves. Think I don't know that?"

He turned to Oscard.

"This man, Mr. Oscard," he said, "is a slave owner. Them forty that joined at Msala was slaves. He's shot two of 'em now; this is his second. And what does he care? They're his slaves. Oh, shame on yer!" turning again to Durnovo. I wonder God lets yer stand there. I can only think that he doesn't want to dirty his hand by strikin' yer down."

Oscard had taken his pipe from his lips. He looked bigger, somehow, than ever. His brown face was turning to an ashen color and there was a dull, steel-like gleam in his blue eyes. The terrible, slow kindling anger of this northerner made Durnovo catch his breath. It was so different from the sudden passion of his own countrymen.

"Is this true?" he asked.

"It's a lie, of course," answered Durnovo, with a shrug of the shoulders. He moved away as if he were going to his tent, but Oscard's arm reached out. His large brown hand fell heavily on the half breed's shoulder.

"Stay," he said; "we are going to get to the bottom of this."

"Good," muttered Joseph, rubbing his hands slowly together; "this is glorious."

So the forty—or the thirty-seven survivors, for one had died on the journey up and two had been murdered—were brought. They were peaceful, timorous men, whose manhood seemed to have been crushed out of them; and slowly, word by word, their grim story was got out of them. Joseph knew a little of their language, and one of the headfighting men knew a little more and spoke a dialect known to Oscard. They were slaves, they said at once, but only on Oscard's promise that Durnovo should not be allowed to shoot them. They had been brought from the north by a victorious chief who in turn had handed them over to Victor Durnovo in payment of an outstanding debt for ammunition supplied.

"I leave this place at sunrise tomorrow," said Guy Oscard to them all. "I never want to see it again. I will not touch one penny of the money that has been made. I speak for Mr. Meredith and myself"—

"Likewise me," put in Joseph.

"I speak as Mr. Meredith himself would have spoken. There is the simiacine. You can have it. I won't touch it. And now who is going with me—who leaves with me tomorrow morning?"

He moved away from Durnovo.

"And who stays with me," cried the half breed, "to share and share alike in the simiacine?"

[To be continued]

"GET RICH QUICK" PROPOSITIONS

Nevada mines exploited by promoters, using full page advertisements in the eastern newspapers, owning as a protection claims adjoining good mines, and using the money themselves obtained from these advertisements instead of developing their properties, have created a feeling of distrust. Gradually the good mines have overcome this, and now conservative Eastern buyers include good Nevada properties in their securities.

It is not generally understood why a good mine needs money and should not pay dividends from the start, but it is necessary to open up and prove same, install machinery for the successful working of the ore, before it is on a paying basis.

This accomplished, the stock jumps, even to 1000 per cent., if it is for sale at any price.

We have a good mine, with ore assaying up to $13,000.00. We want money to put in machinery. We can tell you of a bootblack investing one year ago $200.00, and now selling for $42,000.00; of a barber investing $150.00, and selling in eight months for $38,000.00. While these are exceptions, the failures of mines are less than one-half those of banks and only five per cent. of those of mercantile failures.

We want you to write us and we will tell you all about it, also name shareholders near you. Shares are for sale now at 25c. (par value $1.00), but the price will be advanced to 50c. in the near future. Silver Queen Mining Co., 84 Bacon Bldg., Oakland, Calif. Mines in the "Wonder District," Nevada.

Tenderers should state the amount they are willing to pay in cash for this island, and an accepted cheque, or cash, for ten per cent. of the amount tendered should accompany each tender, which the successful tenderer, in the event of failure to complete the purchase within one month from the date of the award, shall forfeit to the Department.

The highest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted, and the unauthorized insertion of this advertisement in any newspaper will not be paid for.

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

Mining operations will be commenced just as soon as weather conditions permit.

par value $1.00. As a result of last summer's work numerous veins of rich ore were uncovered, assaying from $10 up to $5000. There is every indication that this property will prove sensationally rich, and with the low capitalization of $500,000, $150,000 of which is in the Treasury, the dividends should be large, and the stock become very valuable. This is a thorough business mining proposition, and will stand the most critical examination. The Engineering Magazine

In The Engineering Magazine for May, Lewis Nixon announces that the gas engine is already adopted for heavy marine service. Ten torpedo boats of 8-tons displacement and 26-knots speed have been built, and one of them has been run across the Atlantic in winter gales. Designs are complete for a destroyer of 620 tons and 12,000 horse power, and for a scout ship of 1,800 tons and 30,000 horse power, with an endurance of 2,000 miles at 30 knots. In space and on weight of 15,000 horse power as installed on a modern liner could be placed 100,000 horse power in gas engines, with a crude-oil gas producer, the consumption being 750 tons of oil a day. And the argument for the progress in the great commercial economy and the relief of the engine-room force from the present "pitiable conditions which have long been looked upon as necessary evils." In view of these certainties, Admiral Evans' impossible plan for saving all the American anthracite for naval use loses even its curious interest. F. B. Warren describes the methods of the Pennsylvania Railroad in training men for its service at Altoona. H. Cole Estep gives a new and startling insight into the attitude of the technical student toward the apprenticeship courses offered by the large engineering manufacturers. H. von Schon explains the commercial development of a water-power project. J. B. van Brussel presents an illustrated account of the electrification of the Simplon Tunnel railway. R. P. Bolton concludes his discussion of superheated steam, adding a bibliography of the subject. H. L. Whittemore outlines a theory or system of stores operation for machine shops, and C. E. Knoeppel offers a plan for organizing and operating a "department of cost reduction." The number carries also the Review of the Engineering Press of the world, and the complete Engineering Index to the current literature of the month.

Mr. John Mervin is Again Burglarized

It seems that the festive burglar either has a spite against Mr. John Mervin, the Hunter street meat market man, or takes him for an easy mark.

For the second time within a week the till in his shop was broken into Sunday night and about $8 in change taken. There is a strong suspicion that the burglar is a youth who knows the run of the building pretty well.

P. C. Adams on Sunday night was notified of the affair, but the burglar had got the stuff before Adams arrived, although the constable went immediately he was informed of suspicious conditions there.

Wants Place to Suicide

Yesterday Chief of Police Rowel received a letter from a man, who said that he had been walking around the streets for the last twenty years trying to keep himself decently dressed, but that he was discouraged; and asked the chief if he could tell him of a nice quiet spot, where he could hang himself. He was tired of living, and wanted to end his life. The chief may possibly recommend the applicant to place his feet in mustard and hot water, and his head in a bucket of ice water till he (the writer) gets his senses.

Firemen Have a Run for Nothing

Yesterday morning the local fire laddies were given an unnecessary run. The alarm rang during a crowded session of the police court, which drew a few of the regular attendants at that delightful spot away. A defective chimney was the cause of the trouble. No damage was done and the firemen did not have to turn on the water. As the hose wagon went up George street, a horse attached to S. A. Olee's delivery rig followed in the track of the flying team.

Illuminated Signs May Go

It seems, basing the statement upon the authority of a well-known lawyer, that should the council insist upon the removal of all signs over the pavements, the illuminated signs, at present ornamenting the main thoroughfare of our city will have to come down. Surely the councillors advocating the insistence of this pound of non-wanted flesh, can find business of more importance to occupy their time. For instance the dust of yesterday and Saturday did more harm in one hour than all the signs in Peterborough do in a year.

"Preventics" will promptly check a cold or the Grippe when taken early or at the "sneeze stage." Preventics cure seated colds as well. Preventics are little candy cold cure tablets, and Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis., will gladly mail you samples and a book on Colds free, if you will write him. The samples prove their merit. Check early Colds with Preventics and stop Pneumonia. Sold in 5c. and 25c. boxes by J. D. Tully.

Cowardly Poisoners Still Busy

It seems about time that the citizens form a protective league here and ascertain and punish whomsoever the cowardly miscreant is that is poisoning dogs. In addition to the list of dogs, all family pets, published in yesterday's issue, Dr. Poole, the Water street veterinary surgeon, on Saturday night, found his valuable collie dog lying dead in the stable, with all the evidences of strychnine poisoning. Yesterday morning another dog was lying dead on Hunter street near the corner of Stewart, and several others report that they have lost dogs of more or less value.

Sewers to be Flushed Today

This morning Messrs. Ad. Cox, Sam Mulligan and Sam Wainwright, fire department engineer, all employes of the city, will begin a systematic flushing of the city sewers with hose from the various hydrants where available, and elsewheres with the city slush tank. They will begin operations at the north end, probably at Barnardo avenue, on this side of the river, and near St. Joseph's hospital in the east ward. Mr. Wainwright will be in control of this job under supervision of Mr. Hays, city engineer. It will take about four days to clean out the city sewers, the residium of the sewers going south to enrich the farms adjoining the Otonabee. Whilst not daring to attempt to teach the civic officials in charge of such engineering any new wrinkles, we cannot but think that when there are many miles of sewers to be presumably cleaned of the sediment of a year, that the flushing should begin somewhere about the center of the system, so as to make way for what may be lying in the uphill portion of the system. We do not profess to understand engineering, but hope that the northern part of the sediment may not be blocked half way by its contact and congregation with that at the lower end.

A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate, hang-on coughs, bronchial troubles and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering hang-on coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine:

"In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. Holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach), it is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric (stomach) acidity."

"Golden Medical Discovery" enriches and purifies the blood curing blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings and old sores, or ulcers.

Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet telling all about the native medicinal roots composing this wonderful medicine. There is no alcohol in it.

Unique Experience With a Hat

Yesterday afternoon at 4.30 a unique example of the control of voice by mind was observed in front of the C.P.R. uptown ticket office. A gentleman riding northwards on George street, had his hat blown off, and the wild hat sailed to and along the pavement on the west side of the street for fully 40 or 50 feet, and not an ear-splitting oath nor a sulphurous atmosphere was in evidence. The rider simply chased the hat on the wheel and when it stopped, unmounted from his steel steed to capture the low crowned, broad trimmed hat of a Presbyterian pastor.

ANNNAL MEETING OF PETERBORO' Y.W.C.A.

Most Encouraging Reports Presented at the 16th Annual Meeting of the Local Branch in Their New Home.

Last night a large audience gathered in the Y. W. C. A. building on Simcoe street, on the occasion of the 16th annual meeting of the Y. W. C. A. one of the most Christian spirited and benevolent societies now extant.

The chair was most acceptably filled and ably represented by Mrs. G. M. Roger.

The order of proceedings began with the Doxology, in which all present participated. After this Rev. Mr. Webb pastor of the Murray street Baptist church, was heard in devotional exercises. The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by Mrs. H. P. Kennedy. The reports of the various officers of the association were then presented, a report of which is appended below. Miss E. Morrow, the treasurer; Miss Annette Mayneord, the general secretary, and Miss Haycock, superintendent, respectively presenting their several reports.

Mrs. (Dr.) Neal moved the adoption of the reports, which were carried unanimously. Mrs. G. M. Roger, president, then gave her report, which was clear, concise and to the point, and much appreciated.

After the business part of the evening's program had been partly finished, the proceedings were enlivened by a duet by Miss Reesor and Mr. W. McIlroy, who were accompanied by Miss Gumpricht and Miss Wallis on piano and violin.

Mrs. Kilgour, Dominion president of the Y. W. C. A., then gave a most interesting address, covering the past history and future prospects of the association.

Miss Gumpricht then rendered a well selected and admirably executed pianoforte solo.

Mrs. Brown, Dominion secretary of the Y. W. C. A., at this juncture gave an address that was listened to with deep interest. The regular program was then ended by a cornet solo by Mr. Arthur Seward, who gave those present a rare musical treat.

Taken as a whole, last night's meeting was harmonious and interesting from start to finish, and cannot but arouse much interest in this branch of the Y. W. C. A., one of the most admirable and worthy-of-patronage societies now extant.

GENERAL SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Miss Annette Maynord, general secretary of the local Y. W. C. A., presented her report, which began with an account of the advantageous work accomplished by the association in this city in the social, physical, intellectual and spiritual development of the young women of Peterborough. The various departments are bound together by a union of purpose. Miss Mayneord expressed her thanks that much success has attended the efforts of the association. Last fall Miss Little, Dominion secretary, conducted a successful rally, which resulted in many names being added to the different classes.

Miss Mayneord dealt first with the religious work of the association. She noted that Mrs. Williamson, in her "Life of Christ" studies, had accomplished much good. The study of "The Acts of the Apostles" had brought many to a more interested study of the bible. The Sunday afternoon service has been closed for the present. They hope to establish a "Strangers' Tea" for the second Sunday of each month. The secretary noted that every Sunday morning at 9.30 a short service, with a study of the S. S. lesson, is held, the average attendance at which has been 14.

As regards the educational department, classes have been held in English literature, physical culture, nursing and domestic science. Sheriff Hall had conducted a class in literature, with 21 original attendants. Mrs. R. McWilliams undertook the literary work in connection with the "New Era Club," choosing as her subject "The Life of Charles Dickens." Miss Coventry conducted the physical classes for girls, and the secretary started a bible study of "The Acts of the Apostles." Dr. Jessie Birnie gave ten lessons on "First Aid to the Injured," with 20 in the class.

The physical culture classes, conducted by Miss Coventry, have been well attended. The closing exercises will be given in the Y. M. C. A. on the 3rd of May.

Classes in domestic science have been conducted by Miss Bawden since January 17th. The employment bureau has not proven as satisfactory as hoped. The reading room, which is furnished with daily and other periodicals, is well attended. The senior membership for the year is 230 and 32 juniors. The secretary then showed how the office work involved much attention. Miss Mayneord then made an appeal for still more earnest workers.

BOARDING HOUSE REPORT.

The boarding house report, submitted by Supt. Miss K. H. Haycock, showed a balance on January 1st, 1906, of $182.89. Receipts from January 1st, 1906, to April 19th, 1907, were $7,708.99, or a total of $7,891.88. The expenditure was $7,730.93, leaving a balance on hand of $161.95. The regular boarders now number 42. During the past 15 months 180 have passed through the boarding house, 70 weekly boarders and 110 transients. There were 3,520 meals served to non-residents.

RECORDING SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The 16th annual report of the local Y. W. C. A. noted that at the first meeting called to consider forming an association there were but 15 ladies present, two of whom, Mrs. Walsh and Miss Nicholls, are still on the board. The board meetings of the past year have been well attended. Some very generous contributions have been made to the funds of the association. Two new baths and four dressing rooms have been furnished by Hon. Senator Cox. Miss Mayneord is now general secretary, and the other officers were named in this report. It was noted that the date of the annual meeting had been changed from January to April so that reports of the different departments might be included. The sad passing away of the late Mrs. Fairbairn, "a true friend of the association," was noted. The report then conveyed thanks to those who had helped the good work of the association along. The report ended with thanks to the local press for their courtesy.

Salt and Ashes Fad Failed in Toronto

The salt and ash fad after trial in the City Hall, Toronto, has proven an absolute failure. 3156 pounds of slack were mixed with 2,441 pounds of ashes, the whole being situated with 61 gallons of water in which were dissolved 25 pounds of common salt and two pounds of oxalic acid. The fuel was fired automatically by an underfeed stoker, with forced draft. During this trial the average gauge pressure was 73, but fluctuated rapidly between 66 and 80, and it was only by continuously driving the fan supplying the draft that it was possible to hold the steam at this average. It was apparent that good combustion was not taking place. The ash in the mixture, packed with the result that the air supply, requisite to properly support combustion, was deficient.

Pauper Immigrants Arrive in the City

The Belleville Intelligencer says: Two immigrant specials went through the city yesterday. We are told that one woman got off here en route to Peterborough. She had four children and a ticket for Peterborough, but not a cent in the world. Inasmuch as the Peterborough train did not leave till today, the immigration agent here had to look after the woman and her small family, which he did. They left for Peterborough today, where, it is to be hoped, the real ticket of the family is awaiting them.

Baby McMurray Interred Yesterday

Yesterday afternoon the last mortal remains of Joseph, the little son of Mr. Thos. McMurray, of Wescott street, who passed away Monday afternoon, after a short illness, were laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery.

The many friends of the bereaved parents extend their sympathy to them in this bereavement.

Dr. Poole Answers Poisoner's Advocate

(To the Editor of the Times.)

Dear Sir,—I read with disgust in your last night's issue a letter signed by one writing under the nom de plume of "Progress," giving his views on the dog curse, as he expresses it. I would like to ask this genius if he is aware that dog owners pay a license for their dogs to live. Does he pay the same for his flower beds? If not, he is not on an equal footing, and neither he nor any other man has any right to interfere with any dog unless he keeps his property properly fenced. I would suggest that "Progress," or rather, "Unprogressive," as I think the latter term is more appropriate, should employ some sons of Italy, to whom he indirectly alludes in his letter, to dig a mout around his house, then he would be perfectly safe, he, his flower beds, wife's pantry, and all that is his from any depredations or injury that dogs might cause, and not encourage the wretches who are carrying on this barbarous work by preaching his narrow-minded doctrine through the public press.

Yours faithfully,
BERNARD R. POOLE, V.S.,
420 Water street, Peterborough.

County Officials to Meet on Saturday

A special committee, composed of Reeve McNabb, Councillors Moher and Thompson, Mr. E. M. Elliott, county clerk; Mr. E. A. Peck, county solicitor, and Mr. J. Belcher, will meet next Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the county building, to draw up a memorial to the Government regarding the construction of the Buckhorn bridge.

The meeting on Saturday is for the purpose of determining how much the county will chip in towards the construction of the cement bridge over the Government dam.

New Business for Peterborough

Messrs. White and Mitchell, both of whom are well known in this city, have established a new business in the brick building to the south-east corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets. Here yesterday Messrs. Alexander & Muller, the Brock street electricians, commenced the installation of an up-to-date motor and attachments to drive the ponderous plant used by Messrs. White & Mitchell in their carpet cleaning plant.

As one enters the doors from Aylmer street, one is confronted by a huge wooden upon work cylinder some 13 to feet in diameter, which revolvers, by electric power, about 20 times a minute. In this vast whirl are placed carpets of any size, dimension or make, and as the wheel revolvers, every atom of dust or infection is carried off by air shafts, into which the dust, etc., is blown by rapidly revolving electric fans. The carpets when freed from all dust are then treated by a formaldyhide process which thoroughly disinfects and purifies the goods. For particulars see adv. in this issue.

DON'T DIE AT 45

Cure the Indigestion Which is so Liable to Lead to Apoplexy.

Rush of business, eating too fast and too much, excesses of any kind, soon result in indigestion. Then when the digestive organs cannot care for the food properly the coats of the blood vessels in the brain get little nourishment, become brittle, and finally yield to the fierce blood pressure. One is then said to have a "shock," to be paralysed, or to die from apoplexy.

People suffering with headache, giddiness, palpitation, sleeplessness, bad taste in the mouth, drowsiness, coated tongue, distress after eating, specks before the eyes, and any other of the many distressing results of a weakened stomach should profit by the discovery of Mi-o-na stomach tablets.

In recent years the greatest advance in medicine has been in the study of diseases of digestion and nutrition and no other prescription has proven itself of as much value as Mi-o-na. It is relied upon as a certainty today in relieving the worst troubles of digestion and assimilation and making a complete cure.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c box of Mi-o-na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents. Booth's Mi-o-na Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

High Class Music by Local Talent

Prof. Davies' Pupils Delight Large and Refined Audience.

Last night the Y.M.C.A. Hall was comfortably filled with a representative audience containing many of Peterborough's most ardent admirers and exponents of music.

The occasion was a recital given by the more advanced of Professor Alfred Davies pupils, to which invitations had been issued by Mr. and Miss Helen Davies.

The program was one specially selected from the greatest composers and musicians and was well qualified to display the high class talent of each individual participant and demonstrative of the excellent training they had received under the professor's tuition. Without making invidious comparison of the excellency of the respective performers, we might say that the programm was finished without a break or false note to be detected. The piano duet from Wagner by the Misses Gladys Crane and Mattie Robertson was admirably rendered, as were piano solos by each of these young ladies. Songs in good voice and finished execution were given by Miss Geraldine King, Miss Jennie Robson, Miss Alice Learmonth and Miss May Edwards. Charming piano solos were given by Miss Elsie Clinkscale, Miss Katheryne Burnett, Miss Frances McFadden, Miss Kate Leary, Miss Geraldine King, and Miss Lottie Chiles.

"MINES AND NEAR-MINES"

We told you last week about "get rich propositions," where promoters owned a piece of barren ground, incorporated a company and sold stock for their personal uses.

In locating claims, a claim being 600 feet by 1,500 feet, the long way of the claim lies along the location ledge. A claim located on the side line adjoining, while advertised as being near such a property does not follow that it is as good or any good, compared with the mine they are using to sell their stock. In some cases they have proved bonanzas, but the chances are against it. We have two claims end to end, on a rich ledge, 9,000 feet of ledge matter. We are selling stock at 25c. per share (par value $1.00) to place a mill on the property, when no more stock will be sold at this price. We have ore enough in sight to warrant this investment, and we anticipate that the stock will go above par.

We want you to write us, and we will tell you all about it. Silver Queen Mining Co., 84 Bacon Bldg., Oakland, California. Mines in the "Wonder District," Nevada.

Noted American Designer Here

Mr. Johnston of Philadelphia Does Business With Brinton Carpet Company.

Yesterday Mr. Robert Johnston, of Philadelphia, Pa., one of the best known designers of carpet patterns in the United States, was a guest at the Queen's Hotel. Mr. Johnston came to the city on purpose to interview Mr. Preen of the recently inaugurated Brinton Carpet Works, in this city.

During the past few years Mr. Johnston has supplied patterns for carpets to such well known firms as Irving Deetz & Magee, the carpet manufacturers of Philadelphia; A. & N. Karaghensian, the large American carpet makers of Freehold, N.J., and Butterworth & Co., of Chicopee Falls, Mass.

This expert designer in conversation with a Times representative, spoke in high terms of the city, and prophesied a certain success for the Brinton Carpet Works. He remarked that the new addition to the local industries have not only got the most modern plant but have men at the head of affairs, who will make Brinton carpets, as made in Peterborough a household word throughout the white Dominion of Canada.

Mr. Johnston may return to the city in a few months.

Bowling Matches Begin Thursday

The long talked of bowling tournament at the Majestic Bowling Alleys, on Water street, just across from the former Ontario Bank Building, begins on Thursday of this week, and continues until Saturday night inclusive. The official schedule, that was made last night was not available in time for this issue but will be given in tomorrow's paper.

Much interest is being taken in this competition, and the young men of the city are hereby offered a clean sport that will keep them from influences that would otherwise have a tendency to their detriment.

A charge of 25 cents will be charged for non-participants in the competitions.

The Gimble case Gives Important clue

Hamilton, April 24.—The suicide of Benedict Gimbel, the wealthy Philadelphia merchant, may open up the celebrated Barron murder mystery. Provincial Detective Greer at the time of the murder discovered that the corsets on the woman bore a stamp mark of "Gimbel Bros.," and he immediately began enquiries in the cities where the Gibsons have department stores. He made another important discovery, namely that a Mr. Gimbel of Philadelphia was in a Hamilton hotel about the time of the murder. Enquiries of the Philadelphia police elicited the information that the Mr. Gimbel in question was a man of high standing, and had been over in Toronto attending a fraternal society convention, and had stopped out in Hamilton. A description of the man suspected of the murder was then sent to Philadelphia, and the reply came that it was not at the description of the Gimbels who had been over to Toronto, but that it did in fact fit a son of his, always stated, however, that he son had not been out of Philadelphia at the time of the murder, and that clue was dropped.

In view of what has transpired in Philadelphia in the last few days, Provincial detectives will take up the Barron murder case again as soon as the Cayuga case is concluded.

This Man is Accused of Robbing 17 Wives

CHICAGO, April 24.—A despatch from Memphis, Mich., says: Dr. John Carver, a alleged bigamist, who is said to have at least seventeen wives, was captured yesterday at Fort Smith, Arkansas. Carver is charged with defrauding his wives out of $150,000.

The specific charge on which he was arrested was that of defrauding Mrs. Lola Davis of Battle Creek out of $25,000. Carver married her on October 16, 1906, at Battle Creek. He went with her to New York, and they decided to buy a boarding house. He told his wife to go home and raise all the money she could on her property and forward him a draft, and he would make arrangements to have her come on in two weeks after all details had been settled. He got the money it is said, and disappeared.

Carver is wanted in Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Buffalo, Grand Rapids, Norfolk, Saginaw, and officers have been after him for three years. He is a graduate of the Pittsburg Dental College, is forty years old, and, it is alleged, he procured his wives through a matrimonial bureau.

Four Burned to Death and Many Injured

NEW YORK, April 24.—Four men burned to death, two hundred and fifty horses killed; twelve firemen injured, two of them seriously; two engines overturned and wrecked by collisions with street cars; several thrilling rescues from burning buildings, and a property loss of $200,000—that is the story of the fire department's work yesterday.

Six fires on the upper east side on Broadway, in the middle east side, and a big stable fire at Christopher and Barrow streets kept the firemen constantly at work. The dead are four Italians.

It was in a high building in Wooster street that most of the firemen were injured. Fire had been discovered on the top floor and the firemen had dragged their hose up the stairs to fight a stubborn blaze in the factory of the R. H. Frome Manufactory Company. The full company had reached the scene when came the back draught and the flames and choking smoke swept over them. A dozen of the men were blown down a flight of stairs. Several of them were severely burned and bruised.

The other fires were in widely separated sections.

King Otto's Death Near

LONDON, April 23.—Lloyd's Weekly News says the mental affliction of King Otto of Bavaria is rapidly becoming worse. Eminent specialists, who recently visited the place where he is confined, found signs of acute mental disorder from which the king has hitherto been free. His physical strength is also deteriorating. The attendants have great difficulty in inducing the royal patient to eat. One peculiarity is his rejection of all warm dishes. Another is that he will not eat when anybody is within sight.

Paralyzing Commerce

ST. PETERSBURG, April 23.—Russian industry is being placed in a critical situation owing to the continuance of the strike of majors belonging to the naphtha flotilla on the Caspian Sea. Both sides seem determined to continue the strike and leading industrial magnates have telegraphed to the Lower House of Parliament asking that body to intervene.

The president of the Moscow Boards in an interview today expressed the opinion that a continuance of the strike would force most of the factories to suspend, which would throw hundreds of thousands of men out of work.

PREPARATION STARTED FOR DEFENCE SCHEMES

For the British Empire---Important Resolution on Imperial Defence Adopted by the Colonial Conference.

LONDON, April 24.—"That this conference welcomes and cordially approves of the exposition of the general principles embodied in the statement of the secretary of state for war, and without wishing to commit any of the governments represented, recognizes and affirms the need of the development for the service of the Empire of a general staff selected from the forces of the Empire as a whole, which shall study military science in all its branches; shall collect and disseminate to the various governments military information and intelligence; shall undertake the preparation of schemes of defence on a common principle and without in the least interfering with questions connected with the command of administration shall at the request of the representative Governments advise as to the training, education and war organization of the military forces of the Crown in every part of the Empire."

At yesterday's sitting of the colonial conference the foregoing resolution was agreed upon, which means there will be no monetary contribution to the creation of a central staff on which the self-governing dependencies can be represented if they so choose. Sir Frederick Borden informed the Canadian Press Association that there is not an atom of truth in the statement that an Imperial army is to be created. Canada maintaining 45,000 men and the other colonies proportionately. He also knew nothing of General Botha's proposal.

The resolution regarding a central staff meant in its practical aspect not a great deal more than was being done at present. Referring to the interchange of staff officers etc., it is not binding on any one section. The conference adjourned to Tuesday.

Fire Raged all Night in Toulon Arsenal

TOULON, France, April 24. — The fire which broke out at the arsenal here shortly after midnight continues as this despatch is forwarded, and has assumed alarming proportions.

Private residences outside the arsenal are threatened, immense quantities of stores have been burned, and damage amounting to many millions of francs has been done.

The vault of a storehouse fell in, burying twenty men, ten of whom were severely injured. Two or three are believed to have been killed.

Large bodies of soldiers and sailors were engaged in fighting flames throughout the night, but all the efforts to control the fire have been without success up to the present.

The building in which the commission of inquiry appointed to investigate the explosion on board the battleship Jena has been holding its sessions is in flames, and it is rumored that most of the documents relating to the investigation have been destroyed.

Steamer Lost

MANISTEE, Mich., April 24. —The wooden lumber barge Arcadia, which left this port April 12th for Two Rivers with a cargo of hardwood, has undoubtedly been lost in Lake Michigan with her crew and owner, Harry May and about 13 others. Marine men here have given her up as lost and would not be surprised to hear that her wreck was caused by boiler explosion. Some persons hold the theory that she went down in the big storm of April 14th. The known list of persons aboard the Arcadia was: Capt. Harry May; Mrs. Harry May, young woman took, name unknown, Otto Chavaria, sailor, Manistee, and Harry Powers sailor, Manistee. There were about eight more members of the crew. Wreckage has been found along the beach from Pentwater north to Little Point Sauble and part of it has been identified as the cargo of the lost craft. Portions of her cabins and bulwarks have also been found on the beach near Pentwater.

The Arcadia was a wooden steamer 119 feet in length, 26 feet beam and nine feet draft, registering 230 tons and was built in Milwaukee in 1888.

Murdered in Chicago

CHATHAM, April 23.—(Word has been received in this city that Mrs. Crabbe, a divorced woman, who was formerly Miss Katie Lamont, of this city, was murdered in Chicago. The tragedy occurred in a saloon on Clark street, and was the result of a quarrel between the woman and two men. The deceased woman was born in Chatham, and was known as one of the handsomest women who ever lived in the Maple City.

Gave Life for Poor

PARIS, April 22.—A notable case of a victim of duty is that of Dr. Rabuel, who lost his life as a result of attending diphtheria patients.

A woman and her daughter were in the most dangerous stage of this malady and lived in a condition akin to poverty in a poor quarter of Paris. Dr. Rabuel attended them with the same devotion as if they had been able to pay a big fee, whereas in reality he well knew his pay would be nominal or nothing.

As a last resort he employed the traditional method of application, placing his mouth to that of the patient and trying to break the membrane in the throat. This cost him his life, as within forty-eight hours he died in spite of all medical skill.

Refused to Resign

ST. CATHARINES, April 23.— The city council met to receive the report of the special committee appointed to consider the report of the county judge on the civic investigation. The committee recommended that the report be filed and all expenses of the investigation paid, and also that Alderman Bradt resign, owing to having been found guilty of gross misconduct as a member of the council.

Mr Bradt refused to resign until compelled by those who voted for his election. He denied the charges against him and accused Alderman Campbell of being the instigator of the charges to drive Mr. Bradt from the Board of Works. A motion was then passed unanimously expelling Mr. Bradt from the Works Committee.

London's Homeless

LONDON, April 24. —According to a census taken by the London county council, one person out of every 2,000 of London's population is homeless. The percentage is growing every year.

It is interesting to note what the facilities are for obtaining cheap food. At a mission in Shoreditch 500 men are fed daily for four cents a meal. Free food is distributed to an average of 350 on Sundays and 900 on Thursdays.

From 900 to 1,500 are supplied on the Thames Embankment with soup and bread nightly, and 100 bread tickets are distributed nightly in Limehouse. In this manner, the London county council's report says, a man can live, so far as food is concerned for four cents a day.

CANADA AND BRITISH DIPLOMACY

The Montreal Witness, under the above caption, makes the following timely comment on the sentiments expressed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and others at the Canadian Club dinners in Toronto and Ottawa on the occasion of the recent visit of Hon. James Bryce, the new British Ambassador at Washington:

Mr. Bryce has appeared before the Canadian Club at Toronto, and was beset there, as he was at Ottawa, with the fact that, in the conviction of all Canadians, Canada has been sacrificed to the United States by Imperial diplomacy. It was a point on which three men, so widely known as Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Clark, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and Professor Goldwin Smith were all in pronounced agreement. The ambassador's reply was that the Canadians had only heard one side of the question, and that it was a very great mistake to suppose that British diplomacy had not its best for the colonies. All these statements on both sides are true. It is true, and none can deny, that Canada has on most occasions of questions between herself and the United States been sacrificed. There have been exceptions. The most notable was the reciprocity treaty negotiated by Lord Elgin, which was an entirely well balanced agreement, but which fell before the rising power of protectionism, which had been nursed into controlling strength by what had called itself the war tariff. Under that tariff the so-called infant industries were developed into such giant vigor that they could thereafter take the country by the throat and see to it that, instead of passing away with war needs, the war tariff should be greatly increased and fortified in times of prosperity and peace. In our boundary settlements, however, we have failed to get our treaty rights. Yet, it is not questioned that Great Britain has done her best for the colony. In some earlier cases where the interest was entirely British, the colonial population and its rights being inconsiderable and unconsidered, the accepted plea is the one urged on behalf of the magician in the cowboy music hall, by the notice, "Don't shoot the musician, he is doing his best." In later cases, where the Canadian people regarded the matters at stake as primarily, if not exclusively, theirs, the reason of the failure of British diplomacy is one for which we may, in a measure, blame ourselves. As a nation of the empire we demand the enforcement of all our claims by the full power of the empire, while we contribute nothing to the empire's strength, are, indeed, rather a weakness to it.

With regard to the most recent case of giving us away, we note an ignorant statement in a British newspaper to the effect that, as it was the present Lord Chief Justice of England who gave us away, we must accept his action as proof of its righteousness. The London Globe, in lofty superiority, "reminds" Sir Wilfrid Laurier of this, as though it had so much better grasp of the facts than the Canadian Premier. We would "remind" The Globe that the circumstances were such as to render a righteous decision impossible. The United States had made a claim. She had positively refused to submit it to arbitration. She was willing to have a commission discuss it, but would not promise to accept the findings of that commission. She appointed as her three representatives to that commission three men who had already committed themselves unbendingly to the whole demands of the United States. All this humiliation Great Britain accepted. To make the humiliation easier, Canada, in view of the displacement of the name of the Portland canal, adroitly withdrew a great part of her territorial claim before the matter went to the commission. For the rest, the United States was in possession, and it would have taken war to displace her. It was under such circumstances that Great Britain entered this preposterous inquiry. When she chose a commissioner she had to find one whose views were such that he would not leave impossible conditions behind him. Such are the facts. But that Great Britain did under the circumstances who can question? She was not going to war to clear United States revenue cutters out of the Lynn canal or to secure us a few rocks on the new Portland canal. So she did the next best thing, and we, who have done nothing for the empire, have little to say.

CARE OF CHAMELEONS.

How These Little Creatures Can Be Kept Alive For Years.

Chameleons can be kept alive for years by making a frame to fit over a plant in a flowerpot and covering it with mosquito netting, which must be long enough to tie with a string about the pot. Keep the pot in the sunniest window and water the plant every day through the netting. You will be surprised to see how eagerly the little creatures will drink the running water after they get over their fear. Set a wire fly trap for flies, which you can liberate under the netting. The chameleons will not be backward about helping themselves.

In winter they do not require much food, but will relish a meal worm occasionally on sunny days. Meal worms can sometimes be got at the grain stores for the asking or can be purchased at the bird stores, or small spiders can be found in cracks and crannies asleep for the winter. They may be frozen stiff if found out of doors, but they revive in a warm room.

Chameleons enjoy a place to sleep in nights and winters. Take a piece of red flannel four inches wide and eight inches long; roll it over a stick as large round as your finger and sew it while on the stick so that it will not come unwound; then slip off and run a wire through it long enough to suspend it from one of the branches on the plant. The chameleon will crawl into this cosy bed and go to sleep.

GRAFTING FISH TAILS.

An Interesting Art in Which the Japanese Are Experts.

Among the many interesting arts in which the Japanese excel is that of the making of fish tails. Almost every one has seen the bush tailed goldfish, with its four, five-and sometimes more long, wavy tails, but it is not generally known that most of them are not its own.

When the little goldfish are very, very young their flesh is as clear as glass, so that one can see every bone in their tiny bodies. At this time the few that are born with two or more tails are put by themselves, and then a queer looking old Jap, with a great magnifying glass fastened in front of his eye and wee sharp tools handy, snaches down under the water and cuts off the tails of the plain little fish, and then three or four of these tails are joined on to the backbone where the one was cut off and fastened there with tiny bandages until they grow fast.

The Japanese, who are very skilful in queer things of this kind, grow the finest goldfish in the world, and it is a very good business, for very fine fish of this kind often bring as much as $200 to $500, and one sold not long ago for $1,000.

The Lady of the Lake.

"In the Days of Scott" there are two anecdotes about Sir Walter Scott's children in connection with his poem, "The Lady of the Lake."

One day his daughter was met by James Ballantyne, the publisher, in her father's library and asked what she thought of the poem. She replied that she had not read it and added:

"Papa says there is nothing so bad for young people as reading bad poetry."

Scott's son Walter returned from school one day with evidences of having been engaged in a fight. His father asked him what he had been fighting about. He replied that he had been called a "lassie" and had resented it.

A little questioning showed that young Walter's schoolfellows had nicknamed him "The Lady of the Lake," which name the boy did not understand except as a reproach to his manliness.

The Union Department Stores Company

1696-1712 West 25th Street, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Invites the tradesman, mechanic, merchant, professional, craftsman and farmer to become shareholders and co-operating profit sharers in the very profitable and up-to-date business of conducting

A Great Co-Operative Department Store and Mail Order Institution

In the City of Cleveland

An Ohio Corporation of $500,000. - Shares $10 Each

BY THE PEOPLE — FOR THE PEOPLE

This Institution saves for the consumer what otherwise becomes the profit of the individual.

$10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER. $10.00 MAKES YOU A PARTNER.

Our Preferred Stock Bears

7 per cent. guaranteed cumulative dividends and shares in addition to the 7 per cent. in the whole profits of the institution.

Unlimited Dividends

Can be earned in department store investments. A department store near here paid over 60 per cent. in dividends to its investors last year.

Department Store Investments are Good

Because department store merchandising is a very conservative and profitable business.

Our Department Store Investment is the Best

Because our thousands of shareholders will do as owners do and have always done: "talk the business," "boom the business," "advertise the business," and influence their friends and relatives to trade at their own store. This will place our business on a self productive basis immediately. They certainly will do this because they have always done so under the same identical conditions.

A 5% Discount from Regular Prices will be Allowed Shareholders

in this institution being in itself a very attractive interest to investors in this Company.

A Great Mail Order Department

Will be our accommodation for out of town shareholders and patrons.

Our Business Location is Ideal

For local business, located in the heart of the West Side business center it is immediately surrounded by a West Side purchasing clientage of 300,000 people and commands the approach of as many more East Side residents and the vast urban population that comes cityward for their supplies.

So in this enterprise we are combining the features that have made

John Wanamaker, Philadelphia and New York City
Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, Ill.,
Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, Ill., and
Montgomery, Ward & Co., Chicago, Ill.,

each in themselves tremendously successful, having each made millions of dollars for their stockholders.

Limitation of Subscription

There will be no individual control in this Company. We prefer to sell no more than 100 shares to any individual desiring an investment with us, as we desire to obtain the widest possible distribution of our shares.

How the Shareholder is Safeguarded in Every Way

When you secure a certificate of stock you own a valuable piece of property, representing as it does an investment that will secure for you a constant income, aside from the many other advantages to be enjoyed as a shareholder. Note the binding obligations of the Company to those that invest.

Your stock if preferred is guaranteed seven per cent.

Your shares are full paid and non-assessable.

Your dividends are cumulative and participating.

Every dollar received by the Company for stock is going right into the business for active service. You have vote and voice in the management of the business. When we say your stock is preferred, we mean that it is guaranteed seven per cent. per annum, before the common stock can be paid one penny. The preferred stock has absolutely the first claim—in effect a first mortgage on all assets of the Company—the property—the property rights, trade marks, trade rights, etc., and on the net profits of the business.

The following Officers and Directors of this Company, constituted wholly of Cleveland and Ohio men of undoubted integrity and business qualifications, will best bespeak our policy and our substantiability:

OFFICERS:

W. F. PARSONS, President. W. H. KIRKBRIDE, Vice-President.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assayays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

Joseph followed Oscard, and with him a certain number of the blacks, but some stayed. Some went to Durnovo and stood beside him. The slaves spoke among themselves, and then they all went over to Durnovo.

So that which the placid moon shone down upon was the breakup of the great simiacine scheme. Victor Durnovo had not come off so badly. He had the larger half of the men by his side. He had all the finest crop the trees had yet yielded, but he had yet to reckon with high heaven!

CHAPTER XX.

SIR JOHN MEREDITH was sitting stiffly in a straight backed chair by his library fire. In his young days men didn't loll in deep chairs, with their knees higher than their heads. There were no such chairs in this library, just as there was no afternoon tea except for ladies. Sir John Meredith was distressed to observe a great many signs of the degeneration of manhood, which he attributed to the indulgence in afternoon tea. Sir John had lately noticed another degeneration—namely, in the quality of the London gas. So serious was this falling off that he had taken to a lamp in the evening, which lamp stood on the table at his elbow.

There was nothing dismal or lonely about this old man, sitting in evening dress in a high backed chair, stiffly reading a scientific book of the modern, cheap science tenor—not written for scientists, but to step in when the brain is weary of novels and afraid of communing with itself. Oh, no! A gentleman need never be dull. He has his necessary occupations. If he is a man of intellect he need never be idle. It is an occupation to keep up with the times.

He paused in the midst of a scientific definition and looked up with listening eyes. He had got into the way of listening to the passing wheels. Lady Cantourne sometimes called for him on her way to a festivity, but it was not that.

The wheels he heard had stopped. Perhaps it was Lady Cantourne, but he did not think so. She drove behind a pair, and this was not a pair.

A few minutes later the butler silently threw open the door, and Jack stood on the threshold. Sir John Meredith's son had been given back to him from the gates of death.

The son, like the father, was in immaculate evening dress. There was a very subtle cynicism in the thought of turning aside on such a return as this to dress—to tie a careful white tie and brush imperceptibly ruffled hair.

There was a little pause, and the two tall men stood, half bowing, with a marvelous similarity of attitude, gazing steadily into each other's eyes. And one cannot help wondering whether it was a mere accident that Jack Meredith stood motionless on the threshold until his father said "Come in."

"Thomson," he continued to the butler, with that pride of keeping up before all the world which was his, "bring up coffee."

The butler closed the door behind him. Sir John was holding on to the back of his high chair in rather a constrained way—almost as if he were suffering pain. They looked at each other again, and there was a resemblance in the very manner of raising the eyelid. There was a stronger resemblance in the grim, waiting silence which neither of them would break.

At last Jack spoke, approaching the fire and looking into it.

"You must excuse my taking you by surprise at this—unusual hour." He turned, saw the lamp, the book and the eyeglasses, more especially the eyeglasses, which seemed to break the train of his thoughts. "I only landed at Liverpool this afternoon," he went on, with hopeless politeness. "I did not trouble you with a telegram, knowing that you object to them."

The old man bowed gravely.

"I am always glad to see you," he said suavely. "Will you not sit down?"

And they had begun wrong.

"I suppose you have dined," said Sir John when they were seated, "or may I offer you something?"

"Thanks, I dined on the way up, in a twilit refreshment room, with one waiter and a number of attendant black beetles."

Things were going worse and worse. Sir John smiled, and he was still smiling when the man brought in coffee.

"Yes," he said conversationally, "for speed combined with discomfort I suppose we can hold up heads against any country. Seeing that you are dressed, I supposed that you had dined in town."

"No. I drove straight to my rooms and kept the cab while I dressed."

What an important matter this dressing seemed to be! And there were fifteen months behind it—fifteen months which had aged one of them and sobered the other.

Jack was sitting forward in his chair with his immaculate dress shoes on the fender, his knees apart, his elbows resting on them, his eyes still fixed on the fire. Sir John looked keenly at him beneath his frowning, lashless lids. He saw the few gray hairs over Jack's ears, the suggested wrinkles, the drawn lines about his mouth.

"You have been ill?" he said.

Joseph's letter was locked away in the top drawer of his writing table.

"Yes, I had rather a bad time, a serious illness. My man nursed me through it, however, with marked success, and the Gordons, whom I was staying, were very kind."

"I had the pleasure of meeting Miss Gordon."

Jack's face was steady, suavely impenetrable.

Sir John moved a little and set his empty cup upon the table.

"A charming girl," he added.

"Yes."

"You are fortunate in that man of yours," Sir John said; "a first class man."

"Yes. He saved my life."

Sir John blinked, and for the first time his fingers went to his mouth, as if his lips had suddenly got beyond his control.

"If I may suggest it," he said rather indistinctly, "I think it would be well if we signified our appreciation of his devotion in some substantial way. We might well do something between us."

He paused and threw back his shoulders.

"I should like to give him some substantial token of my gratitude."

Sir John was nothing if not just.

"Thank you," answered Jack quietly. He turned his head a little and glanced not at his father, but in his direction. "He will appreciate it, I know."

"I should like to see him tomorrow."

Jack winced, as if he had made a mistake.

"He is not in England," he explained. "I left him behind me in Africa. He has gone back to the simiacine plateau."

The old man's face dropped rather piteously.

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

par value $1.00. As a result of last summer's work numerous veins of rich ore were uncovered, assaying from $10 up to $5000. There is every indication that this property will prove sensationally rich, and with the low capitalization of $500,000, $150,000 of which is in the Treasury, the dividends should be large, and the stock become very valuable. This is a thorough business mining proposition, and will stand the most critical examination. Gusty Dundas Lays a Serious Charge

It now seems that Mr. Augustus, generally nown as "Gusty" Dundas, has laid an information against Mr. Stevens of the east ward, charging the latter with breaking into Dundas' house in North Monaghan last fall.

"Gusty" claims that while he was in the county jail, Mr Stevens went to his house to get some apples from the trees, which had been sold to him, and besides getting the fruit, Dundas alleges that the accused broke into his house and took about $50 worth of goods, including clothing and apples, and ransacked the building as well.

The case will come up before Magistrate Edmison in a few days.

Grenadiers Will Not Come Here

There is now good reason to believe despite the invitation extended by the 57th Regiment, and the desire of many of the Toronto boys, that the Grenadiers will not visit Peterborough this year. Their decision has not been officially reported to Col. Miller, but probably will within a day or two. An officer of the Grenadiers, now in the city, has stated that the regiment will not come to Peterborough.

Cowardly Miscreant Still Works

In addition to the list of (in most cases) valuable or, in every case valued dogs that have been poisoned within the past week may be included still another victim of the gly-by-night user of poisons to kill any or every dog that may participate in the use of poisoned meat so cowardly placed by this individual. Mr. Chas. Brown's Scotch terrier, the only one of its kind in Peterborough got the poison yesterday morning about ten o'clock, and although a veterinary surgeon was called, the dog died. It will be remembered that this was the dog that, as first mentioned in The Times, killed the big muskrat in the cellar of Mr. Brown's store a short time ago.

Bad Symptoms.

The woman who has periodical headaches, backache, sees imaginary dark spots or specks floating or dancing before her eyes, has gnawing distress or heavy full feeling in stomach, faint spells, dragging-down feeling in lower abdominal or pelvic region, easily startled or excited, irregular or painful periods, with or without pelvic catarrh, is suffering from weaknesses and derangements that should have early attention. Not all of above symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

Neglected or badly treated and such cases often run into maladies which demand the surgeon's knife if they do not result fatally.

No medicine extant has such a long and successful record of cures in such cases as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. No medicine has such a strong professional endorsement of each of its several ingredients—worth more than any number of ordinary non-professional testimonials. The very best ingredients known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments enter into its composition. No alcohol, harmful, or habit-forming drug is to be found in the list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and attested under oath.

In any condition of the female system, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can do only good—never harm. Its whole effect is to strengthen, invigorate and regulate the whole female system and especially the pelvic organs. When these are deranged in function or affected by disease, the stomach and other organs of digestion become sympathetically deranged, the nerves are weakened, and a long list of bad, unpleasant symptoms follow. Too much must not be expected of this "Favorite Prescription." It will not perform miracles; will not cure tumors—no medicine will. It will often prevent them, if taken in time, and thus the operating table and the surgeon's knife may be avoided.

Women suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Doctor Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser (1000 pages) is sent free on receipt of at one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound copy. Address as above.

Road to Lift Lock to be Opened at Once

Also George and Aylmer Streets South as Soon as Practicable---Walks in Ward Five to be Started With First This Year.

The City Board of Works met last night when there were present:—Mayor R. F. McWatkins, Chairman Ald. Geo. Duncan, Aldermen Wilson, McIntyre, Johnston, the city solicitor, and the street commissioners.

A petition was received from Thos. Begley, Victoria Avenue, asking for a granolithic walk in front of his residence, to be built when the walks in the vicinity are being constructed. This matter was left over, on the chairman's suggestion, until the committee make their annual tour of inspection.

Mr. E. A. Peck was present in the interests of his client, Miss McMann, whose property is situated on the extension of George street south. Mr. Peck stated that his client in the first place had offered the right of way for $1600; had now she would give that for $1200, providing that she be permitted to remove the house on the adjoining lot. She had lived there for the past thirty years, and naturally did not care to leave now. Mr. Peck also pointed out that the work of excavating and building of a foundation would mean a considerable amount. The city are offering Mrs. McMann $700, she to move the building, or $800 and the city to take the house away.

Ald. Wilson said he would not object to the city paying $900 for the right of way. He also offered that the valuation of Mr. McKee, the city's valuator is a fair one.

This matter will go to arbitration.

Ald. Wilson moved, seconded by the mayor,—That the engineer investigate the location of the standpipe on Reid street, and remove it to a spot where it will not be a nuisance to ratepayers. Ald. Wilson suggested that Downie street, off McDonnel, would be a favorable location.—Carried.

Assessor Thos. McKee asked for an office in which to keep his books and papers. He was informed that as soon as the new fire hall is opened room will be provided in the old hall.

A deputation asked for a sewer on Harvey street at once. This matter will have to take the customary course as to advertising, etc.

The city engineer reported that the Street Railway Company had not filled in between the rails and turnouts according to their agreements with the city.

The committee contended that the city should do this work and charge the cost up to the company.

Ald. Johnston moved, seconded by Ald. Wilson,—That the chairman of Board of Works and city engineer, wait upon Mr. Laumouth with a view to securing arrangements in writing for having this work done, either by the company, or by the city and the cost thereof charged up to the company.—Carried.

It was realized that this filling in must be done right away for the safety of public traffic.

Ald. Johnston moved, seconded by Ald. Wilson,—That the clerk write Mr. Tiffin for information as to what grade the Grand Trunk are going to strike in the contemplated lowering of their track past Smith Smith street, on the Lakefield line.—Carried.

It is necessary to secure this information before the city undertake the Benson street sewer, and the sewer along the track from Smith street to Aylmer street.

The engineer reported it advisable to construct the Parnell street sewer along the west side of Park street.

The city engineer was instructed to have Foreman Leary take up the construction of such sewers as he thinks it advisable to proceed with at this season of the year.

Foreman White will be instructed to proceed with the Sherbrooke street sewer as soon as the has completed the Romaine street sewer.

The mayor moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre,—That the engineer be instructed to proceed with the opening of Hunter street east to the lift lock, George street south and Aylmer street south, as soon as practicable, and that Mr. O'Brien have charge of the work.—Carried.

Ald. Wilson moved, seconded by the mayor,—That street commissioners be instructed to start with the granolithic walks in ward five as soon as possible, next week if practicable.—Carried.

Commissioner Evans reported that on streets shaded by trees frost still lies under the wooden walks.

Jos. Johnston, on Park street, asked for a wooden foot crossing into his premises. This will, on motion of Ald. Wilson, be undertaken right away.

A petition for a sidewalk on south side of Charlotte street, west of Park, outside the trees, was refused as the thoroughfare is not sufficiently wide to permit of a walk going outside the trees.

A number of petitions for sidewalks and sewers were dealt with.

The chairman reported that he is assured that the government will let the city have the dredgings from the river this year.

The committee will make their tour of inspection all day next Tuesday, starting at eight o'clock.

The Board then adjourned.

Local Delegate May be Sent to Winnipeg

At a conjoint meeting of the local Brotherhood of St. Andrew, held in All Saints' church, the matter of sending a delegate to the general conference of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, to be held in Winnipeg, from May 21st to 28th was discussed. Whilst all present advocated the sending of such a man, the great expense was somewhat of a barrier to such a movement. However a further meeting will be held and the subject considered again.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED

Kill the Germs by Breathing Hy-o-mei Gives Quick Relief.

Many people who have suffered with catarrh for years naturally feel that the disease cannot be cured, and become discouraged.

Their failure to get relief is due to the fact that they have not used the right remedy. Catarrh is an affection of the head, throat and lungs, and cannot be cured by stomach dosings.

The only scientific and natural treatment for this disease is Hy-o-mei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler, so that its healing medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells, kills all catarrh germs, and restores the mucous membrance of the nose, throat and lungs to a healthy condition.

We do not want anyone's money unless Hyomei gives relief and cure, and we absolutely agree that money will be refunded unless the remedy gives satisfaction.

All druggists should be able to supply you with Hyomei or we will send it by mail on receipt of price, $1.00, and every package is sold with the distinct understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures. Booth's Hyomei Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Miss Charlotte Purser is Now Mrs. H. Elliott

Pretty Wedding of a Charming Hall's Bridge Belle.

Yesterday Mr. Richard Purser of Toronto, an old Peterborough boy, was in the city attending the wedding of his niece Miss Charlotte E. Purser, of Hall's Bridge, to Mr. H. Elliott of Islay, Alta.

The ceremony was celebrated during the afternoon at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. E. J. Cookson, 508 Aylmer street, and was performed by Rev. Canon Davidson, assisted by Rev. Mr. Bagshaw, rector of St. Matthew's church, Hall's Glen, in the presence of a number of guests. The bride was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss E. M. Purser, her sister, and Miss M. G. Cookson, a cousin. She was attired in Duchess satin with chiffon embroidery, and pearl trimmings, and wore the conventional veil and orange blossoms.

The groom was supported by Mr. E. J. Cookson, cousin of the bride. The bride entered the parlor, having on the arm of her brother, Mr. J.C. Purser, and was given away by her aunt, Mrs. Cookson. The wedding march was played by Miss Velva Martin of Toronto, who also sang in splendid voice, after the ceremony, "O Fair, O Sweet, O Holy." The decorations consisted of palms and roses.

After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding dinner was partaken of, and the happy young pair left in the evening on a wedding tour to Toronto, and other points west, where they will spend a week before returning to Peterborough, where they will be the guests of friends, before leaving for their future home at Islay, Alta., where the groom conducts a large general store.

THE BIG MASS MEETING

LOCAL CONSERVATIVES TO HOLD A CAUCUS.

Leading Politicians to Speak in the Opera House on Friday April 26th.

Much interest has been created over the big mass meeting to be held in the Grand Opera House tomorrow evening, April 26th, at eight o'clock under the auspices of the Liberal-Conservative Association of West Peterborough.

The speakers will be Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial secretary; Mr. J. H. G. Bergeron, of Beauharnois, Que. Mr. A. C. Boyce, M.P.P. of West Algoma, and Mr. George W. Fowler, M.P., of King's and Albert, N.B.

Both Dominion and Provincial issues will be discussed. The local association has left no stone unturned that might have covered up anything leading to make the meeting aught but a great success.

With such a well known and eloquent leader of the Provincial Government as Hon. Mr. Hanna, present, and the other equally well known politicians speaking the success of this meeting is absolutely assured.

Mr. George W. Fowler, of King's and Albert, N.B., is one of the best known members on the Conservative side of the House. He is now prominent in the limelight of Canadian public life, and hundreds will no doubt be anxious to hear this fearless and outspoken speaker on Friday night.

The great gathering on Friday night is open to the public, including ladies. Seats will be reserved for them and their escorts.

The annual meeting of the Liberal Conservative Association will be held on Friday evening at seven o'clock, in the Young Conservative Club rooms, for the election of officers and the receiving of reports. Every member should be on hand.

The Dog Nuisance Further Considered

Correspondent Glad Dogs are Destroyed but Deplores the Modus Operandi;

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—I saw in your paper of yesterday a letter signed by Dr. Poole, V.S., in which that gentleman much deplores the way in which certain persons are poisoning dogs. Now, to a certain extent I agree with the doctor. I think that any man or woman who puts poison out indiscriminately for any or every dog to take, is a low, despicable coward. By this means of serving a grudge that the poisoner may have against some dog or dogs that may have become a nuisance, the poisoner runs more than an equal chance of hurting a valuable dog that has never done him or her any harm.

There is no use denying that dogs, particularly of the breed whose parentage is buried in the misty uncertainty of forgotten ancestry, do often cause any one who has a garden or lawn, much trouble. In case a dog should become an habitual nuisance I think that the man troubled might use a more manly method of getting rid of the ag-gravated, stubtailed breaker of his peace by getting, whether by purchase or loan, a little 22-calibre rifle and plugging that canine full of lead. If his next door neighbor has not got a nice shady raspberry patch wherein the marksman may conceal his prey, it is very easy to get out at, say, four o'clock in the morning, and drop the dog's remains into the first garden available. This will result in a proof as to whether the man getting the dog's body is a dissipated member of the church; if he does not swear, his future is secure, should he use profane language, the chances are he will wait till dark and pass the dog along to still the next neighbor, and then another man will undergo a test of his church teaching ——. But to get down to business, why cannot a man bothered by a dog use a kettle of hot water, a gatling, a rock or any means available to get rid of the animal bothering him, except leaving poison round for dogs that are innocent.

Yours truly,

CANOPHILE.

Easy on Bigamist Thirty-Day Term

TORONTO, April 24.—Lawrence J. Elz will spend the next 30 days in jail because of a matrimonial indiscretion that Magistrate Denison described as bigamy. The brevity of the sentence arose upon the conviction in his worship's mind that the second wife had not been deceived.

"Though the girl has not been injured in ignorance, I must punish you in some degree. Bigamy is a serious offence," the magistrate told Elz.

Elz, who is still a young man, married the first wife in Hamilton on October 28th, 1896, and he married Lavina Lake in Toronto on February 3rd of this year.

Mr. Curry elicited from Miss Lake that Elz had introduced her to his first wife at their home on Bathurst street, so the Lake girl knew Elz had a wife living. Miss Lake resided on Church street. Elz had been drinking just before the second ceremony.

Favorite Not Placed in Big English Race

LONDON, April 25.—The City and Suburban Handicap at Epsom yesterday was won by Vedouity, 6 to 1, by three lengths. Lorine, 8 to 1, was second, and Sweep, 100 to 7, was third. Thirteen horses started.

Dean Swift, the winner of the City and Suburban last year, was the favorite, but was not placed.

"Danny" Maher, the American jockey, rode Stave Trader, C. S. Newton's entry.

The City and Suburban Handicap is of 2,000 sovereigns for three-year-olds and upwards, about one mile and a quarter.

Three jockeys were thrown during the race, but none of them was seriously hurt.

An Excited Wife

PORT HURON, Mich., April 25.—Mrs. Anna McClellan, lately from Mount Forest, Ont., rushed excitedly into the police station last evening and asked if she could have her husband arrested for eloping with another woman. The police could not help her. Mrs. McClellan is employed as a waitress in the Harrington Hotel. When her husband, accompanied by a woman, came into the dining room, and on her rebuke, she refused to wait upon them. She said she had trouble with her husband several months ago while living at Mount Forest.

NEW YORK, April 25.—A despatch from Santiago de Cuba says: Antonio Infinate, a negro, is dead, at the age of 150 years. Despite his great age, the greatest regarded in modern times, he retained all his faculties unimpaired to the end.

He was born in 1757, 19 years before the beginning of the American revolution.

$100,000 Lost in Fire at the Soo Pulp Mill

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., April 24.—The Sault Ste. Marie Pulp and Paper Co's mill was badly damaged by fire yesterday morning, thirteen of twenty-two dryers being destroyed, and also twenty-four of the screens. The center of the mill was burned.

The loss will be over $100,000, but it is fully covered by insurance.

The fire resulted, it is thought, from belt friction.

The insurance is divided between the London and Lancashire, Western, Hartford, Phoenix, Manitoba, German-American, Connecticut and Queen City and a few other companies interested to a lesser extent.

The mill belonged to one of the subsidiary companies of the Lake Superior Power Company, of which C. D. Warren of Toronto, is president. It was of stone, two storeys high and 80x280 feet. The plant had been doing well of late.

The building itself is not very badly damaged, but the ground wood machinery is a total loss.

Later—It is said that Benjamin Schuryster, the injured man, is dead. He was knocked off the roof by the stream from a hose.

No More a Firebrand Than is Sir Wilfrid

OTTAWA, April 25.—In an interview yesterday Mr. Henri Bourassa, of Labelle, said, "In Sir Wilfrid's reference to Canadian firebrands referred to in the cable despatches from London, I notice that he speaks of Mr. Bourassa and others.' I presume the latter reference is to Hon. Sydney Fisher's speech against preferential trade in Montreal on the morrow of the British general elections last year, and to Sir Wilfrid's own speech against the creation of an Imperial council and the policy of Imperial defence delivered at the banquet of the Chambers of Commerce in Montreal in 1904.

"Neither in Quebec nor elsewhere have I made use of any stronger language against Imperialist proposals than these two honorable gentlemen employed on the occasions I have mentioned, but, of course, I have repeated my arguments outside of Quebec. The inference, therefore, would be that it is safer to be a 'firebrand' in Quebec than an Imperial statesman in London.

"However, I will endeavor to stick to my present modest policy, which is the same in Quebec, in Ontario, or anywhere else in the Empire."

Britain Not Obliged to Defend Whole Empire

At Least Premier Campbell-Bannerman Says No Written Obligation Exists--Says Colonies Recognize Their Obligation.

LONDON, April 25.—In the House of Commons yesterday Premier Campbell-Bannerman stated he was unaware of any country which on the whole gives as favorable trade treatment to the self-governing colonies as did the United Kingdom. Harold Cox asked the Premier whether the British obligation to defend the self-governing colonies had ever been defined, and what reciprocal obligation the colonies had undertaken for the defence of the United Kingdom.

The premier replied that the obligation of the United Kingdom to defend the Empire was independent of any written agreement. There seemed no doubt the colonies recognize an obligation to assist in the defence of the Empire as a whole.

REAL SECURITY NOW.

In the House of Commons Mr. Haldane, minister of War, said he was rejoiced to know the colonial premiers had decided his army scheme was the best pattern of organization, "so that we should have an imperial territorial force, which would give us real security."

AUTONOMY FOR CANADA.

MONTREAL, April 25.—Le Canada, the French Liberal organ in Montreal daily, discussing the work of the colonial conference says: "We would be more anxious regarding the outcome of the conference if we were not certain that our representative at London, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, will not give way to the Imperialists. We are going forward towards autonomy. More than that, we are now self-governing. Our contribution to the Empire lies in the marked development of our country. The manner of free contribution is entirely in conformity with the policy of imperial autonomy, and we do not want any other. Sir Wilfrid knows that the whole country is with him on this point."

Mr. Rishor's Baby Has Passed Away

Risnor, will extend to them their most sincere sympathy over the affliction they have sustained in the death of their youngest son, Archibald Douglas, which occurred yesterday morning at five o'clock. The deceased was two years and nine months old. The funeral will take place this afternoon at three o'clock to Little Lake cemetery.

Inveterate Tea Drinker Feared Paralysis

Steady use of either tea or coffee often produces alarming symptoms as the poison (caffeine) contained in these beverages acts with more potency in some persons than in others.

"I was never a coffee drinker" writes an Ill. woman, "but a tea drinker. I was very nervous, had frequent spells of sick headache and heart trouble, and was subject at times to severe attacks of bilious colic.

"No end of sleepless nights — would have spells at night when my right side would get numb and tingle like a thousand needles were pricking my flesh. At times I could hardly put my tongue out of my mouth and my right eye and ear were affected.

"The doctors told me I was liable to become paralyzed at any time, so I was in constant dread. I took medicine of various doctors and no end of patent medicine—all to no good.

"The doctors told me to quit using tea, but I thought I could not live without it—that it was my only stay. I had been a tea drinker for twenty-five years, was under the doctor's care for fifteen.

"About six months ago, I finally quit tea and commenced to drink Postum.

"I have never had one spell of sick headache since and only one light attack of bilious colic. Have quit having those numb spells at night, sleep well and my health is getting stronger all the time. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Collegiate Cadets Hold a Drill

Three companies of the Collegiate Institute Cadets have held their first drill of the season, and had over 100 present. They were put through squad drill for half an hour by their instructor, Lieut. Hodgson. The corps will drill every Tuesday and Friday, from now on and expect to give a good account of themselves, when the time for inspection comes in June. The outlook for the Cadets is very bright.

Rome's Birthday

ROME, April 24.—While celebrating the 2656 anniversary of Rome, the founding of which is supposed to have taken place April 21, in the year 755 B.C., a most important discovery was made yesterday on Palatin Hill. While trying to determine the entrance to the Palatine Acropolis, and also to explore the Necropolis, a circular ditch was found, evidently a pit or tomb. It is similar to those discovered on the Roman forum. It is believed to be connected with the earliest habitation and to have been constructed by the founders of the Palatine stronghold. Minister of Instruction Rava visited the spot today and ordered a continuation of the excavations.

RECURRING HEADACHES

Do They Bother You ?

You fine life a miserable affair because you have headaches, but you have neither nausea nor are you weak —You know if you could only prevent headaches you would enjoy perfect health.

Such headaches indicate a general lowered condition, because they arise from a general decay of the nervous system.

This depressed condition of the nervous system has its origin in the reduction of the quality and quantity of the blood.

The blood is thin—its red coloring is reduced—it contains no nourishment.

The digestive organs are not supplying it with sufficient nutritive matter.

The result—nerve weakness, nerve debility, ill-health.

If you had used Ferrozone you would know how powerfully all the digestive and assimilative functions of the body are stimulated.

Ferrozone does more—it supplies all the elements that are essential to the rebuilding of the body—supplies the reconstructive forces that contribute to the formation of rich, red blood.

You see, Ferrozone doesn't treat a symptom—it remedies a cause—and that's why a month's treatment will absolutely remove every vestige of recurring nervous headaches.

Nothing like Ferrozone to build you up, to give the reserve of force, that happy health that contributes so much to happiness and contentment.

Ferrozone will make you feel like new, try it—sold by all druggists in 50c. boxes.

THE SWETTENHAM INCIDENT

There seems unfortunately to be very little reason to doubt that a grave injustice was done an excellent servant, when Sir Alexander Swettenham, late Governor of Jamaica, was required to apologize to Admiral Davis, of the United States Navy, for his letter written at the time of the earthquake. It seems that the Governor was notified by the Colonial Office that he must apologize; he replied that he would do so, but that with his apology there would go forward his resignation. He was asked not to resign, but insisted upon doing so. As the facts have been developed it appears that the letter was a private communication between personal friends and was never intended to be published; but some newspaper man got hold of it, and, the story being too good to keep, it was given to the world. At first sight nearly every one thought that Sir Alexander had made a grave mistake, not so much because he had needlessly offended an officer of a friendly nation, but because he had refused assistance of which the people of Kingston were in sore need. As a matter of fact, Admiral Davis made a great, although well-intended blunder. He had no business at all to land an armed force, and it is said that the United States Government was preparing to apologize for his action when the apology from the Governor arrived. This may not be quite accurate, for unfortunately it has for some time been impossible to accept implicitly statements which appear in the British press, so bitter are they against their opponents, but there is no doubt that Governor Swettenham was wholly in the right, although he may not have been very happy in his manner of asking Admiral Davis to withdraw his sailors. His mistake seems to have been that he acted personally instead of officially, but surely this was excusable in view of the great pressure upon him at the time. There is no doubt that he was greatly misjudged. The news came through United States sources, and was received at a time when every one was wondering just how severely the people of Kingston had suffered. The Times among the rest of the Canadian papers thought he had shown exceedingly bad judgment. But something better might have been expected from the Imperial Government. A very unpleasant feature of the case is the statement made by Mr. Winston Churchill in the House of Commons. He said that Sir Alexander asked to be retired on account of age, but this proves, to put it mildly, somewhat inexact. Now that the whole story is told, it looks as if Mr. Churchill had been in a very great hurry to make a favorable impression upon the United States Government.

Laval Students Protest

MONTREAL, April 24.—A petition signed by scores of students of Laval College was received by the city clerk today, calling upon the mayor to stop the proposed Socialist procession on May 1. The petition stated that such demonstrations were against the public peace. It was held that the law strictly forbade all processions that might lead to disorder, and the signers of the petition were of the opinion that disorders would ensue if an attempt to parade and carry banners was made by the Socialists. The city attorney today stated that if the mayor had reason to think that the procession in question or any other procession, will lead to disturbing the public peace, he may prevent such demonstrations.

U. S. Marines Protect the British Flag

PUERTO CORTEZ, April 17, via New Orleans, April 24.—An amusing instance of the armed resistance to American marines by Honduran revolutionists came to light yesterday in the official correspondence of the American gunboat Marietta. Col. Louis Izaula, a revolutionist in command of Tela, Honduras, drew a revolver upon Ensign McNair of the Marietta, when the latter was sent ashore at Tela to say that American marines would protect foreign property. Col. Izaula threatened to kill the ensign if he did not desist in his purpose of landing marines.

Commander Pullam of the Marietta sent a body of marines ashore to demand an apology from Izaula. These marines found the colonel with eight men drawn up in skirmish line, and were told that Col. Izaula demanded an apology of the Americans. When, however, the Americans advanced and said they intended to have an apology, Izaula backed down and wrote one.

Among the acts for which an apology was asked was the cutting down of a British flag at Salado. Izaulas soldiers threatened the life of William Collins, a British subject, who had raised his flag for protection.

Commander Pullam informed the Colonel that the American marines would not allow insults to the British flag.

The American Magazine for May

In the May American Magazine Ray Stannard Baker goes on reporting the facts about the increasing antagonism between the whites and blacks in this country. Some of the stories Mr. Baker tells are extraordinary.

Assistant District Attorney Train of New York County reports "The Patrick Case, Complete"—in which an ingenious conspiracy crumbled, and a famous crime was exposed. Mr. Train's article is really a great murder story. Walter Prichard Eaton writes a fine character sketch of Oscar Hammerstein, the wonderful New York Jew who has succeeded in establishing a grand opera house that is a real competitor of the Metropolitan Opera House. Miss Tarbell, continuing her history of the tariff, has reached the early 80's. These articles, as they draw near the men and policies of the present day, grow more interesting.

David Grayson writes another of his "Adventures in Contentment." F. Marion Crawford goes on with his serial. Short stories are contributed by Octavia Roberts, Harrison Clark, Mary Stewart Cutting, Mrs. L. H. Harris and John G. Neihardt.

"The Interpreter," whose contributions are always notable, talks this month about spring.

The Joys of Relic Hunting.

Quite apart from the beauty and intrinsic worth of such things, it is astonishing on looking back on one's experiences of collecting to realize how much pleasure one has got out of even a dilettante quest of antiques. The exhilarating joy of this treasure hunt, the finding of the treasure, the bargaining for it and the final bearing of it home in triumph, unwrapping it and discussing its beauties and merits, are things which add zest to life. And, as the taste for beautiful old things is more or less an acquired one and can be cultivated, this is a joy in which most people who are fortunate enough to have a little spare cash and a little spare time can share.—London Tatler.

The Joy of Owning Land.

There is a distinct joy in owning land, unlike that which you have in money, in houses, in books, pictures or anything else which man have devised. Personal property brings you into society with men. But land is a part of God's estate in the globe, and when a parcel of ground is deeded to you and you walk over it and call it your own it seems as if you had come into partnership with the original Proprietor of the earth.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Cause of His Joy.

"What are you looking so happy over, old man?"

"I am rejoicing over the birth of twins."

"Great Scott! I congratulate you!"

"Don't congratulate me. Go and congratulate Evans. He's the lucky man. I never did like him."

His Attentions.

Nan—How attentive young Mr. Allgawn is to his pretty wife! Fan—I don't wonder you notice it, but you must have been misinformed. They are not married yet.

Manhattan Gold Field

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 6300 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

"Respectfully submitted,

"I am sorry," he said, with one of the sudden relapses into old age that Lady Cantourne dreaded. "I may not have a chance of seeing him to thank him personally. A good servant is so rare nowadays. These modern democrats seem to think that it is a nobler thing to be a bad servant than a good one. As if we were not all servants!"

He was thirsting for details. There were a thousand questions in his heart, but not one on his lips.

"Will you have the kindness to remember my desire," he went on suavely, "when you are settling up with your man?"

"Thank you," replied Jack. "I am much obliged to you."

"And in the meantime, as you are without a servant, you may as well make use of mine. One of my men—Henry—who is too stupid to get into mischief—a great recommendation, by the way—understands his business. I will ring and have him sent over to your rooms at once."

He did so, and they sat in silence until the butler had come and gone.

"We have been very successful with the simiacine, our scheme," said Jack suddenly. I have brought home a consignment valued at £70,000."

Sir John's face never changed.

"And," he asked, with veiled sarcasm, "do you carry out the—er—commercial part of the scheme?"

"I shall begin to arrange for the sale of the consignment tomorrow. I shall have no difficulty, at least I anticipate none. Yes, I do the commercial part as well as the other. I held the plateau against 2,000 natives for three months with fifty-five men. But I do the commercial part as well."

As he was looking into the fire still, Sir John stole a long comprehensive glance at his son's face. His old eyes lighted up with pride and something else, possibly love. The clock on the mantelpiece struck 11. Jack looked at it thoughtfully, then he rose.

"I must not keep you any longer," he said somewhat stiffly.

Sir John rose also.

"I dare say you are tired; you need rest. In some ways you look stronger, in others you look fagged and pulled down."

"It is the result of my illness," said Jack. "I am really quite strong."

He paused, standing on the hearth rug, then suddenly he held out his hand.

"Good night," he said.

"Good night."

Sir John allowed him to go to the door, to touch the handle, before he spoke.

"Then"— he said, and Jack paused. "Then we are no further on?"

"In what way?"

"In respect to the matter over which we unfortunately disagreed before you went away?"

Jack turned with his hand on the door.

"I have not changed my mind in any respect," he said gently. "Perhaps you are inclined to take my altered circumstances into consideration, to modify your views."

"I am getting rather old for modification," answered Sir John suavely.

"And you see no reason for altering your decision?"

"None."

"Then I am afraid we are no further on," he paused. "Good night," he added gently as he opened the door.

"Good night."

Lady Cantourne was meant for happiness and a joyous motherhood. She had had neither; but she went on being "meant" until the end—that is to say she was still cheery and capable. She had thrown an open letter on the little table at her side—a letter from Jack Meredith announcing his return to England and his natural desire to call and pay his respects in the course of the afternoon.

"So," she had said before she laid the letter aside, "he is home again—and he means to carry it through?"

While she still sat there the bell rang. When Jack Meredith came into the room she rose to greet him with a smile of welcome.

"Before I shake hands," she said, "tell me if you have been to see your father."

"I went last night—almost straight from the station. The first person I spoke to in London, except a cabman."

So she shook hands.

"You know," she said, without looking at him—indeed, carefully avoiding doing so—"life is too short to quarrel with one's father. At least it may prove too short to make it up again—that is the danger."

"The quarrel was not mine," he said. "I admit that I ought to have known him better. I ought to have spoken to him before asking Millicent. It was a mistake."

Lady Cantourne looked up suddenly. "What was a mistake?"

"Not asking his—opinion first."

She turned to the table where his letter lay and fingered the paper pensively.

"I thought, perhaps, that you had found that the other was a mistake—the engagement."

"No," he answered.

"Millicent will be in presently," she said; "she is out riding."

They talked of his life in Africa, of his success with the simiacine, of which discovery the newspapers were not yet weary, until the bell was heard in the basement, and thereafter Millicent's voice in the hall.

Lady Cantourne rose deliberately and went downstairs to tell her niece that he was in the drawing room, leaving him there waiting alone.

Presently the door opened [illegible] cent hurried in. She threw her gloves and whip—anywhere—on the floor and ran to him.

"Oh, Jack!" she cried.

It was very prettily done. In its way it was a poem.

"And, Jack, do you know," she went on, "all the newspapers have been full of you. You are quite a celebrity. And are you really as rich as they say?"

"I think I can safely say that I am not," he answered.

Lady Cantourne left them there for nearly an hour, in which space of time she probably reflected they could build up as rosy a future as was good for them to contemplate. Then she returned to the drawing room, followed by a full sized footman bearing tea.

"Oh, Jack!" she cried.

She was too discreet a woman, too deeply versed in the sudden changes of the human mind and heart, to say anything until one of them should give her a distinct lead. They were not shy and awkward children. Perhaps she reflected that the generation to which they belonged is not one heavily handicapped by too subtle a delicacy of feeling.

Jack Meredith gave her the lead before long.

"Millicent," he said without a vestige of embarrassment, "has consented to be openly engaged now."

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

par value $1.00. As a result of last summer's work numerous veins of rich ore were uncovered, assaying from $10 up to $5000. There is every indication that this property will prove sensationally rich, and with the low capitalization of $500,000, $150,000 of which is in the Treasury, the dividends should be large, and the stock become very valuable. This is a thorough business mining proposition, and will stand the most critical examination. INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Happenings Around the Local Police Station.

At yesterday's session of the police court only one case was tried and that was one that might easily have been settled by the complainants and defendants "having it out," by use of their harmless fists as did their daddies whilst they were boys. It seems that two brothers named Keller called at the police station and told the chief a tale of woe to the effect that sundry other boys had attacked and threatened to beat them. The chief considering that an assault had been committed, got the Kellers to swears out an information. When the evidence of the complainants' was taken the whole matter resolved itself into a small boys' row that the boys could, and should have settled by a few rounds in a back yard. The magistrate dismissed the case.

As an attendant at the court remarked, "Good Lord, when I was a boy, we used to settle up a matter like that in a five-minute fight. It looks like the police of this city are mighty anxious to show that there is a police court. The police would do a ——— sight better by preventing trouble than bringing a few boys who have had a scrap into court!"

Thousands of Fish are Destroyed

Mr. Whetung of Chemong Speaks of Result of Lowering the Water.

Mr. Dan Whetung, jr., of Chemong, one of the most expert fishermen of this county yesterday noted that the ice in Mud Lake has all gone. On Monday, Mr. Whetung brought some passengers across the bridge. In one place he had to drive over a pile of ice, and the passengers had to walk most of the way. A large part of the railing was torn off.

Mr. Whetung remarked that residents around Mud Lake are complaining of the action taken during the last few days in lowering the water in the lake. He says that the water has been lowered some three feet and still going down. This, he insists will have the result of killing off scores of thousands of fish of all kinds, as the eggs, now laid along the edges of the lake will be left to perish. He thinks this lowering of the water will result in a fish famine at Chemong.

Cap Rouge Ice Still Holds Fast

MONTREAL, April 24.—St. Lawrence navigation is as usual being retarded by the Cap Rouge ice bridge. The ice is not finding its way out around Cap Rouge as well as it was expected would be the case. There is today at that point some fifteen feet of ice, and until this block gets away there will be no opening of navigation. It was thought that the high tide of the 16th of this month would disturb the immense mass of ice to such an extent as to start it going, but the ice has not moved a particle, and at the present time grave fears are entertained that the next high tide, which occurs on the 28th inst., may not be able to move the ice away.

If a heavy above does occur on that date navigation will open immediately, and just about as soon as in other years, otherwise it will probably be the 10th or 12th of May before an ocean-going steamer reaches Montreal.

Mr. W. Graham is Convalescent

A letter received yesterday from Mr. William Graham of Smith, who has been under treatment at the Victoria Memorial Hospital, Toronto, contained the pleasing intelligence that he is gradually improving. Miss Stella Morrow Entertains

Last night Miss Stella, daughter of Mr. Bernard Morrow, the popular county registrar, entertained some seventy of her young friends at the family residence, Water street, in front of Victoria Park. A very pleasant evening enlivened by dancing and games were enjoyed by all present. The party broke up an early hour this morning, and Miss Morrow's guests were unanimous in considering that Miss Morrow and her parents are most admirable entertainers.

Furious Bird Fight

Yesterday a fierce battle of the birds was fought at the rear of The Times offices, and on the market square. The fight which was witnessed by quite a number of men, arose by a couple of Martins or, as some people call them "swallows," trying to commence building a nest for future housekeeping under the eaves of The Times building. It seems that a number of sparrows had taken up a claim on this location. Whenever one of the Martins would attempt to locate at the spot mentioned, the sparrows would circle about chattering and picking at the intruders. There must have been several hundred of these impertinent little English immigrants gathered together within a very few minutes and the native Canadian Martins had to retreat, and seek another location for their summer's domesticity.

COMMON SENSE

Leads most intelligent people to use only medicines of known composition. Therefore it is that Dr. Pierce's medicines, the makers of which print every ingredient entering into them upon the bottle wrappers and attest its correctness under oath, are daily growing in favor. The composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines is open to everybody. Dr. Pierce [illegible] of having [illegible] his formulæ. [illegible] concern [illegible] known the most [illegible] great [illegible] being wholly made [illegible] active medicinal principles extracted from native forest roots, by exact processes original with Dr. Pierce, and without the use of a drop of alcohol, triple-refined and chemically pure glycerine being used instead in extracting and preserving the curative virtues residing in the roots employed, these medicines are entirely free from the objection of doing harm by creating an appetite for either alcoholic beverages or habit-forming drugs. Examine the formula on their bottle wrappers—the same as sworn to by Dr. Pierce, and you will find that his "Golden Medical Discovery," the great blood-purifier, stomach tonic and bowel regulator—the medicine which, while not recommended to cure consumption in its advanced stages (no medicine will do that) yet does cure all those catarrhal conditions of head and throat, weak stomach, torpid liver and bronchial troubles, weak lungs and hang-on-coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated lead up to and finally terminate in consumption.

Take the "Golden Medical Discovery" in time and it is not likely to disappoint you if only you give it a thorough and fair trial. Don't expect miracles. It won't do supernatural things. You must exercise your patience and persevere in its use for a reasonable length of time to get its full benefits. The ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed have the unqualified endorsement of scores of medical leaders—better than any amount of lay, or non-professional, testimonials. They are not given away to be experimented with but are sold by all dealers in medicines at reasonable prices.

Price of Ice Cream Sodas Up

Girls will have to give a broader, deeper and more lingering smile, and in some instances possibly kisses to swains with the price of ice cream sodas in their jeans, as the price for such luxuries this summer in Peterborough is to be raised to ten cents. Anyway a man is a great sight better off to blow in ten cents for an ice cream soda than buy two John Collins for 25 cents and thereby possibly imbibe seven or eight of the Collins when he only wanted and went in to get one. The best girl's smile at ten cents per ice cream soda is a mighty sight better than the several "smiles" he would get in a bar.

"MINES AND NEAR-MINES"

We told you last week about "get rich propositions," where promoters owned a piece of barren ground, incorporated a company and sold stock for their personal uses.

In locating claims, a claim being 600 feet by 1,500 feet, the long way of the claim lies along the location ledge. A claim located on the side line adjoining, while advertised as being near such a property does not follow that it is as good or any good, compared with the mine they are using to sell their stock. In some cases they have proved bonanzas, but the chances are against it. We have two claims end to end, on a rich ledge, 1,000 feet of ledge matter. We are selling stock at 25c. per share (par value $1.00) to place a mill on the property, when no more stock will be sold at this price. We have ore enough in sight to warrant this investment, and we anticipate that the stock will go above par.

We want you to write us, and we will tell you all about it. Silver Queen Mining Co., 34 Bacon Bldg., Oakland, California. Mines in the "Wonder District," Nevada.

VOL XXXV. NO. 99 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, APRIL 26 1907 PRICE TWO CENTS

A NASTY CHARGE AGAINST WHITNEY

E. M. MacDonald Says He is Looking After His Political Friends---Premier Makes a Warm Reply.

OTTAWA, April 26.—In the Commons yesterday morning E. M. Macdonald, M.P., said that the Hon. J. P. Whitney less than a year ago wrote to the minister of militia declaring he was willing to give the whole 52,000 acres of land at Petawawa to the Federal Government for a nominal rental of $10 a year, and on this basis he asks the Legislature of Ontario to present an address to the Lieutenant-Governor asking him to protest against this invasion of the rights of the people of that Province by this Federal Government."

Mr. R. L. Borden: "Why didn't they accept it?"

Mr. E. M. Macdonald: "Because the premier of Ontario said to the minister of militia and defence; 'There are some of my political friends down there that have some timber licenses, and as soon as you settle with my political friends in the County of Renfrew and have given them the amount they are asking, then I will come round and do business with you.'"

Mr. R. L. Borden: "The letter to which he alludes speaks of the rights of the licensees, does it not—the letter which you have just read?"

Mr. E. M. Macdonald—"I will read it again. This is the position taken by Mr. Whitney on May 16th 1906, speaking on behalf of his government:

"'We have decided that as soon as you have completed your settlement with the timber licensees—

"'That is, as soon as you have settled with my political friends in the County of Renfrew, we will give you a lease of the 52,000 acres of land for $10 a year. Those are the facts disclosed in the correspondence.'"

Mr. Sproule—"How does the hon. gentleman know they are his political friends?"

Mr. E. M. Macdonald—"My hon. friend need only turn to the hon. gentleman who sits behind him to get his answer."

CALLS IT UNWORTHY.

Mr. Sproule—"This is an unworthy suggestion."

Mr. E. M. MacDonald—"I don't want to be unfair; I don't want to mention names; but if my hon. friend will read the papers he will find them."

Mr. Sproule—"The hon. gentleman is throwing out insinuations."

Mr. E. M. Macdonald—"If he wants to know who they are he had better ask the hon. member for North Renfrew, who sits behind him (Mr. White)—he knows. I am not here to make insinuations, but to discuss the facts found in the papers. I am here to say that this hysterical action on the part of the Conservative Government of Ontario in passing this silly resolution, followed up as it is by this resolution in this House, is a burlesque on free government of this country.

WHITNEY'S COMMENTS.

TORONTO, April 26.—"Any language applied to me or the government regarding the resolution passed," said Mr. Whitney, when asked as to Mr. MacDonald's charges, "applies equally to the Liberal Opposition. The Provincial House was a unit in the matter. It spoke, I believe, for the whole people of Ontario.

"I am not inclined at first hand to pay very serious attention to the remarks of this Mr. MacDonald. He is making a race for the cabinet, I understand, and, perhaps, deems this a best endeavor to reach his goal.

"The records speak for themselves, as to the facts," the prime minister declared, "and as to what is quoted I do not care to speak until I discover exactly what was said.

"We have first the peculiar wording of the despatch to the lieutenant-governor, next the telegram from the department to Mr. Graham, and now the reports of what is purported to have been told the House by Hon. Mr. Fielding and others, each one of which differs diametrically from the others as to the facts stated."

Hon. Mr. Whitney stated that when he had had an opportunity of consulting the Hansard, he might have something further to say.

Sentenced Convict Gives Good Advice

Local Stabber Gives in Few Words a Sermon Worth Remembering.

Yesterday morning after the police court was over and he was in a cell awaiting his trip to Castle Nesbitt preparatory to his six years' servitude in Kingston Penitentiary, Cameron alias Chambers, who pleaded guilty to stabbing three men a week or so ago, in a local hotel, gave a temperance lecture all condensed into one line. To the reporters present he said, referring to the cause of his present trouble, "Leave the booze alone! I!" Here is thought for reflection. A young man, in his early manhood, who has spent many years behind the bars, and has naturally been brought into constant contact with criminals worse than himself, laid the whole cause of his present degradation to the use of intoxicants. Now the old Biblical term, 'Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings, etc.,' is beyond dispute, to get down to practical everyday matters of present interest this short sentence of a man convicted and sentenced to a term of years in a penitentiary, "Leave the booze alone," may and should convey a lesson to the growing youth of Peterborough and elsewhere that is well worth serious study and faithful cooperation.

Fire Hall to be Changed for Offices

Among other matters to be considered by the Property Committee of the City Council, of which it is likely a meeting will be called this week, is the remodelling of the old fire hall to accommodate the city officials. A plan has been prepared by the city engineer and will be submitted to the committee.

Local Lawyer and Veterinary Scrap

To paraphrase a song from the old time Gilbert & Sullivan opera, H.M.S. Pinafore, yesterday on Water street, it was "Sing Ho the valliant lawyer and the vet." It seems that a leading veterinary surgeon of the city, who is very rightly incensed over the recent cowardly poisoning of dogs in his neighborhood, happened to meet a prominent member of the local bar (legal expression only!) The two gentlemen had a conversation over the recent untimely departure to canine paradise of various dogs. The argument resulted in the vet. calling the limb of the Law a name rhyming with fire, and which carried a direct insinuation as to the latter's veracity. Upon this the lawyer landed on the doctor's jaw with his good right fist, before the vet. expecting any such unforseen collision. It was expected that the vet. was going to lay an information at the police station, but his nationality precluded any such leaning upon the law's strong arm for support, and no such action will be taken.

It is to be hoped that, as the whole trouble arose out of a hasty and unconsidered remark being met by a spontaneous, and possibly regretted, application of a bunch of five digits, that the matter will be forgiven and forgotten.

Great Conservative Rally is Tonight

Some of the Most Eloquent Speakers of the Dominion to be Present.

Among the prominent speakers at tonight's great Conservative mass meeting are;

MR. A. C. BOYCE, M.P., West Algoma.

MR. J. G. H. BERGERON, M.P., Beauchamp's, Quebec.

MR. GEO. W. FOWLER, M. P., King's and Albert, N.B.

HON. W. J. HANNA M.P.P., West Lambton, Provincial Secretary.

The meeting will begin at eight o'clock, and it is important that all should be on hand early in order to secure good seats.

Judging by present indications the building will be crowded to the doors. A number of visitors are coming from outside points to hear the distinguished array of speakers, who will discuss earnest, convincing and instructive manner.

Ladies are cordially invited to be present. Seats will be especially reserved for them and their escorts.

Fined $5 for Holding up H. M. Mails

Our readers will remember that a few nights ago Mr. Alex. Reid, the faithful mail carrier of this city, was robbed. Yesterday at noon Wm. McGee, of this city, was arrested by P.C. Newhall, it being alleged that he is the man who attempted to hold up the mail carrier.

It seems that McGee was a witness on the Royal Hotel case yesterday morning and Reid was in the court room listening to the evidence. He identified McGee as the man with whom he had the fight, and promptly informed P.C. Newhall that McGee was the man they were looking for. P.C. Newland and P.C. Mehurry at once ran down the street and arrested McGee.

It is rumored that McGee has confessed his guilt. He had a cut over his left eye, possibly made by a blow from the mail bag. A special sitting of the court was held during the afternoon, when Wm. McGee, the prisoner, pleaded guilty and was fined $5—the fine to be paid within ten days.

County Clergymen Meet in Colborne

Rev. Canon Davidson, Rural Dean, Rev. H. F. Battersby, Young's Point, Rev. Walter Creighton, Lakefield, and Rev. A. Bugshaw, Hall's Bridge, are among those in the town of Colborne, attending the rural deanery meeting of Peterborough and Northumberland. The meeting is being held in Trinity church. The sermon of Wednesday evening was preached by Rev. G. R. Beamish, rector of St. Thomas' church, Belleville. At the sitting yesterday, the chief topics for discussion were,—"The Incarnation with Reference to Modern Thought," and "Vestry Meetings, their use and abuse."

Medical Men Met Last Night

Dr. Malcolm McCulloch read a paper on "Vaccination and its Opponents," at the annual meeting of the Central Ontario Medical Association, held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers yesterday evening, when the election of officers took place and other important business was attended to.

WOMEN PAY MORE

Why Insurance Companies Discriminate Against the Gentle Sex.

Medical examiners of insurance companies say that the reason a woman pays more for the privilege of insurance than a man, is from the fact that women more readily fall victims to indigestion and stomach troubles and the fatal ailments that spring from these causes.

All persons, they say, who have a weakened digestive system and suffer from sick headache, dizzy spells, distress after eating, specks before the eyes, bloating, nervousness, sleeplessness, and the many other symptoms of indigestion, soon lower the tone of the whole system and are most susceptible to a fatal illness.

For curative power in all stomach troubles, nothing else is as safe yet effective, nothing else can be thoroughly relied upon to relieve all troubles from indigestion as Mi-o-na. It is unlike any remedy heretofore known, and is really one of the valuable discoveries in modern medical science.

It is not the acute attacks that influence the insurance examiners alone, but the constant feelings of weakness, headaches, indigestion and stomach troubles—these things, physicians say, kill more people than many more serious diseases.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c box of Mi-o-na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents. Booth's Miona Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Found Skeletons 20,000 Years Old

Altoona, Pa., April 26.—A discovery of the greatest scientific importance was made near here yesterday when the perfectly preserved bones of several gigantic prehistoric animals were unearthed purely by accident when blasting in the limestone quarries of the American Lime and Stone Company along the Pennsylvania Railroad just east of Hollidaysburg.

The discoveries were made in a limestone formation thirty-five feet below the surface of the rock, the formation of which has been estimated by scientists to have taken place 20,000 years ago.

The bones are those of different animals or animals of different ages from baby creatures to those which had attained their full growth. Three pieces, the thigh, joint ball and socket, were found to be intact after the blast. The thigh is ten and one-half inches in diameter and the joint ball seven and one-half inches in diameter. One tooth, six and one-half inches long and three and one-half inches wide, is ribbed crosswise with five ribs, having chisel-like edges three-quarters of an inch deep.

Our Local Member's Splendid Work

The press of this city have recently noted various sums granted towards the completion of specified public works in this county, by the Dominion Government. For instance, the sum of $700,000 has been devoted to completion of the Trent Valley Canal; $50,000 towards the Peterborough armory; $2,000 towards local public buildings; $1,200 for Gannon's Narrow bridge wharf; $1,000 to the wharf at Gore's Landing; $5,000 towards dredging the Otonabee River, wharves at Lakefield, and other work of public benefit in the County of Peterborough; the whole appropriation amounting to nearly one million dollars.

Now, whilst the City and County of Peterborough are grateful for this substantial recognition of their claims for a share of the Dominion's funds, it does seem somewhat ungrateful that the gentleman, to whose efforts these appropriations are due, should not receive more general and public recognition. Mr. R. R. Hall, the representative of West Peterborough, has undoubtedly been the main factor in obtaining these substantial grants for his county, and his constituents must recognize that Mr. Hall has done more for his county during his tenure of office than any former member for this riding. It is a well known fact, acknowledged by those who follow the news from Ottawa, that Mr. Hall has been an insistent and persistent advocate for the interests of West Peterborough.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"Painting the Town"

This big laughing success was presented at the Grand Opera House last night to a large and demonstratively appreciative audience. The offering is a side splitting musical comedy that stands at the front rank of mirth-provoking entertainments. It is replete with bright, sparkling music and irresistibly funny situations from start to finish. It is very tastefully staged, and with a perfection of detail that reflects much credit on the management. The house-top scene is especially to be commended.

John F. Leonard and Will Halliday are two of the funniest of funny comedians and their comedy and humor last night kept the big audience in a perfect uproar for close on three hours. It is seldom one meets with so talented a pair of comedians travelling with an organization.

Marie King is quite charming and effective in pretty ballet dancing. The Trans-Atlantic Four are a quartette of high-class vocal talent, and their efforts last night called for five encores and still the audience wanted more.

The company is well balanced and chorused, and presents a charming musical attraction that can return again and again, and each time meet with crowded houses.

A novel and intensely pleasing portion of the production is that where the scene is supposed to represent the stage of the Novelty Musical Hall during the production of the new Oriental opera entitled, "Rum Jum." In this scene some of the performers enact their parts from a box, the auditorium and the orchestra, which presents a charming realism to a very amusing portion of the comedy. The costumes here are superb and costly.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, in booking "Painting the Town," secured to their patrons one of the best offerings touring the continent.

A Desperate Brigand

WARSAW, April 25.—A notorious brigand, Stanikaus Lis, the author of many crimes, has been captured at Lubin, 95 miles from here, mortally wounded, after the house in which he had sought refuge had been blown to pieces by artillery fire. Lis, when he saw that a detachment of police was advancing on the house, barricaded himself within and opened fire on the police, killing several of them. Troops were summoned to the assistance of the police, but they were unable to dislodge the bandit. Finally several quick firing field pieces were brought up and trained on the house. Eight shots hit the building, which was demolished, after which the infantry stormed the ruins and found Lis desperately wounded, trying to reload his revolver, which he had emptied at the attacking party.

APPENDICITIS

Not at all Necessary to Operate in Many Cases.

Automobiles and Appendicitis scare some people before they are hit.

Appendicitis is often caused by too much starch in the bowels. Starch is hard to digest and clogs up the digestive machinery—also tends to form cakes in the cecum. (That's the blind pouch at the entrance to the appendix). "A N. H. girl had appendicitis, but lived on milk for awhile—then Grape-Nuts and got well without an operation.

She says: "Five years ago while at school, I suffered terribly with constipation and indigestion." (Too much starch, white bread, potatoes, etc., which she did not digest).

"Soon after I left school I had an attack of appendicitis and for thirteen weeks lived on milk and water. When I recovered enough to eat solid food there was nothing that would agree with me, until a friend recommended Grape-Nuts.

"When I began to eat Grape-Nuts I weighed 98 lbs., but I soon grew to 115 lbs. The distress after eating left me entirely and now I am like a new person."

(A little Grape-Nuts dissolved in hot water or milk would have been much better for this case than milk alone, for the starchy part of the wheat and barley is changed into a form of digestable sugar in making Grape-Nuts.) Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

RESOLUTION PASSED BY THE CONFERENCE

Is in Favor of Keeping British Immigration Within the Empire--Empire Day is Not Official.

LONDON, April 26.—The Canadian Associated Press is informed a resolution was unanimously adopted at yesterday's session of the colonial conference calling for the encouragement of emigration to the colonies rather than to foreign countries.

John Burns delivered an interesting speech, during which he dwelt on the necessity of providing increased facilities for emigration to the colonies and foreign countries.

The question of naturalization was also discussed. Herbert Gladstone spoke regarding the divorce law prevailing in the different colonies on this question.

NAVAL DEFENCE.

The Canadian Associated Press understands the question of naval defence is not likely to again come before the conference until the various matters under consideration have been made the subject of a conference between the premiers and admiralty.

The Canadian Associated Press correspondent, in leaving the Colonial Office, met a Canadian—one of the best posted in London on emigration matters—who, on being informed that emigration had been discussed by the conference, remarked; "Canada is doing splendidly now in the way of emigration, and will continue to do so if they leave us alone. We don't want any of those assisted-passage emigrants."

EMPIRE DAY NOT POPULAR.

LONDON, April 26.—The prime minister, replying to a question in the House yesterday, said it was doubtful whether sufficient interest was taken in Empire Day to justify its official recognition.

BOERS WOULD HELP.

LONDON, April 26.—Lord Elgin presided at the banquet of the premiers of the self-governing colonies, held in the Colonial Institute. There was a brilliant assemblage.

Lord Tweedmouth, replying to Mr. Smartt, who proposed "Forces of the Empire," said that the conditions in the empire at the present day had to be considered, and not the conditions of a hundred years hence.

Sir Frederick Borden, who followed, said Mr. Smartt's suggestion was a difficult, controversial one, in which it was better not to enter into details. If ever British authority was challenged, what happened a few short years since would happen again, but in ten times greater degree. (Cheers.)

The chief point of the speech of Lord Elgin, who proposed "A United Empire," and spoke of good feeling which characterized the conference, was the prolonged cheering which greeted the mention of Joseph Chamberlain.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said Mr. Smartt was more of a warrior than he was. (Laughter.) He eulogized in glowing terms the British Government's action in granting a constitution to the Transvaal, prophesying that if ever the British Empire was called upon to draw its sword from the scabbard, the men who fought each other in South Africa would be found fighting side by side under the old flag.

DEAKIN FOR PREFERENCE.

Premier Deakin, after some staff with reference to the privacy of the conference, spoke plainly on the question of preference. Having referred to the probability that the organization of an analogous general staff would be created in connection with the naval defence, he proceeded, amidst cheers, "but does the empire exist only for defence? Are we to stand, shoulder to shoulder, on battlefield, side by side, on the ironclad, but to pass each other by as strangers in the paths of peace? We have our merchants, ship-owners, and traders exposed to competition which is unfair. Surely the least we can do is to insist on equal terms for our own people."

English Pugilist Held for Murder

LONDON, April 26.—"Pedlar" Palmer, the ex-champion bantam-weight English pugilist, and another man were arrested on suspicion of having caused the death of an unknown man, whose body was found on the carriage of a train, coming from Epsom after the races, in which Palmer and his companion had ridden. The man apparently was killed by heavy blows. Other passengers heard the sounds of a violent quarrel coming from the carriage occupied by the party.

SAW PALMER HIT HIM.

LONDON, April 26. — "Pedlar" Palmer, the English pugilist, who with another man was arrested yesterday on suspicion of having caused the death of an unknown man whose body was found on a railroad car coming from Epsom, after the races, was charged at Croyden in the police court with murder. After a passenger on the train had testified that he saw Palmer strike the deceased several blows because he refused to stop singing, the prisoner was remanded.

Spain and England Virtually Allied

NEW YORK, April 26.—A despatch from Madrid says;

The Correspondencia De La Espana says it has diplomatic authority for stating that the effect of the meeting of King Alfonso and King Edward at Cartagena was the perfection of a far-reaching understanding for the purpose of war and peace. It would have been considered in the last century, according to the paper, an alliance, but in modern diplomatic language it is an entente cordiale. Everything concerning Morocco was ratified, everything in reference to the general European situation was discussed, and the basis was formulated of an agreement which is now in the hands of the diplomatists.

BUYS WARSHIPS IN BRITAIN.

MADRID, April 26.—In the matter of Spain's naval increases it is understood that the Government has decided upon the construction of six battleships of the Lord Nelson type, six fast cruisers, and several torpedo boat destroyers. Three of the battleships will be built at Ferrol by British firms, and the remainder of the warships in England. Furthermore, the construction of dry docks capable of caring for a vessel of 20,000 tons, will be undertaken at Cadiz, Ferrol, and Cartagena.

Cameron alias Chambers Given Six Years

Man Who Stabbed Three Men in Alleged Self-Defence Given a Severe Sentence by Magistrate Dumble Yesterday.

Yesterday morning the Sons of Rest, entirely filled the available standing room of the police court, the star attraction being the sentence to be given to Cameron, alias Chambers, who had a week ago pleaded guilty to stabbing three men in the Royal Hotel. The magistrate, when delivering sentence said, "Prisoner, there are three charges against you, and to which you pleaded guilty. The circumstances did not justify your conduct."

Gilbert Blizzard, one of the men who was stabbed by Chambers, was called to the desk to show his wound. He further described how the other men had been injured. His worship said further, "You stabbed right and left with your knife. Your record in the past includes four years in the reformatory and ten years in the Kingston penitentiary. You have had chances to reform but you have not done so. You are better behind the bars as when drunk you are unable to control yourself." In the first of the three stabbing cases, that of Thorndyke, the magistrate gave the prisoner three years in Kingston Penitentiary, and in the other two, three years each, but the last two sentences to run concurrently, thus giving Cameron or Chambers a six-years sentence, which by allowance for good conduct, as was earned by him in his former sentence means two months off for each year's sentence.

When sentenced for the first case, the prisoner remarked, "Well your worship, that seems pretty hard." "Yes," replied the magistrate, "the way of the transgressor is hard."

Sheriff Hall will take the prisoner to Kingston today to begin his term of imprisonment.

There was still a fourth charge against Cameron alias Chambers, viz., that of assaulting an officer (P. C. Mehurry) whilst in performance of his duty. This charge was however dropped by the magistrate.

Bilious Paleness, Now Easily Cured

If you are frequently bilious or have feelings of nausea, there is a reason.

When the liver action is normal the bile is secreted in the proportions necessary to ensure the digestion of fats.

When liver action is irregular it is an evidence of impairment of nerve force.

When these derangements occur, an undue amount of work is thrown upon the liver and kidneys, they rebel—the whole system suffers, and ill-health follows.

Another dangerous result of derangement of the biliary function is constipation. Deadly disease results from this condition.

This is a hateful condition because it ensures two results—heavy dark rings under the eyes and a sallowness that's absolutely abhorrent.

These derangements if allowed to continue excite the formation of gallstones, cause jaundice, catarrhal inflammation of the bowels, and indigestion.

If you wish to get better, the very root of the trouble must be reached.

This can be accomplished only by Ferrozone—a remedy that strengthens the system, the blood, the liver and kidneys.

Ferrozone is food for the nervous system.

It fortifies and strengthens it.

The nervous system controls all the functions of the body.

Improve its tone, you improve the tone of the whole body and this is what Ferrozone accomplishes.

Its first action is to fortify digestion—this means nourishment and more building material.

Ferrozone makes rich, red blood—lots of it, and this means the proper action of all the large and vital organs of the body.

Quickly there comes strength, vigor, endurance—that glow of feeling which we call health.

You are sure of robust health; sure of strong nerves, good appetite; sure to look and feel your best if you use Ferrozone; try this great tonic, sold everywhere in 50c. boxes.

THE STATUS OF CANADA

The Outlook, one of the prominent London weeklies, says that more Canadians share the views of Judge Longley, of Nova Scotia, who said recently that the time had come for Canada to exist as a separate nation, than care to so express themselves. We do not believe it. We are far from believing than any considerable number of Canadians look forward to the independence of the country. It is probably true that thousands of people in the Dominion are not quite satisfied with the present status of Canada, but they look for a larger measure of autonomy within the Empire and not for independence out of it. The whole drift of public sentiment is in that direction, although no one seems to have any idea how what every one desires can be brought about.

In most things Canada is now absolutely independent. It is true that theoretically the Imperial Parliament has jurisdiction over the Dominion, but that jurisdiction is a good deal like what has been said of the power of the sovereign to refuse to assent to a bill passed by Parliament—it is allowed to exist upon the understanding that it shall never be exercised. There is not the slightest probability that any attempt will ever be made to pass a law in London to apply to Canada except with the full consent of the Canadian people, constitutionally expressed through their own Parliament. This is an anomalous and wholly unprecedented state of things, and a century ago would have been considered as impossible. The manner in which colonial independence has been evolved without any suggestion of separation of the Colonies from the Mother Country warrants the belief that the problems presented by existing conditions and the very natural desire of the Colonies for the fullest possible control over everything relating to themselves may be worked out, if only we possess our souls in patience and wait until questions arise before we try to solve them. It is always unwise to jump before you get to the stile, and we think we have observed a very great tendency to do that sort of thing among the people who discuss the future relations of the various parts of the Empire to each other.

MARTYRS OF SCIENCE

HEROES WHO HAVE SACRIFICED THEMBELVES TO RESEARCH.

Acted So In Order to Determine Things In the Aid of Mankind—Awful Experience of Dr. John Hall-Edwards of London Who Devoted His Life to Experimenting With the X-Rays—Is Now Dying.

Slowly, inexorably, there is being enacted in London an inexpressibly sad ending to a drama which, unless a miracle intervenes, must result in another martyr to science.

There Dr. John Hall-Edwards is dying. He is president of the British Electro-Therapeutic Society, and has been one of the great leaders in the investigation of X-ray phenomena.

He is a man of means, with position, loved ones, everything desirable to live for, and yet he must die—another victim of the great cause of science.

Can you imagine anything more altruistic than the motives that led to the fast-ending career of this man? No pecuniary consideration has impelled him to the experiments which have already disabled him. His whole desire has been simply to add another truth to the dazzling crown of science.

Devoted His Life to It.

Since Roentgen gave to the world the mysterious electric ray which penetrates flesh as easily as daylight pierces glass, it has been patent to investigators that untold possibilities for aiding the human race lie back of the wonderful glass tube.

Already this force has been proved a great aid in the cure of cancer, goitre and skin diseases, while as a means of diagnosis it has been the boon of the age to medical science.

Among those men who devoted their lives to experiment with the X-ray, hoping to develop its possibilities, was Dr. Hall-Edwards. He was one of the pioneers of the Roentgen ray. The first operation ever performed by aid of a Roentgen-ray photograph was from one taken by him.

Unconscious of Peril.

Once an expert photographer, he threw all his being into the new science, working day and night. He worked all unconscious of peril, and neglected his general medical practice, until he was acknowledged to be one of the most capable experts in England. In 1900 he went as a radiologist to the Boer war, and published the result of his work on the battlefield.

At present a truth is known regarding X-rays which was not suspected when Dr. Hall-Edwards took up his work. It is that, while the energy is beneficial when applied occasionally to a patient, it is extremely harmful to one who spends too much time in its vicinity.

He Still Experiments.

Not knowing this, Hall-Edwards slept near his instruments; he spent whole days in a room where the mysterious current was turned on full force.

The result was a drying-up of the blood in the veins of his hands. When the vitality had left his hands, the skin became broken out with warts—very painful little lumps—and they increased in number and virulence constantly.

Excruciating pain, as if a red-hot needle had been run into his hand, attacked him. He slept with difficulty, and intermittently.

After having exhausted all possible methods of cure, and now certain that death is but a short way off, Dr. Hall-Edwards does not cease his experiments. Thus does he prove a love for science which does not balk at death.

Cries Out With Pain.

Warts have now broken out on his brow. He wrote a few days ago:—"I have not experienced a moment's freedom from pain for more than two years, and at times the pain is so severe that I am rendered absolutely incapable of work, either physical or mental.

"Hope I have none. Death is certain, and I am waiting for it with such fortitude as I can command. I adjure all who have engaged in X-ray work to protect themselves before it is too late."

Fortunately, it is possible to protect one's self against X-rays. This is the truth which Dr. Hall-Edward's death will give to the world. It has been shown that the rays do not penetrate lead.

A Barricade of Lead.

Thanks to the experience of those who have fallen martyrs to this branch of science, the X-ray investigator now places between himself and the tube a wall of lead. Here, behind the barricade, he may manipulate the levers of the switchboard, while watching through a mirror the operations of the rays.

This is the method adopted by Dr. M. K. Kassabian, of Philadelphia, whose hands are covered with warts, as are those of Dr. Hall-Edwards. Dr. Kassabian believes that, in time, he will recover from the dreadful affliction, which robs him of sleep and causes him constant pain while awake.

As a result of constant exposure to X-rays in perfecting the fluoroscope, Clarence M. Daily, an electrical engineer, assistant in Thomas A Edison's laboratory at West Orange, N.J., died October 2, 1904.

He had undergone no less than seven surgical operations to remove a cancerous growth on his left wrist. Finally, both his arms were amputated.

Spirit of Martyrdom.

Throughout all his sufferings he retained his mental faculties. As an indication of the spirit of martyrdom that lay back of his suffering, one of his last expressions was the hope that Edison, who has been similarly afflicted, but in less degree, might be spared. Much to the surprise of physicians, amputation did not stop the progress of the treacherous ailment, which soon penetrated Daily's system.

By inches, Dr. Louis A. Weigel gave up his life at Rochester, N.Y., in pursuit of the solution of mysteries of the Roentgen light.

What is "All Wool?"

I have met a county magnate, a wealthy man who would not be put off with anything but the best, if he knew it, clad in a handsome "homespun" suit, the delicate blue gray mixture of which I happened to know was produced by the judicious blending of old blue stockings, such as navvies wear with old white stockings. I have seen a "society" lady in a stylish "blanket tweed" motor coat, the composition of which I knew to be of such a nature that it might very easily owe its existence in part to the cast-off hosiery of her own scullery maid, collected from the ash bin. Even the judge trying a case of "misrepresentation of goods" may, as likely as not, be unconsciously sitting in somebody else's thrown away rags that he has bought as "all wool."—A Woolen Manufacturer in Grand Magazine.

His Modest Claim.

A claim for damages against a railroad company is so often a license for exorbitant charges that a simple bill, such as was received by an American railroad company many years ago, even apart from its humorous aspect, is refreshing. It ran as follows:

The —— and —— Railroad company Dr.
to John Smith

July 19, 1837.—To running your Locomotive into my wife; as per Doctor's bill for curing her $10.00
To smashing ban box and spilling her hat 2.37
To upsetting my deer born (wagon) and breaking it 35.00
To hurting me 5.00
$53.37

There is authority for stating that the claim was paid immediately.—Scrap Book.

Her Chilly Retort.

The late Dr. —— of Malden, after pouring forth the story of his undying love in the most touching manner for over an hour to a young woman who he hoped would become his fourth wife, was refused the second time. He started for the door; but, looking around, he said in a most thunderous tone, "By heavens, you are the coldest woman I ever saw!"

The young woman looked up and answered sweetly:

"Oh, no, doctor; you have seen three colder than I!"—Boston Herald.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW. Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 6200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assasays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

"Respectfully submitted,

Lady Cantourne nodded comprehensively.

"I think she is very wise," she said.

"I know she is very wise," she added, turning and laying her hand on Jack's arm. The two phrases had quite a different meaning. "She will have a good husband."

"So you can tell everybody now," chimed in Millicent in her silvery way.

Lady Cantourne was not very communicative during that refined little tea a trois, but she listened smilingly to Jack's optimistic views and Millicent's somewhat valueless comments.

"I am certain," said Millicent, at length boldly attacking the question that was in all their minds, "that Sir John will be all right now. Of course, it is only natural that he should not like Jack to—to get engaged yet. Especially before, when it would have made a difference to him in money, I mean. But now that Jack is independent—you know, auntie, that Jack is richer than Sir John."

Lady Cantourne was rather thoughtful at that moment. She could not help coming back and back to Sir John.

"Of course," she said to Jack, "we must let your father know at once. The news must not reach him from an outside source."

"I will write and tell him," said Jack quietly.

Even funerals and lovers must bow to mealtimes, and Jack Meredith was not the man to outstay his welcome. He saw Lady Cantourne glance at the clock. Clever as she was, she could not do it without being seen by him.

So he took his leave, and Millicent went to the head of the stairs with him.

CHAPTER XXI.

Of late Sir John had felt a singular desire to sit down whenever opportunity should offer, but he had always been found standing on the hearth rug by the butler, and, hard old aristocrat that he was, he would not yield to the somewhat angular blandishments of the stiff backed chair.

He stood for a few moments with his back to the smoldering fire, and, being quite alone, he perhaps forgot to stiffen his neck, for his head drooped, his lips were unsteady; he was a very old man.

A few minutes later, when he strode into the dining room, where butler and footman awaited him, he was erect, imperturbable, impenetrable.

At dinner it was evident that his keen brain was hard at work. He forgot one or two of the formalities which were religiously observed at that solitary table. He hastened over his wine, and then he went to the library. There he wrote a telegram, slowly, in his firm, ornamental handwriting.

It was addressed to Gordon, Loango, and the gist of it was—"Wire whereabouts of Oscard—when he may be expected home."

At half past 8 Jack arrived. Sir John was awaiting him in the library, grimly sitting in his high backed chair, as carefully dressed as for a great reception.

He rose when his son entered the room and they shook hands. There was a certain air of concentration about both, as if they each intended to say more than they had ever said before. The coffee was duly brought. This was a revival of an old custom. In bygone days Jack had frequently come in thus and they had taken coffee before going together in Sir John's carriage to one of the great social functions at which their presence was almost a necessity. Jack had always poured out the coffee—tonight he did not offer to do so.

"I came," he said suddenly, "to give you a piece of news which I am afraid will not be very welcome. Millicent and I have decided to make our engagement known."

"You know," said Sir John gravely, "that I am not much given to altering my opinions. I do not say that they are of any value; but, such as they are, I usually hold to them. When you did me the honor of mentioning this matter to me last year, I gave you my opinion."

"And it has in no way altered?"

"In no way. I have found no reason to alter it."

"Will you, at all events, give me your reasons?" he asked. "I am not a child."

"I think," he said, "that it would be advisable not to ask them."

"I should like to know why you object to my marrying Millicent," persisted Jack.

"Simply because I know a bad woman when I see her," retorted Sir John deliberately.

"I am sorry you have said that," said the son.

"Just," continued the father, "as I know a good one."

He paused, and they were both thinking of the same woman, Jocelyn Gordon.

Sir John had his say about Millicent Chyne, and his son knew that that was the last word. She was a bad woman. From that point he would never move.

There was a long silence, while the two men sat side by side gazing into the fire.

"I am getting too old to indulge in the luxury of pride," said the father at length. "I will attend your marriage. I will smile and say pretty things to the bridesmaids. Before the world I will consent under the condition that the ceremony does not take place before two months from this date."

"I agree to that," put in Jack.

Sir John rose and stood on the hearth rug, looking down from his great height upon his son.

"But," he continued, "between us let it be understood that I move in no degree from my original position. I object to Millicent Chyne as your wife. But I bow to the force of circumstances. I admit that you have a perfect right to marry whom you choose—in two months' time."

So Jack took his leave.

"In two months' time," repeated Sir John, when he was alone, with one of his twisted, cynical smiles—"in two months' time—quelvra verra."

* * * * * * * *

There are some places in the world where a curse seems to brood in the atmosphere. Msala was one of these. Perhaps these places are accursed by the deeds that have been done there. Who can tell?

Could the trees—the two gigantic elms that stood by the river's edge—could these have spoken, they might perhaps have told the tale of this little inland station in that country where, as the founder of the hamlet was in the habit of saying, no one knows what is going on.

All went well with the retreating column until they were almost in sight of Msala, when the flotilla was attacked by no less than three hippopotamuses. One canoe was sunk and four others were so badly damaged that they could not be kept afloat with their proper complement of men. There was nothing for it but to establish a camp at Msala and wait there until the builders had repaired the damaged canoes.

The walls of Durnovo's house were still standing, and here Guy Oscard established himself with as much comfort as circumstances allowed. He caused a temporary roof of palm leaves to be laid on the charred beams, and within the principal room, the very room where the three organizers of the great simiacine scheme had first laid their plans, he set up his simple camp furniture.

Disraeli's Confidence.

Disraeli wrote a letter to his sister in 1833 in which he said: "Heard Macaulay's best speech, 'Mirabeau and Charles Grant.' Macaulay admirable, but, between ourselves, I could floor them all. This entres nous (sic), I was never more confident of anything than that I could carry everything before me in that house. The time will come."

The Poor Girl.

"The woman I marry," he said, "must be glad to take me with all my faults."

"Oh, she will be," the girl replied. "She'll be so desperate that faults won't cut any figure with her."

There is every indication that this property will prove sensationally rich, and with the low capitalization of $500,000, $150,000 of which is in the Treasury, the dividends should be large, and the stock become very valuable. This is a thorough business mining proposition, and will stand the most critical examination. Why Do Women Worry?

First Sign of Failing Health.

Worry is a disease—and it's more—it produces other diseases, because it breaks down the nerves and saps the vitality of the body.

What a pity women don't realize that if they were well—if the blood was nutritious—if the nerves were strong—if all the organs were active—then the little things that irritate and prey on the mind wouldn't receive a moment's thought.

The woman who worries has a poor appetite—she sleeps poorly. If it only lasted for a day or two it might be of small consequence—but she grows limp, miserable, unhappy—worse day by day.

She needs Ferrozone which cures worry by curing the conditions that render worry possible. For nervous, weak women, no tonic is so good; thousands it has cured just like Mrs. M. E. Etherington, of Troy, who writes, "I am quite willing to give a public testimonial for Ferrozone believing it to be a tonic of superior excellence and one that will rapidly build up strength and supply new energy to anyone not feeling well. Last spring I was in a very poor condition of health. I was nervous, felt tired, and completely worn out. No doubt it's quite a common complaint with ladies of my age, but I placed great reliance in Ferrozone, and took it for several weeks. It made me quite strong, and in fact I have been in better health ever since. I can heartily recommend Ferrozone."

Ferrozone cures by making good good blood strong nerves and a healthy body.

This is why it gives color, clearness to the skin, buoyance to the step brightness to the eyes—because with good digestion and activity of the body in all its parts there's health. Price 50c. per box at all dealers.

INTERESTING POLICE NEWS

Happenings Around the Local Police Station.

At yesterday morning's police court, David Hoban when asked "Are you guilty?" to the charge of being drunk, answered, "I guess I was or I would not be here." "Well," replied the magistrate, "Lots of innocent men have been in the dock." P. C. Newhall stated that at the Coliseum, Hoban had been drunk, and had "let out a most unearthly yell." The magistrate fined him $2.

Robert Gibson and Richard Geary were also charged with being drunk. Gibson was fined $2, whilst Geary was allowed to go on his promise to leave town at once and go to his sister's place in Orompbee. Geary left remarking, "God bless your lordship, and thank you kindly!"

Two young men were charged with disorderly conduct. P. C. Newhall testified to their using filthy language on a street corner. They were fined $5 each, to be paid forthwith. Both fines were paid.

A curious part of this trial was that one of the young men vehemently asserted that he did not use the language as charged but other words of somewhat similar sound. He stated that he had telephoned to a local medical man who was present at the time of the alleged disorderly conduct and asked the magistrate to wait until the doctor arrived in court to testify. Shortly afterwards the doctor came into the court. The magistrate remarked, "Well, doctor this young man wants you to testify to the proper style of language he used on a certain night." The doctor after taking the usual oath, said, "Well I'm sorry I can't do that," and then proceeded to corroborate the evidence as given by P. C. Newhall and denied by the defendant.

The charge against Mr. Kelly, proprietor of the Royal Hotel, for permitting disorderly conduct in his house and for keeping a disorderly house, Mr. McWilliams for the defendant, noted that since the original trial, when the case was enlarged until yesterday, the chief had given him a memorandum specifying the dates on which the alleged disorderly conduct had occurred. He took exception to the latter part of the information contending that the act did not cover such a charge. The dates were April 3rd and April 17th.

P. C. Metarry, the first witness, said that on the evening of April 3rd, he was called to the Royal Hotel. The front door glass was broken, the broken glass and blood was on the floor. A man was in the yard bleeding. He asked Kelly, who was behind the bar, how the fight began. This Kelly and the bartender claimed not to know. The police have frequently been called to the house. They have had more trouble with that hotel than any other in the city.

The chief noted that several convictions dating from trouble in the hotel on April 3rd.

After a large number of witnesses had testified the charge was dismissed.

Chemong Indian Welcomes Longboat

Running Deer, an old time runner from the Chemong reserve, was among the Indians at Toronto to welcome Longboat after his victory. Running Deer is well known among the Indians. The Toronto News in speaking of the reception at the city hall, Toronto, said:

The building was illuminated from basement to turret. At half-past seven about three hundred people were gathered. At eight o'clock the number had swelled to a couple of thousand and one hour later there appeared to be one solid mass of people from Terauley street to Yonge street, all impatient for the coming of the Marathon winner.

Representatives of the Y.M.C.A. athletic clubs and boards of directors, all very much elated and prepared to cheer on the slightest provocation. On one of the front steps sat Thomas Longboat, uncle of the runner.

On the eastern stairway at another Indian. He was a little man with a dark face and very black eyes. He belonged to the Mud Lake reserve, north of Peterborough and his name was Running Deer. He had come to Toronto on purpose to see Longboat. Running Deer is growing old, but he declared that he could run a bit himself once. He sold a portion of his winter's receipts from muskrat skins to make the trip to Toronto.

City Officials Inspect Property

The special joint committee of the Board of Health and City Council gathered yesterday on the Dickson Co.'s property south of Harvey street along the river front, to ascertain if any means of drainage could be figured out so that this property could be cut up into building lots and placed on the market. The cost to run an outfall sewer would be very heavy. One citizen has suggested that the city buy the property and hold it for park or other purposes which might present itself in the future.

Mr. Louis Leclaire, who has been connected with the Kingan Hardware Company for some years has accepted a position as traveller with Lewis Bros., a big Montreal wholesale hardware house, and will assume his new duties on May 1st. Mr. Leclaire has not yet arranged where his headquarters will be, but if possible they will be at Peterborough.

Mr. Leclaire was honored Wednesday night by the Knights of Columbus, by being presented with a handsome gold ring, engraved with the insignia of the order. The presentation was made by Mr. D. O'Donnell, as-te deputy, who referred to the esteem in which Mr. Leclaire was held among the Knights.

Mr. Leclaire thanked the Knights the honor done him and for the handsome gift.

A pleasant social time was afterwards spent.

Words of Praise

For the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed, as given by leaders in all the several schools of medicine, should have far more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has THE BADGE OF HONESTY on every bottle-wrapper, in a full list of all its ingredients printed in plain English.

If you are an invalid woman and suffer from frequent headache, backache, gnawing distress in stomach, periodical pains, disagreeable, catarrhal, pelvic drain, dragging-down distress in lower abdomen or pelvis, perhaps dark spots or specks dancing before the eyes, faint spells and kindred symptoms caused by female weakness, or other derangement of the feminine organs, you can not do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The hospital, surgeon's knife and operating table may be avoided by the timely use of "Favorite Prescription" in such cases. Thereby the obnoxious examinations and local treatments of the family physician can be avoided and a thorough course of successful treatment carried out in the privacy of the home. "Favorite Prescription" is composed of the very best native medicinal roots known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments, contains no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs.

Do not expect too much from "Favorite Prescription;" it will not perform miracles; it will not dissolve or cure tumors. No medicine will. It will do as much to establish vigorous health in most weaknesses and ailments peculiarly incident to women as any medicine can. It must be given a fair chance by perseverance in its use for a reasonable length of time.

You can't afford to accept a substitute for this remedy of known composition.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is guarded as sacredly secret and womanly confidences are protected by professional privacy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best laxative and regulator of the bowels. They invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative; two or three a cathartic. Easy to take as candy.

Oddfellows Home from Marmora

The thirty or more local Oddfellows who assisted in organizing a new I.O.O.F. Lodge in Marmora, on Wednesday night, returned home early yesterday morning after a most pleasant outing. The Marmora lodge was opened under most auspicious conditions and will undoubtedly flourish. Among those present were: Grand Master Johnston of Toronto; James Tully, special representative of the Oddfellows' Relief Association; District Grand Master Wm. Hill; District Grand Marshall, J. W. Miller, and many others.

The visitors were entertained at a banquet in the town hall, after the lodge work was over, when a very enjoyable time was spent.

A Snow Storm at Lindsay

Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Bethville, district inspector of weights and measures, who was in Lindsay on Wednesday night, reports that between two and three inches of snow fell in that town during the night. Surely the perennial "frost" that surrounds that town is find enough without the clerk of the weather sending a late April snow storm.

Former Local Medico Kept Busy

The Mail & Empire says: Dr. R. W. Bell, Provincial health officer, has just returned from a visit to the townships of Hay and Steph in the County of Huron, where he reports sixty cases of smallpox, most of which are in the village of Dashwood. Until the arrival of Dr. Bell on the community, many of the cases had not been visited by a doctor.

Local Railwayman Leaves Town

Mr. Alfred Welbourn, who has been an employe of the Grand Trunk for the past twenty-six years, has severed his connection with that company, and leaves in a few days to accept a position as foreman on a new railway in New Ontario. Mr. Welbourn has been a resident of Peterborough for several years coming here from Keene, and has many friends in the city.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

ARMY OF MISERY INVADES LONDON

Thousands of Unemployed Carry Their Grievances to House of Commons.

ALL VICTIMS OF PEACE

Procession Made up of Discharged Employes from Woolwich Arsenal.

London, April 26.—The "cry of the unemployed" was raised in London again last night when several thousand skilled workmen who had been discharged from the Woolwich arsenal as an outcome of War Secretary Haldane's scheme of reducing military expenses marched with bands and banners the long distance from Woolwich to the House of Commons to impress their grievances upon the Government.

The complaints of the men are far reaching, representing not only the loss of employment but the wiping out of their savings invested in little properties located in the historical and heretofore prosperous town of Woolwich.

Some of the discharged men had been employed in the arsenal at Woolwich for not less than thirty years. A number of printers and other tradesmen, laborers, and citizens joined the procession, which was further augmented by a strong body of workers from the army clothing factory at Pimlico. The entire eight miles of march was thickly lines with spectators.

MARCH EIGHT MILES.

The procession, which was perfectly orderly, was halted at St. George's Circle, one mile from the Houses of Parliament, and from here a deputation of picked men proceeded to the House of Commons to lay the grievances of themselves and their comrades before Premier Campbell-Bannerman.

The premier received the deputation in a private room, War Secretary Haldane and Baron Tweedmouth, First Lord of the Admiralty, being present. William Crooks, member of the House of Parliament for Woolwich, introduced the deputation and the men explained their grievances.

GOVERNMENT IS SORRY.

The Premier made a sympathetic reply, and assured the men of the Government's anxiety that these inevitable discharges should entail as little hardship as possible.

Secretary Haldane then explained the necessity of the reduction in military expenditure and the need of bringing things down from the inflated position which obtained during the late war. He said there must be even further reductions, but promised that every scrap of work possible would be given to Woolwich. Lord Tweedmouth then promised to do whatever was possible in behalf of the Nave Department, and the deputation withdrew.

Mr. G. Hall Gets Diploma

Among the list of graduates of McGill University, appears the name of Mr. Gerald R. Hall, son of Mr. E.H. D. Hall, of this city, who has completed his course in electric engineering and who stood high in the final examinations. Mr. Hall's many friends in this city will be pleased to hear of his success.

The C.P.R. Appeal Case Sustained

Fine Against a Conductor Will Not be Collected.

Yesterday afternoon the appealed case of the C.P.R. conductor, who some weeks ago was fined because his train blocked traffic on George street for more than the legal limit of five minutes, was tried before his honor Judge Weller.

P. C. Newhall, the first witness, gave practically the same evidence as in the original trial. He was placed under quite a stiff cross examination by Mr. McMurty, the C.P.R. solicitor, Toronto, who acted for the company. His evidence simply amounted to the fact that an engine and a number of cars obstructed George street from between six and seven minutes as timed by his watch.

Mr. Killendeck a motorman of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, next gave evidence. He saw P. C. Newhall, on the day in question, take out his watch, whilst on his car. His car was running that morning at a low rate of speed, as he was somewwhat ahead of time.

R. L. Sarginson, conductor of the street car alleged to have been delayed, said he took no account of the time they were delayed. This ended the case for the prosecution.

Mr. J. McInerny, a C.P.R. engineer, was on this engine on the day in question. He stopped about 65 feet east of George street. It would only take three and a half minutes to complete the work his train had to do across George street. Mr. McWilliams, acting city, put the witness thought a strict cross-examination without shaking his evidence.

J. H. Davidson, then went into the box and said he was front brakeman of the C.P.R. train, and described the work done on the morning the trouble was based on. James Pirse, another brakeman of the train corroborated the last witness' evidence. James Sinclair, the engine fireman also gave evidence.

After several more witnesses were heard, and the preponderance of the railway men's evidence clearly showed that the crossing was not blocked as charged, Judge Weller sustained the appeal and consequently the magistrate's sentence was over-ruled.

Reporters Ejected

As a Times representative was wending his way northward to visit the Christian Science temple he was suddenly stopped and warned not to enter, as a few minutes previous, two well known local reporters had made a rapid exit from the above building. It seems so far as we can learn that these two news gatherers, expecting to see a good, old rumpus, between Mr. Todd and his brethren had no sooner selected a seat in the faith-inspired building than the great Fifth Reuter left his lofty perch and in plain words told them he would be his own reporter. And to get out. Shaking and nervous these two pencil pushers made their tracts to their respective offices, and but wiser men.

Remarkable Invention FOR THE CULTURE OF HAIR

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored throughout the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots, the effects of which are quickly seen in a healthy, vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and as no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL!

The Company's Guarantee

An EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. If you do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, and are not convinced that the Cap will completely restore your hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested, as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without questions or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. I. N. Love, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopaecia (loss of hair) stated that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles (hair roots) without resorting to any irritating process, the problem of hair growth would be solved. Later on, when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to him for inspection, he remarked that the Cap would fulfil and confirm in practice the observations he had previously made before the Medical Board.

Dr. W. Moore, referring to the invention, says that the principle upon which the EVANS VACUUM CAP is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable.

An illustrated and descriptive book of the EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent post free, on application.

Liberal-Conservative Meeting Last Night

Geo. W. Fowler, M.P., of New Brunswick, and Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, Ontario, Address the Gathering---Jas. Kendry, Ex-M.P., Presided.

A mass meeting was held in the interest of the Liberal-Conservative party.

The house was but fairly filled, and the event lacked the enthusiasm which usually characterizes such gatherings.

The Mandolline Club furnished pleasing music.

Mr. Jas. Kendry, ex-M.P., presided as chairman. He was supported by Hon. W. J. Hanna, M.P.P., Provincial Secretary; Geo. W. Fowler, M.P., Mr. Jas. Stevenson, ex-M.P., T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., Col. Miller and Messrs Harry Winch and Alfred Pearson. Messrs. A. C. Boyce, M.P., for West Algoma; and J. G. H. Bergeron, M. P., the silver-tongued orator of Beauharnois, Que., were absent to the regret of all present.

GEO. W. FOWLER, M.P.

Was the first speaker, and was well received. He drew attention to the fact that the Liberal Government in their anxiety to reduce public expenditure had voted $130,000,000 for public works, an increase of some $90,000,000 over the maximum yearly amounts voted by the Conservative Government during their term of office. He did not object to a generous expenditure of public monies in legitimate directions, but offered that it would be safe to infer that some twenty to twenty-five millions of dollars out of the $130,000,000 voted this year would be absolutely wasted. The speaker scored the Government for their Moncton and Halifax land deals in connection with the Intercolonial Railway, by which he claimed government guarantees were substantially recouped for their loyalty to the Liberal party. Referring to the Hon. H. R. Emmerson, the speaker claimed that there was never a greater failure in any government department than the last minister of railways and canals.

Referring to the national surplus of some $23,000,000, the speaker asserted that the larger the surplus the bigger the expenditure next year under the Liberal regime. He thought such a policy a mistake; it is the duty of every government to prepare in fat years for the lean years that may follow.

Continuing the speaker condemned the government as jacking in common sense in their immigration policy; under which people from Europe are invited to make their homes with us. It is necessary, he went on to say, for us to exercise the utmost care as to the character of those who are to settle in our midst. The present government are only interested in increasing the population of Canada, irrespective of the character of such settlers. He contended that the time has passed when Canada needs to pay a premium to steamship agents of $2 to $5 a head for immigrants, to each of whom the government allots 160 acres as an inducement for their settlement in the Dominion. The speaker contended that the government should move more slowly and get a better class of immigrants than those who are coming to Canada in these days, instead of proposing to increase each settler's grant of land from 160 to 320 acres. Any man, he claimed, should be able to make a living from 160 acres of land.

Mr. Fowler strongly defended his transactions in the west regarding land deals, in connection with which a servile Grit press had abused him as unfit to sit in parliament because he had not disclosed his purchase price. He had not entered such private transactions for his health or nerves, which were not of a shattered nature, but as a business venture with which the government had no connection. Continuing the speaker contended that the government feared the Hon. Geo. E. Foster, and it would be an unfortunate day for the government when that man's voice was silenced in parliament. There is not one word to be said against him; he went out of power a poor man and is a poor man today, and that is more than can be said of most of the present government ministers. In the insurance investigation, the speaker contended that the man behind the guns aimed at Mr. Foster and brought down the Hon. Mr. Emmerson. In conclusion the speaker had unlimited assurance that the present government, which he characterized as a corrupt one, would be swept out of power by a big majority from coast to coast.

Mr. McClarren here sang a comic song, which was well received.

HON. W. J. HANNA,

Provincial Secretary, was the next speaker, and he paid a glowing tribute to the local member, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, whom he characterized as being indefatigable in the interest of his constituency of West Peterborough. Continuing the eloquent speaker contended that no one questions the wisdom of the change made in the Provincial Legislature in 1905, and no person questions whether whether subsequent results justifies the action of the electorate in that memorable election. When Mr. Whitney came into power he promised to assure clean election methods, to wipe off the statute book the numbered ballot and secure an honest count of honest men's votes. Since 1905 there have been three bye-elections and not in one instance has there been a breath of suspicion as to whether those elections have been conducted honestly or not. All the pledges of Mr. Whitney have been redeemed; there have been no new land grants made to railways, nor money grants either, since Mr. Whitney came into power; the Conservative party at Toronto have doubled the railways tax from $200,000 to $400,000, and have provided that the municipalities of the Province shall share in the benefit of that increase. Then the Montreal pulp concession brought to the Provincial government $300,000 cash for something that the old Ross government gave for nothing. Also as a result of the difference between the policy of the late Liberal party and that of the present Conservative regime, the Province has assured to its treasury $1,000,085 from Cobalt, and $178,000 from Kerr Lake districts. Ontario has now an annual income that exceeds its expenditure, whereas prior to 1905 under Liberal rule the annual expenditure exceeded the revenue by $1,000,000, which was made up by an annual sale of timber lands, thus depleting the Provincial capital. And whereas the annual revenue under Mr. Whitney's government exceeds the Province's liabilities, the annual expenditure has been increased, especially so in the case of rural schools for which $380,000 a year is appropriated instead of $120,000 as under the Ross government. Again, the present government has abolished the model schools in every county and established a greater number of normal schools in the interest of higher education; and thanks to our local member, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, Peterborough has cradled one of these normal schools. Then, under the Whitney government, public school books have been improved in quality and furnished at a less extortionate price than under the Ross rule. The Whitney commission has discovered that during the past 20 years the parents of children have paid for readers alone no less than $200,000 in excess of what would have been a fair price in contract with Nelson & Sons, the publishers. The present government have pledged themselves that such extortionate prices shall no longer govern, but that school books shall be furnished at reasonable prices, and fewer in number.

The meeting adjourned after singing the national anthem.

Improvements Made on the Hughes Park

One local improvement now in hand by the city is the building up of that small park at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets. The park in question is generally connected with the name of Mr. J. L. Hughes, who has spent much time and trouble in beautifying this pretty little breathing spot. He had about twenty-five trees planted, as well as making other improvements, which are doing nicely now. For the past year or two, the park has been neglected and has run wild.

A committee composed of Aldermen Phelan and Tovey were appointed to have the park fixed up and yesterday quite a quantity of street scrapings was placed thereon.

Peterborough May Form a Team

New League of Roller Hockeyists Has Been Organized.

It seems that a new sporting aggregation is to be formed in the city. This latest addition to local sporting circles is roller skating hockey team or, as some call it roller polo team. A league composed of, or including Ottawa, Montreal and Peterborough is to be formed.

The Ottawa Journal, reporting the organization of the Ottawa team on Wednesday night, says in part;

"An Ottawa roller polo team was organized last night at a meeting held for that purpose and several members of the Ottawa hockey team will figure in the line-up. The first game will be played here on May 24th, it being decided to enter the league with Toronto, Montreal and Peterborough. The meeting was well attended and some speedy hockey players were on hand. The team will start practice at once, and will wear the same uniform as the Ottawa hockey team."

Peterborough has the men, the money and the material for a good team in the new league.

Great Interest in Bowling Tournament

Interest in the great bowling tournament at the Majestic Bowling alleys is increasing every day. Yesterday the tournament was continued and will be maintained until midnight Saturday. The scores of yesterday demonstrated that bowling has "caught on" in popular sporting esteem in Peterborough, as Mr. J. J. Houlihan put up the high score of 454. He has the highest single score yet registered, 201. The scores in detail were;

J. J. Houlihan	454
Frank Hughes	353
A. Regan	345
Harney Fortune	305

In the singles played Thursday night between 10 and 11 o'clock; W. McElroy took first place with the total of 452 and also the highest single score, 170.

Reorganization of the Chinese Navy

Montreal, April 26.—Mr. Edward Henry Tyler, of Edmonton, who is at present in Montreal, states that his brother, Captain Tyler, of the Royal Navy, will pass through this city shortly on his way to China. He will be engaged there in the reorganization of the Chinese navy, which it is the intention of that government to put on a good war footing. Captain Tyler is just the man for the work, for he has already been connected with the Chinese navy, and he rendered excellent service at the battle of the Yalu and throughout the Chino-Japanese war. At the battle of the Yalu he was naval adviser to Admiral Ting, and it is said that, but for the dishonesty of the officials who supplied defective shells to the Chinese ships, Captain Tyler might have been able to bring about a very different result at that famous engagement and might in fact have changed the whole course of history in the Far East. Captain Tyler is a protege of Yuan Shi-Kai, the great Chinese leader, who is the strongest man in China today, and who has always been a powerful influence for advancement and independence in the Chinese Empire.

Floated the Big Jap Loan

San Francisco, April 26.—Korekiyo Takahashi, the Japanese financier who has just completed his mission of floating loans aggregating $11,500,000 in London and Paris to redeem the war bonds of Japan, arrived here on his way home yesterday.

Talking of his work in London and Paris last night, Takahashi said:

"The loans floated abroad are now mostly held by London bankers, the stringency of money in Paris being chiefly responsible for this fact. Japan will pay five per cent. for this money, which will be used in redeeming the six per cent bonds issued during the war. No difficulty is now encountered by Japan in raising money. Her credit has been unquestioned since her achievements in the war, and foreign capital is daily pouring into her in increased amounts."

Toll of the Famine May be Many Millions

Inhabitants of Southeastern Russia are Facing Starvation---They Sell Themselves to Obtain Food.

London, April 26.—Dr. Kennard, sent by the Society of Friends to investigate conditions among the Russian peasantry, draws an appalling picture of the sufferings he found. After calling attention to the urgent and immediate need of funds, he says:

"This is the worst famine Russia has known. No less than 20,000,000 people distributed throughout the south-eastern provinces, unless aided, cannot live through to the next harvest time, and I may say that this figure has not only been approved by the Zemstvo organization, but also by the government itself.

HARVEST TIME VARIES.

"The date of the harvest will vary with the latitude, and the famine-stricken region is spread over such a wide area (five times the size of France) that more than ten degrees of latitude are involved. Funds will be needed to the end of July to feed all these millions, and then the harvest will bring relief; but there are many hundreds of thousands to whom the harvest will not bring relief, for they have neither land nor cattle. The few cows that are in existence are in such a pitiful condition themselves that they are useless for milking purposes. The result is that babies and young children are forced to eat the coarse black bread and the indigestible young cucumbers which are luxuries to the adult Russian peasant today, but are death to the baby, or at any rate spell disease.

SELL THEMSELVES TO GET FOOD.

"These people have sold their all, and in most cases have likewise sold in advance all that the harvest might bring them. They have sold themselves and their work. All over the south-eastern province young women and girls are forced to prostitute themselves to obtain food. For these suffering people to whom the coming harvest means nothing, relief must be afforded during the whole of the coming year. Meanwhile epidemics of disease add to the terrible conditions obtaining. The difficulties encountered in relieving these people are made ten times worse now owing to the practically impassable condition of the country roads."

APPEALS FOR AID.

Dr. Kennard makes an urgent appeal for tinned milk and for tinned meats and meat juices. He says: "I have seen the Zemstvo workers and investigated their methods, and can vouch for it that not only is the work being carried out in a businesslike and capable manner, but that the most is made out of every farthing."

Correspondent Does Not Like Junkmen

Tale of Woe Told by an Aylmer St. Resident.

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Sir,—In the Review of last night I saw an article on the junkmen of this city that was "all right." The authorities of Peterborough should certainly take some means of controlling, better licensing or in some way prevent these gentlemen of the rags, ashes and bone brigade from being the nuisance they are beyond possibility of dispute. I do not mean to insinuate they are all or severally dishonest; but their actions whilst in a citizen's back yard are worth watching. I would myself gladly consent to having a few dollars a year put in my taxes, if thus the nuisance of the junkmen could be stopped. A few days ago two junkmen came into my yard and frightened my wife and children by their persistence in demanding that they should be sold certain articles in a shed. The men would not take "No" for an answer. One of them grabbed up a discarded copper boiler and when they were told it was not for sale, began to carry it to the gate. It was only when they heard the people in the house use their phone that these junkers laid the boiler down. Again when these men come into one's yard, they pry round evidently looking for what they can get for practically nothing. I quite agree with the Review's correspondent that these men should not only be licensed but should be numbered so that any woman pestered by them could identify them for future reference. The great trouble is that most of the present junk peddlers are of either Syrian or some foreign Romany's, whose use of the English language is limited and on occasion more ostensibly than actually limited to meet the requirements of the occasion.

Yours truly,
ANTI JUNKER.

Mr. John Frise Has Passed Away

Yesterday morning Mr. John Frise passed away at his late residence, 176 McDonnell street, after an illness of two months' duration, from a weak heart. The deceased was 69 years of age. He was born in England, and settled in Peterborough in 1856. In 1860 he was married to Jemima Vosper. The late Mr. Frise was much respected by all who knew him. He was a member of George street Methodist church, and in politics a Liberal.

Besides his wife, nine daughters are left to mourn his loss. They are Mrs. J. C. Best, and Misses Cassie and Lily Frise of Toronto, Miss Alberta, of Arthur; Mrs. Geo. Robertson, Mrs. A. Parker, and Mrs. J. C. Miller, of this city, and Misses Lyle and Alzina residing at home.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock from the family residence, 176 McDonnell street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

Local Option is Off in Midland

By Legal Technicality the Bylaw is Quashed.

An Osgoode Hall motion of yesterday says that in the case of Duncan and Town of Midland.—Judgment (H.) on motion by one Duncan to quash a local option bylaw of the Town of Midland. The voting took place on 7th January, 1907. Upon 8th January the clerk of the Council declared the result of the voting, and upon 14th January the Council purported to pass the bylaw. The vote in favor of the bylaw was 477, and against 234, more than the necessary three-fifths majority being given. It was objected that the council had no power to pass the bylaw until the expiry of two weeks from the declaration by the clerk. Held, that the Legislature intended to afford the electors an opportunity for a scrutiny before the result of the voting became operative, and it did not contemplate empowering the council to defeat such intention by finally passing it within the two weeks, and before a petition for a scrutiny should be presented. Order made quashing the bylaw with costs. J. B. Mackenzie for applicant. F. E. Hodgins, K.C., for the town corporation.

Another Policeman Is Sworn In

Yesterday at one o'clock a new member took his place on the local police force. It is well known that Officer McGinty has been ill for some time and that in consequence the local force is handicapped by lack of members. The police commissioners advertised for another applicant for the force and several men have applied. As a result yesterday morning Mr. George Meharry, a brother of P.C. Meharry, was sworn in as a policeman protem. It is not yet known whether Mr. Meharry's present position will be permanent or not. This latest addition to the force is a well set, sturdy and clean living man, who will, as far as can be judged, be a useful member of the local force.

Cheese Factories Will be Busy

At this time of year both the cheese factories and those who sell them their supplies of milk begin to contemplate operations for the coming season. For some time past the local factories have been getting in new machinery and getting ready for the opening, and as the first sale is on May 15th, it will keep the factories hustling to make good. At Belleville and Brockville last Saturday, the price was 11 1-2 cents.

SKILLED HELP SCARCE

From different sections of the neighboring republic comes reports of the scarcity of skilled help. In New York city The Post reports that the complaint in general that reponsible labor, for instance men with intelligence enough to be motormen, is extremely scarce. From Chicago it is reported that laborers and skilled mechanics never earned so much money and did so little for it as at the present time. Railroad men throughout the west are finding difficulty in getting even common laborers who will work steadily away from a city. A railroad president is quoted as saying that his road cannot complete contemplated improvements because of the lack of help. In the great southwest, too, there is a new labor situation. The young men have left the farms of their fathers and taken up their own land. Farm help at a price which the farmer can afford to pay is very scarce at harvest time. Skilled help is scarce and all wages, even those of the common laborer, are going up. From the Pacific coast comes word that Oriental exclusion, a subject brought into extra prominence by recent events, may become an issue in the next State campaign. A large number of the people of California, it appears, thinks that the State needs the Japanese laborer.

In Canada the condition is somewhat similar. Even the unusually large number of immigrants arriving do not avail to appreciably relieve the congestion in the skilled labor market. A large percentage of the new arrivals are unable to do work requiring any special knowledge, or training of the hand. In Ottawa, it is said, there are numbers of idle men, but among them are none who know farming or driving of logs on the river, neither are they skilled in any of the trades. Because of this ignorance vacancies are unfilled and the men who need work stand idly around. Of course, there is ample opportunity for all to work on railway construction. But this work seems to be left to Italians, and immigrants from Northern Europe eschew it.

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. English Pugilist Held for Murder

LONDON, April 20.—"Pedlar" Palmer, the ex-champion bantam-weight English pugilist, and another man were arrested on suspicion of having caused the death of an unknown man whose body was found in the carriage of a train, coming from Epsom after the races, in which Palmer and his companion had ridden. The man apparently was killed by heavy blows. Other passengers heard the sounds of a violent quarrel coming from the carriage occupied by the party.

SAW PALMER HIT HIM.

LONDON, April 26. — "Pedlar" Palmer, the English pugilist, who with another man was arrested yesterday on suspicion of having caused the death of an unknown man whose body was found in a railroad car coming from Epsom, after the races, was charged at Croyden in the police court with murder. After a fireman on the train had testified that he saw Palmer strike the deceased several blows because he refused to stop singing, the prisoner was remanded.

Spain and England Virtually Allied

NEW YORK, April 26.—A despatch from Madrid says;

The Correspondencia De La Espana says it has diplomatic authority for stating that the effect of the meeting of King Alfonso and King Edward at Cartagena was the perfection of a far-reaching understanding for the purpose of war and peace. It would have been considered in the last century, according to the paper, an alliance, but in modern diplomatic language it is an entente cordiale. Everything concerning Morocco was ratified, everything in reference to theg eneral European situation was discussed, and the basis was formulated of an agreement which is now in the hands of the diplomatists.

BUYS WARSHIPS IN BRITAIN.

MADRID, April 26.—In the matter of Spain's naval increases, it is understood that the Government has decided upon the construction of six battleships of the Lord Nelson type, six fast cruisers, and several torpedo boat destroyers. Three of the battleships will be built at Ferrol by British firms, and the remainder of the warships in England. Furthermore, the construction of dry docks capable of caring for a vessel of 20,000 tons, will be undertaken at Cadiz, Ferrol, and Cartagena.

POLITICAL SPIES.

They Are Quite Common All Over the Continent of Europe.

On the continent of Europe it is quite a common thing for royal personages to be subjected to espionage, mainly, of course, for political reasons.

In France, Spain, Russia, Germany and Austria the practice obtains. At one time during the reign of Napoleon III. a small army of political spies was engaged in watching royal subjects. In fact, the vigilance of the different parties was so great that there were three or four distinct secret services. The emperor had his; the empress had hers; the government and the republicans respectively had theirs—all employed to watch the other parties and their spies.

Moreover, Bismarck had his spy over the emperor. So that France was overridden by spies, the most important, however, being Bismarck's, to whom the war was indeed to a great extent due.

This secret service agent was a German doctor, whose advice the unfortunate emperor even preferred to that of his own court physicians, and thus Bismarck knew even better than Napoleon the real state of the latter's health, which was, of course, a very important factor in the political situation at those times.

He Could Run.

He could run, all right, all right. He had to. Talk about your amateurs that spring for sport—this party had learned to run or starve, as a boy, an' had never forgot how. Why, say, when he tore hisself loose from a vicinity it seemed like the whole landscape was crippled. I used to try him out by givin' him a start an' shootin' at him. If he beat the bullet, we figgered he was up to form, but if the lead overtook him we'd call it an off day an' unload the ca'tridges. I've seen him scare a jack rabbit up till it was workin' under forced drafts, then limp up to it from behind an' kind of yawn an' stretch, an' then goad it to wake up or else get off the trail an' let somebody run that knowed how.

Oh, Yes, of Course.

Of the many children and women in Nazareth, Palestine, who have picked up a little English all have a way of saying "of course" instead of a simple "yes." The expression which French people catch up as characteristic of the American and Englishman is always "Oh, yes!" A correspondent, who has cycled down the Rhone valley, about Provence and along the Riviera, found himself greeted with "Oh, yes!" by the children in the streets of nearly every town. And he discovered when his attention had been called to the point in this way that "Oh, yes!" was really what he and his companions were always saying.

assistant secretary of state, and frequently during the absence of that officer she conducts the office almost as efficiently as her distinguished chief.

Too Anxious by Half.

A vast number of people are needlessly anxious about their manners. Having been "house folks" all their lives, contentedly and usefully rounding out their days among kindred and neighbors who love and understand them and share their standards, says an editorial in the Home Journal, they are prone when they make a rare excursion into another atmosphere to a painful self consciousness that spoils their pleasures.

Travel is not at all necessary to culture. Some of the finest culture the world has ever seen owed nothing to travel. But there is one comfortable result of travel, and that is the assurance it gives that people are pretty much alike. The superficial traveler may be impressed by "how different" things abroad are from those at home, but the wise observer is always being newly made aware how much the same are things the world over.

So with the gift of tongues. One of the best services it does for us is to show how much in common different people have when they can understand each other. History is another help. The deeper into the past the student delves the more wonderfully he realizes how little time has altered human nature. And as for exalted rank and superior talents, it seems as if every one ought to enjoy the advantage of informal association with at least one celebrity, if only to prove how little real difference fame or splendor makes.

Knowing these things keeps one delightfully free from that diffidence which prevents many persons from appearing well in strange society and from getting that best of the stranger which he can give only to one with whom he can be at ease. When it comes to manners there are very few things, after all, that are essential, and more people make an awkward appearance because they are too concerned about their manners than err in the other extreme. An absorbed interest in another individual, an eager desire to learn how his experience of life corroborates or transcends our own, a sweet willingness to give of our best toward the pleasurableness of the occasion—these are much better beginnings in good manners than are all the etiquette books in creation.

The way to enjoy other people is to think as little as possible of any points in which they may differ from us and as much as possible of the many points in which they must resemble us. And as for which fork to eat fish with, and whether to leave one card or two, and what to say to a hostess when presented—what folly to agonise oneself into a cold perspiration over these things when if we but knew the truth we should find that about four-fifths of those present had no more settled convictions on the subject than we. And if we could see the knowing fifth neatly roped off from the rest we should find fewer of the great, the interesting, the delightful among them than among the others. Great men eat with the wrong fork quite as often as do shy girls from the country.

Javelle Water.

Javelle water is sold by most druggists, but it is not difficult to make and is much less expensive when prepared at home. Every laundress should use it, as it is effective in keeping linen and children's dresses free from fruit stains. A small teacup of the fluid added to a boiler of water will assist materially in keeping the clothes white and will not hurt them in the least.

The most obstinate stains of fruit, tea, coffee, etc., in the tablecloth and napkins will succumb to an application of one part of javelle water diluted with four parts of soft water. If the stained article is soaked in this fluid for several hours, thoroughly washed and rinsed it will usually come out perfectly white and clean. Only white goods can be treated this way, however, as javelle water is likely to fade colors.

It is made thus: Place four pounds of washing soda in a large granite or porcelain lined pan and pour over it four quarts of hot water. Stir with a stick until the soda has dissolved, add a pound of chloride of lime and stir until this has dissolved. Allow the liquid to cool in the pan, strain the portion through a thin cloth into wide mouth jugs or bottles and cork tightly for use. The part that contains the sediment also may be bottled and used for cleaning the sink, kitchen table, etc.

The Lapidist Habit.

The girl was tugging her chiffonier across the room when a friend dropped in unceremoniously and demanded an explanation. "That's the third time you've changed that piece of furniture in so many months. I'd like to know the reason for such footlishness."

The girl gave the chiffonier a final shove into the corner and then said gaspingly: "In order that I may be beautiful on all sides, Sherlock Holmes is to blame for it. You know he pointed out that the side of the body which the light struck the most clearly is always dressed the most immaculately. He showed that on that side the hair would be most artistically curled, the powder most carefully applied, the neckwear most painstakingly adjusted.

"And I've found out a lot more things he didn't speak of. On that side a woman will pencil her eyebrows more cleverly, will massage her face more thoroughly, will put in her side comb more neatly, etc. So every month I shove my chiffonier across the room that I may not become lopsided."

About Flatirons.

Flatirons that are put away for a few weeks often get rusty, and the best way to prevent this is to rub a little warm grease over the surface and then wrap them up in brown paper. When taken out dip into hot water that has had a small piece of soda dissolved in it, rub dry and then put them to heat in the usual way. When they are ready to be used on the ironing board have a piece of brown paper with a little powdered bath brick on it and rub the surface of your iron with this. It seems rather a lengthy process, but it really does not take long to do, and housewives will be rewarded for the trouble they have taken by finding the irons delightfully smooth and easy to use, and when they are like this the work can be done twice as quickly.

The Baby Basket.

Nothing is better for a baby basket than a wire dish drainer, either round or oblong in shape. They only cost 10 cents at any store where kitchen goods are sold. Cover the wire with blue cambric or blue satin first. Over that place white dotted or plain muslin, rather full. Make a deep ruffle edged with baby lace to fall over the outside. Cut out a piece of cardboard to fit the bottom. Cover it with a layer of cotton batting. Cover with the cambric and then the muslin.

Sprinkle sachet powder on the cotton batting if one cares to have the basket scented. Make little pockets and place them on the sides. Around the edge sew bunting with ribbon run through it. The wire frame is durable and light.

Introduction Customs.

In introducing a woman and a man the latter should be presented to the former, as, for instance, Mrs. Jones, allow me to present Mr. Smith. In the case of two women, one elderly, the younger should be presented to the elder as a pretty mark of respect, as, Mrs. Jones, my friend, Miss Brown. In the event of one party to the introduction being an elderly man of prominence it would be proper to show him the deference and present both a man and woman if younger to him.

A Dainty Sandwich.

A very pleasant and healthy variation of the meat, jam, egg or lettuce sandwich can be made with the assistance of the nutritious currant. Take a teacupful of currants and rub them in a cloth; then butter rather thickly some thin slices of bread. Cover the buttered bread all over with currants, sift a very little castor sugar over them and make into sandwiches. This satisfying little novelty is wonderfully appreciated and will not fail to delight the children.

To turn out a hot pudding plunge the mold or bag into cold water for thirty seconds. If it is a cold pudding, a jelly or blancmange, dip it for an instant in very hot water. If ice cream refuses to leave a mold after being loosened wrap for an instant around the mold a cloth wrung from boiling hot water.

To clean zinc dip a piece of flannel in paraffin and with it well rub the zinc, which should then be washed with hot water and soap to remove the smell of the oil and polished with a dry cloth.

When running brass rods through window curtains put an old glove finger over the end that is being pushed through the hem. Unless this is done the material is apt to tear.

A dyspeptic can eat and retain raw eggs when nothing else will stay on the stomach.

Fashions in Brides.

The natives of the Sandwich Islands estimate women by their weight. The Chinese require them to have deformed feet and black teeth. A girl must be tattooed sky blue and wear a nose ring to satisfy a south sea islander. Certain African princes require their brides to have their teeth filed into the semblance of a saw.

TIRED ALL DAY, EVERY DAY.

Thousands of Women Write Dr. Hartman to Complain That They Never Feel Wholly Rested, That They Are Always Tired.

MRS. T. TRENER, Albion Place, Notch Road, Paterson, N. J., writes:

"I suffered five years with my spine and pains in my back.

"I consulted you, fortunately, and in fourteen weeks was cured by the use of Peruna and following your advice.

"I can now do my own work. I cannot thank you enough. I cannot tell you how happy I am. No family should be without Peruna."

Suffered Years With Pain.

Mrs. Ida Germain, 531 Manhattan Ave., New York City, writes:

"For many years I suffered with pains in the pelvic organs. I was unable to find relief, as no doctor could help me.

"I read of your wonderful Peruna and decided to give it a trial. I took it for some time and obtained much relief.

Strong Again.

"Now I am strong again and have a good appetite. Peruna has relieved me of a chronic ailment, and I therefore recommend it to all women."

Always Tired and Weak.

Mrs. E. A. Connolly, 3827 Garner St., Kansas City, Mo., writes:

"I have suffered for years with stomach trouble, so that I could eat hardly anything. I was tired and weak all the time.

PELVIC CATARRH CAUSES MANY AILMENTS.

There are so many women who are tired all the time. They get up in the morning tired and drag themselves around wearily all day.

They have pain in the back and dragging sensations which seem to weigh them down as though carrying a burden.

Many women are undoubtedly suffering with systemic catarrh. The proper remedy for them to take is Peruna.

The catarrh has invaded the whole abdominal and pelvic organs. Through mucous discharges they are losing vitality every moment.

The food they eat and the sleep they get is hardly sufficient to keep up with the incessant drain on their vitality.

The only hope for betterment in their cases is the complete removal of the catarrh.

For this Peruna is recommended by Dr. Hartman. It relieves catarrh wherever located in the human body—in the thorax, abdomen or pelvis.

"This was caused by indigestion and female trouble. I suffered agonies and was afraid to be left alone.

Completely Exhausted.

"At times I was afraid to stand on my feet and to attempt to do any housework was out of the question.

"One day I read an advertisement of Peruna and its wonderful cures and I decided to try it.

New Life and Vigor.

"My husband brought home one bottle and before that bottle was half gone I felt new life and new vigor.

"That tired, hopeless feeling left me, I began to eat and my food nourished me. I could walk and do my work without fainting.

Peruna's Wonderful Work.

"I took several bottles during the summer and fall and cannot praise it enough for the wonderful work it did for me.

"When I feel tired or nervous from any cause, a few doses of Peruna cure me. I had been doctoring for a year before I tried your Peruna. I suffered the most with pain in my head.

A Friend Advised Peruna.

"One day a friend of mine told me of your Peruna, so I got a bottle. After a week's use of it I began to feel better.

"At first I could not eat, sleep or work, but I have at last found that the medicine that would cure me was your Peruna.

A New Woman.

"My face has a good color now. I am a new woman. I thank you very much."

Followed Dr. Hartman's Advice.

Mrs. Viola Marshall, 420 West Mason street, Springfield, Ill., writes:

"Two months ago when I sought your advice, I had gotten so weak that I had to lie down most of the time.

Praising Peruna.

"I began taking your Peruna and now I feel like a new woman.

"I shall never cease praising Peruna, nor thanking Dr. Hartman for his kind advice."

"I hope every man and woman who suffers will give Peruna a trial and be as grateful as my husband and myself."

Doctored a Year.

"Miss Anna McGinn, 161 Plain St., Providence, R. I., writes:

"I wish to let you know of the good your medicine has done for me. I had what the doctors called heart trouble.

His Clever Ally

...By...
W. CRAWFORD SHERLOCK.

Copyright, 1907, by Mary McKeon.

"Now, Tip, something must be done, but how I'm going to do it is more than I know."

Jim Granville stretched his great length on the grass beneath an old oak tree and addressed his fox terrier, who surveyed his master with evident interest and understanding. There was a frown on the broad forehead of the young man and a troubled look in his big brown eyes. Tip sat on his haunches, wagging his diminutive stump of a tail vigorously, one eye fixed intently on his master's face, while with the other he watched the movements of a squirrel on an overhanging branch.

"I'm in love, Tip," continued Granville, flicking the ashes from his cigar with an impatient gesture. "You know what that means, old fellow, since you've been paying your addresses to that little spaniel of Miss Browning's. Yet you can't understand why I don't tell the girl so and settle the whole matter, do you? Tip, canine affairs are different from human affairs. Men have responsibilities, and dogs don't. That's the whole difference in a nutshell."

Tip gave a short bark, as if he fully comprehended the distinction, and Granville went on: "I have a pretty good income, Tip, but it is not big enough to support two establishments. If I get married, my mother would have to live with us, and you know from your own experiences that she is a woman of decided convictions."

Tip shuddered at the remembrance of a whipping he had received for the slight offense of chewing up one of Mrs. Granville's gloves in a moment of absentmindedness and then hung his head.

"Well, Miss Browning also has decided views on certain questions of life, and she and my mother disagree upon almost every subject. The natural result of bringing such opposite natures together and compelling them to live beneath the same roof would be trouble, Tip, serious trouble too. I would have to side with my wife against my mother or I would have to side with my mother against my wife. In either case my position would be decidedly unpleasant. I don't expect you to fully understand this, old fellow. You were separated from your mother when you were too young to comprehend the meaning of filial affection. But human beings are quite different and have a certain duty to perform in looking after their maternal relations. Now, these are the facts in the case, Tip, and something must be done, but I don't know what it is to be."

The squirrel had disappeared from view, and Tip fixed his undivided attention upon his master, evidently meditating deeply over the perplexing problem. The stumpy tail ceased its pendulum-like motions, and his sharp ears were pricked up in an attitude of earnest attention.

IN THE CENTER OF THE CLEARING STOOD WENTWORTH AND MRS. GRANVILLE.

"This crisis has come upon us suddenly, my boy," pursued Granville after a few moments of silence. "Things were running along all right, and there was no necessity for immediate action until this big fellow from California—Wentworth's his name—came upon the scene. He's been showing Miss Browning the most decided attention. Took her out three times last week in his auto and twice to the theater. In fact, every time I went there she was out with this confounded Wentworth, and I haven't had a chance to say a word to her since he came."

The terrier whined sympathetically, and his master continued:

"He's twice as old as she is, Tip, but that doesn't make any difference in these days, when men of seventy marry women of twenty. There ought to be a law passed that would prevent people from marrying when there is more than five years difference in their ages, and if I ever go to congress I'll introduce such a measure. That won't help me now, though, and if I don't make a move he'll win out and leave me at the post. There you are, Tip. I've unbosomed my secret soul to you, the only friend in whom I can confide, and I look to you to straighten this tangle out for me."

If the fly that hovered about Tip's head had been Wentworth, Granville's anxiety would have been at an end. After making sure that his winged tormentor would worry him no more, Tip glanced around and espied the squirrel several rods away, engaged in making his morning meal from some crumbs that had been left in the woods. Forgetting his master's troubles, Tip dashed off in pursuit, leaving Granville to solve the question that so greatly perplexed him. The young man, left to his own devices, lighted a fresh cigar and began a mental calculation as to the length of time that must elapse before he could hope for sufficient income wherewith to maintain his mother and wife in separate homes, provided, of course, that Wentworth did not succeed in carrying off Miss Browning before his eyes.

The calculation was interrupted by a series of ear splitting yelps, and Granville, fearing his pet had come to grief, arose and hurried down the path along which Tip had disappeared. As he reached a clearing a hundred yards or so away he stopped short, his eyes resting upon a curious scene.

In the center of the clearing stood Wentworth and Mrs. Granville. The former had one arm around the latter's waist, while, with his walking stick in his disengaged hand, he was vigorously parrying the furious rushes of the enraged Tip.

"I'm so glad you've come, Jim," cried Mrs. Granville as her son drew near. "You are just in time."

"It looks as if I'm around at the wrong time," grimly returned the young man as he proceeded to calm the excited Tip. "I don't quite understand what it all means. I didn't know you knew Mr. Wentworth."

"Not know Tom Wentworth!" exclaimed Mrs. Granville in surprise. "Why, I've known him ever since I was a child. He's Catherine Browning's uncle, you know, and while he was looking up his niece he found me out, and we've renewed our old friendship. Tom tells me"—a pretty flush had crept into Mrs. Granville's cheeks, and her forty-five years of life seemed to dwindle perceptibly—"that he has cared for me ever since he has known me, and he has persuaded me to go back to California with him if you have no objections, Jim. What do you say?"

"I won't stand in the way of your happiness, mother," declared Granville, with an emphasis that Mrs. Granville did not understand until Wentworth enlightened her.

"I knew Jim would be all right," observed the big Californian jovially. "He's been making some plans for himself, and I think we'd better make a double wedding of it."

"You're a clever ally, Tip, even if you're only a dog," remarked Granville as he walked toward Miss Browning's home. "That wild bolt of yours brought about a solution of the whole matter."

Marsh Cup Water Plant.

The plant that I found in the Hudson bay region which is most worthy of notice grows in the mossy muskegs, in places where there is little or no grass. It is remarkable for two reasons—the beauty of its flower and its water containing properties. The leaves, which grow flat upon the ground, are round and green. The ball of the flower seems adapted as a natural reservoir for water, of which, from a large one, there can easily be obtained as much as an Egyptian coffee cup will hold. But the beauty of it was that in the early autumn, when the nights were frosty, but the heat still excessive by day, the water it contained was always iced, for these charming flower balls are evidently constructed to resist frost, and as they close in toward the top they protect from the rays of the sun the lump of clear ice formed within the calyx at night. The result of this was that often when telling along an unbroken belt and weary, through its stagnant swamp all I had to do (sadder my thirst was to pluck a frosted flower, nibble at the little lump of delicious water on the top.—Blackwood's Magazine.

What Boys Learned 300 Years Ago.

Schoolboys in old England took to Latin and Greek at an early age. At St. Saviour's Grammar school, Southwark, in 1611 a pupil of seven years and three months was admitted as an ordinary occurrence, who signed his form of admission, stating himself to be "reading and learning in the Accidence and entering into Propria quae Maribus, etc., and also Tully his second epistle, among those gathered by Sturmius, and Cordeius' dialogues, etc." The hours of study were long, too. An old record says that from March till September "the child is to come at 6 in the morning and be at school till 11. Again at 1 and stay till 6. The rest of the year he is to begin in the morning at 7 and leave at 5 in the afternoon. The master will not give leave to play but once a week." The master was to be "skilled in the Latin and able to teach grammar, oratory, poetry and Greek; as also the principles of Hebrew. He is to be of a wise, sociable and loving disposition, not hasty or furious, nor of ill example. He shall decline the ambition of every child through nose-to-fingernails."

What He Made.

Towne—Well, he's a tailor, you know. He's not used to polite society. It's only natural to expect a break.

Browne—Yes, but he made another branch of good manners shortly after that.

Towne—Ah, a pair of breeches! That's still more natural for a tailor.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Lowell Met Mr. Whistler.

In his volume on the question of diplomacy—John W. Foster relates an illuminating anecdote concerning James Russell Lowell when he was our minister at London. At a royal reception Minister Lowell, in plain evening dress, was preceded up the palace stairway by a minister from Central America, gorgeously appareled, wearing a jeweled sword, who was saluted at each landing by the magnificent halberdier with a heavy whack of the battle ax on the marble pavement. As Mr. Lowell wore no insignia of office, he received no attention. At last, his patriotic blood boiling, he addressed the halberdier in excellent Spanish, "Do you know who I am?" "I don't." "Well," said Mr. Lowell, "I am the minister plenipotentiary of the United States of America, the greatest nation on earth, and if you don't whack the next time I pass you I will forget you at Christmas!" And the halberdier whacked thereafter as directed.

Child Gypsies.

A London writer exclaims at thinking, "There is really nothing to account for the extraordinary critical mood which the modern child has developed in regard to toyland." The modern child will simply not make believe. Little boys and girls alike become sticklers for the "correct things" and if the build of a steamship or a motor car, the cut of a doll's frock or the mysteries the eye does not usually see are not "just like" the real thing there is trouble. It is said that toy makers have even now to employ actresses' maids and French milliners to call, hoping to pass the critical eyes of the "new child." The fact is the modern child is been a cynic and a satellite flashing. It has no emotions, no fancies, save to destroy and be lived and qualified for by necessary parents.

Romance of a Necklace.

Many years ago an old Frenchwoman died in a poor part of Dublin, and her little effects were put up for auction. Among other odds and ends was a necklace of dirty looking green stones, which did not attract much attention. However, a shrewd pair of dealers thought there might be "money in it" and decided on purchasing, clubbing together £8 for the purpose. On taking it to a well known jeweler he promptly offered £3,500, which sum they refused and sold the necklace of purest emeralds for £7,000 in London, where Lord Rosebery on his marriage purchased it for something like £30,000. The old Frenchwoman's mother had been attached to the court of France, and the emeralds had once formed part of the crown jewels.—London Answers.

Young Wife—My sweetest, darling, best beloved hubby! Hubby (resignedly)—All right, spring it. I am prepared for the worst.

The Metric System.

The greatest victory won for the metric system of an English speaking country within a generation was recorded of the metric standard in the great manufacturing works of Kynoch, limited, at Birmingham, England. This step will revive the hopes of the friends of reform in weights and measures and intensify the struggle between the meter and the inch. The significance of the event lies in the fact that this firm is one of the first, outside of a strictly limited field, to abandon the old standards and to attempt to overcome the apparently insurmountable obstacles to the change.

The Gheian Collection.

It is reported from Brussels that Joseph Gielen's collection of manuscripts and miniatures, often admired in art exhibitions, has been presented by the owner to the Royal library of Brussels. Among the precious "heures d'heures," illuminated by Flemish artists of the fifteenth century, is the prayer book of Marie Leszczynska, the wife of Louis XV. of France, for which 25,000 francs was once offered. The illustrations in the book were made by the painter Boucher.

The Kaiser's Dish.

Escoffier, a famous French chef, who was the German emperor's favorite cook on his cruise last summer, tells a Berlin reporter that the emperor eats more at breakfast than at dinner and that his favorite dish is chicken stuffed with tomato and paprika dressing. Many chickens served at the imperial table bear on the breast the imperial crown and eagle made of chili sauce.

Owns outright 35 Acres of Rich Mineral Land, all in process of patent, in the heart of the camp, lying between the Mohawk and the Great Sandstorm Mines, and only a few hundred feet away from either.

By reference to the small map hereto attached, which is a correct copy, you will see the Last Dollar, Ruble and Rex, three properties belonging to the SANDSTORM ANNEX GOLD MINING CO., shown in heavy lines; with the Sandstorm, Kendall and Desert Rose mines at top, and the Mohawk, Jumbo and other mines at bottom.

Experts agree that the rich veins from which the Sanstorm is getting such fabulously rich ore, which is equal to any taken from the Mohawk, is a continuation of the Mohawk vein, and extends right through our property.

The Desert Rose mine, joining the Last Dollar, one of our properties, has produced ore worth $20,000 a ton in gold.

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered: the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assayays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

Author of "The Sowers," "Reddin's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by HARPER & BROTHERS

Oscard was too great a traveler, too experienced a wanderer, to be put out of temper by this enforced rest. The men had worked very well hitherto. It had, in its way, been a great feat of generalship, this leading through a wild country of men unprepared for travel, scantily provisioned, disorganized by recent events. No accident had happened, no serious delay had been incurred, although the rate of progress had necessarily been very slow. Nearly six weeks had elapsed since Oscard with his little following had turned their backs forever on the simiacine plateau. But now the period of acute danger had passed away. They had almost reached civilization. Oscard was content.

When Oscard was content he smoked a slower pipe than usual, watching each cloud of smoke vanish into thin air. He was smoking very slowly this the third evening of their encampment at Msala. There had been heavy rain during the day, and the whole lifeless forest was dripping with a continuous, ceaseless clatter of heavy drops on tropic foliage, with an amalgamated sound like a widespread whisper.

Oscard was sitting in the windowless room without a light, for a light only attracted a myriad of heavy winged moths. He was seated before the long French window, which, since the sash had gone, had been used as a door. Before him in the glimmering light of the mystic Southern Cross the great river crept unctuously, silently to the sea. It seemed to be stealing away surreptitiously while the forest whispered of it. In its surface the reflection of the great stars of the southern hemisphere ran into little streaks of silver, shimmering away into darkness.

All sound of human life was still. The natives were asleep. In the next room Joseph in his hammock was just on the barrier between the waking and the sleeping life, as soldiers learn to be. Oscard would not have needed to raise his voice to call him to his side.

The leader of this hurried retreat had been sitting there for two hours. The slimy moving surface of the river had entered into his brain; the restless silence of the African forest alone kept him awake. He hardly realized that the sound momentarily gaining strength within his ears was that of a paddle—a single, weakly irregular paddle. It was not a sound to wake a sleeping man. It came so slowly, so gently through the whisper of the dripping leaves that it would enter into his slumbers and make itself part of them.

Guy Oscard only realized the meaning of that sound when a black shadow crept on to the smooth evenness of the river's breast. Oscard was eminently a man of action. In a moment he was on his feet and in the darkness of the room there was the gleam of a rifle barrel. He came back to the window—watching.

He saw the canoe approach the bank. He heard the thud of the paddle as it was thrown upon the ground. In the gloom, to which his eyes were accustomed, he saw a man step from the boat to the shore and draw the canoe up. The silent midnight visitor then turned and walked up toward the house. There was something familiar in the gait—the legs were slightly bowed. The man was walking with great difficulty, staggering a little at each step. He seemed to be in great pain.

Guy Oscard laid aside the rifle. He stepped forward to the open window.

"Is that you, Durnovo?" he said, without raising his voice.

"Yes," replied the other. His voice was muffled as if his tongue were swollen, and there was a startling break in it.

Oscard stepped aside and Durnovo passed into his own house.

"Got a light?" he said in the same muffled way.

In the next room Joseph could be heard striking a match, and a moment later he entered the room, throwing a flood of light before him.

"Good God!" cried Oscard. He stepped back as if he had been struck, with his hand shielding his eyes.

"Save us!" ejaculated Joseph in the same breath.

The thing that stood there, sickening their gaze, was not a human being at all. Take a man's eyelids away, leaving the round balls staring, blood streaked; cut away his lips, leaving the grinning teeth and red gums; shear off his ears—that which is left is not a man at all. This had been done to Victor Durnovo. Truly the vengeance of man is crueler than the vengeance of God!

Could he have seen himself, Victor Durnovo would never have shown that face, or what remained of it, to a human being. He could only have killed himself. Who can tell what cruelties had been paid for, piece by piece, in this loathsome mutilation? The slaves had wreaked their terrible vengeance; but the greatest, the deepest, the most inhuman cruelty was in letting him go.

"They've made a pretty mess of me," said Durnovo, in a sickening, lifeless voice, and he stood there with a terrible caricature of a grin.

Joseph set down the lamp with a groan and went back into the dark room beyond, where he cast himself upon the ground and buried his face in his hands.

"O Lord!" he muttered. "O God in heaven, kill it, kill it!"

Guy Oscard never attempted to run away from it. He stood slowly gulping down his nauseating horror. His teeth were clinched; his face, through the sunburn, livid; the blue of his eyes seemed to have faded into an ashen gray. The sight he was looking on would have sent three men out of five into gibbering idiocy.

Then at last he moved forward. With averted eyes he took Durnovo by the arm.

"Come," he said, "lie down upon my bed. I will try to help you. Can you take some food?"

Durnovo threw himself down heavily on the bed. There was a punishment sufficient to expiate all his sins in the effort he saw that Guy Oscard had had to make before he touched him. He turned his face away.

"I haven't eaten anything for twenty-four hours," he said, with a whistling intonation.

"Joseph," said Oscard, returning to the door of the inner room—his voice sounded different; there was a metallic ring in it—"get something for Mr. Durnovo; some soup or something."

Joseph obeyed, shaking as if ague was in his bones.

Oscard administered the soup. He tended Durnovo with all the gentleness of a woman and a fortitude that was above the fortitude of men. Despite himself his hands trembled, big and strong as they were. His whole being was contracted with horror and pain. Whatever Victor Durnovo had been, he was now an object of such pity that before it all possible human sins faded into spotlessness. There was no crime in all that human nature has found to commit for which such cruelty as this would be justly meted out in punishment.

Durnovo spoke from time to time, but he could see the effect that his hissing speech had upon his companion and in time he gave it up. He told haltingly of the horrors of the simiacine plateau; of the last grim tragedy acted there; how at last, blinded with his blood, maimed, stupefied by agony, he had been hounded down the slope by a yelling, laughing horde of torturers.

There was not much to be done, and presently Guy Oscard moved away to his camp chair, where he sat staring into the night. Sleep was impossible. Strong, hardened, weather beaten man that he was, his nerves were all a-tingle, his flesh creeping and jumping with horror. Gradually he collected his faculties enough to begin to think about the future. What was he to do with this man? He could not take him to Loango. He could not risk that Jocelyn or even Maurice Gordon should look upon this horror.

Joseph had crept back into the inner room, where he had no light, and could be heard breathing hard, wide awake in his hammock.

Suddenly the silence was broken by a loud cry:

"Oscard! Oscard!"

In a moment Joseph and Oscard were at the bedside.

Durnovo was sitting up, and he grabbed at Oscard's arms.

"For God's sake!" he cried. "For God's sake, man, don't let me go to sleep!"

"What do you mean?" asked Oscard. They both thought that he had gone mad. Sleep had nothing more to do with Durnovo's eyes—protruding, staring, terrible to look at.

"Don't let me go to sleep," he repeated. "Don't! Don't!"

"All right," said Oscard soothingly—"all right. We'll look after you."

He fell back on the bed. In the flickering light his eyeballs gleamed.

Then, quite suddenly, he rose to a sitting position again with a wild effort.

"I've got it! I've got it!" he cried.

"Got what?"

"The sleeping sickness!"

The two listeners knew of this strange disease. Oscard had seen a whole village devastated by it, the habitants lying about their own doors, stricken down by a deadly sleep from which they never awoke. It is known on the west coast of Africa, and the cure for it is unknown.

"Hold me!" cried Durnovo. "Don't let me sleep!"

His head fell forward even as he spoke, and the staring, wide open eyes that could not sleep made a horror of him.

Oscard took him by the arms and held him in a sitting position. Durnovo's fingers were clutching at his sleeve.

"Shake me! God! Shake me!"

Then Oscard took him in his strong arms and set him on his feet. He shook him gently at first, but as the dread somnolence crept on he shook harder, until the mutilated inhuman head rolled upon his shoulders.

"It's a sin to let that man live," exclaimed Joseph, turning away in horror.

"It's a sin to let any man die," replied Oscard, and with his great strength he shook Durnovo like a garment.

And so Victor Durnovo died. His strained soul left his body in Guy Oscard's hands, and the big Englishman shook the corpse, trying to awake it from that sleep which knows no earthly waking.

So, after all, heaven stepped in and laid its softening hand on the judgment of men. But there was a strange irony in the mode of death. It was strange that this man, who never could have closed his eyes again, should have been stricken down by the sleeping sickness.

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

THE

DOUGLAS MINING COMPANY, LIMITED

par value $1.00. As a result of last summer's work numerous veins of rich ore were uncovered, assaying from $10 up to $5000. There is every indication that this property will prove sensationally rich, and with the low capitalization of $500,000, $150,000 of which is in the Treasury, the dividends should be large, and the stock become very valuable. This is a thorough business mining proposition, and will stand the most critical examination. As there are only a limited number of shares offered, intending subscribers should send in their orders without delay.

SMELTING A TOWN.

All Its Houses Built of Bricks of Gold and Silver Ore.

One reads of romantic castles of silver and palaces of gold, but they are the dreams of fiction. Now they have discovered something as strange on the map of Mexico. The buildings of a whole town have been bought at so much a ton, based on assays from the adobe walls, which give gold and silver values. This town is Guanajuato's suburb, Tepetapa, at a value of about $30,000 Mexican currency.

The value of this little town was revealed when the Mexican Central decided to build into the city of Guanajuato and to establish a station there.

It was found necessary to tear down about 300 buildings which had been built of the slimes produced by the grinding of ores from the numerous mines of the district. Straw was mixed with the slime to make the adobe bricks.

When it became known that the Central would have to tear down these houses an enterprising ore buying company asked for permission to assay ore taken from the buildings. This was granted, and samples were picked from the walls at various heights and on various sides of the buildings, the assays running in value from $3 to $24 a ton in gold and silver. The values averaged about $8 gold a ton.

As the buildings were built in various bonanza epochs, it was found that the values varied to a large extent. For instance, a wall on one side of a house would assay a low value, whereas a wall on the other side, built at an earlier or later time, would assay a high value. A man's kitchen might assay 60 cents a ton and his parlor $50.

That the walls are found to contain more gold than silver values is due to the fact that the old patio process of treating the ores was more effective in extracting silver than gold values, and the slimes left were richer in gold than silver. It will be harder to build such a town in the future, as the camp is now fitted out with modern appliances for treating ores.—Mexican Herald.

Swiss Shoemakers.

Swiss shoemakers work ten to twelve hours a day. "The factory workman," says Special Agent Arthur B. Butman in a United States government report, "is required during the summer to begin his labor at 4:30 or 5 a. m. This early hour is demanded in order that the fresh energies of the workers may be obtained by the employer, as nearly all artisans are engaged to a greater or less degree in agriculture for personal benefit. During the winter season work in factories commences at 6 o'clock. Fifteen and twenty minute rests are allowed at 9 and 4 o'clock respectively, when refreshments of beer and bread are taken. From one to one and one-half hours are allowed for dinner. The principal food of Swiss shoemakers consists of bologna, bread and cheese, with beer; fresh meat is seldom eaten unless on feast days; soups are served on Sundays."

Kipling as an Art Critic.

As an after dinner speaker the author of "The Absentminded Beggar" is, even his most ardent admirers will confess, not a success. As an art critic he has pretensions. His friend Baden-Powell thinks himself something of an artist and is an assiduous member of the London Sketch club. "To see him there," says a writer in the Grand Magazine, "struggling with pencil and water colors one would think he cared more for artistic than military renown." Upon one of the gallant soldier's artistic triumphs the novelist has written two verses. One runs as follows:

This is the ocean bright and blue
With the Dunedin Castle plowing through,
But if you turn it upside down
It is the veldt so bright and brown.

The other has been lost to posterity.—Westminster Gazette.

A Nast Cartoon.

Among the people who attended the recent sale in New York of the Thomas Nast cartoons was a man who had called on the cartoonist years ago at his home in Morristown for the purpose of seeing and talking to the artist, for whom he had great admiration. In the course of the pleasant interview the visitor expressed a desire to buy a rough sketch of a cartoon showing Boulanger receiving the result of the French elections in which the general had been defeated. Nast said that he thought too much of it to part with the sketch. When lot No. 135 was put up it was recognized as the coveted cartoon, and the man who could not buy it a few years ago at any price bid $2 and secured the picture.

Manchuria's Wooden Plows.

The large and fertile fields of Manchuria are tilled with wooden plows. The vast number of well made carts that are turned out are constructed with crude tools, laboriously fashioned in the local blacksmith shop, and a day is taken to put in shape iron fittings that an expert machinist with good cold chisel and emery wheel would finish in half an hour. Labor is cheap, but foreign inventions are creeping in.

A Banned National Hymn.

The national hymn of Mexico is so sacred that on a recent Sunday the archbishop of Guillo was arrested, jailed and fined for having it played in his church. Even at bull fights a permit is necessary before the band can strike up this tune.

Cause of Split Nails.

Split finger nails are invariably a sign that sufficient salt is not taken with the food, this causing a softness and brittleness of the nails. Those who are troubled in this way, therefore, should eat more salt than have been accustomed to do. In addition they must see that they do not wash their hands in water that is warm.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

REST YOUR CLOTHES.

An Up to Date Idea That Is Worth While Trying.

The up to date woman, not satisfied with her own rest cures, has taken to resting her clothes, and it works like a charm.

Nothing induces shabbiness in coats and gowns more than the lines and wrinkles which show they have been constantly worn. Sitting creases make a garment old before it has done half its duty.

Men seem to realize this more than women. A man is able to dress well on a very small income, because every few days or every week he makes a change of clothes, sends the suit he has been wearing to the tailor to be pressed and never under any condition allows a wrinkle to become fixed in his garments.

Very few women's frocks can go to the tailor's. It is well to send one's street frocks occasionally to the cleaner's to be brushed and pressed. She can manage to change her clothes often enough to give them an entire rest.

The best way to give them a rest is to put both skirt and bodice in long boxes or bureau drawers, where they can lie in soft folds, and if sleeves and trimmings are filled out with tissue paper so much the better. Shirts and coats placed on hangers lose in a few days the lines where they have conformed to the figure. These lines not only spoil the fresh appearance of a frock, but the material wears around them and loses color in streaks.

Wash frocks should always be put away in trunks, drawers or boxes, whether they have been worn or not, for in hanging they grow stringy, are more easily affected by the dampness and lose their freshness before they are worn.

A clever girl, with more taste than money, also puts away her laces and ribbons to rest. This is not so much to freshen them, though they are much improved by it, but is to have something which is new to her friends when she rewears them after their "rest cure."

HOME GYMNASTICS.

A Healthful Way to Dispense With an Extra Servant.

One of the household magazines is responsible for the story of Mrs. Farniente.

Mrs. Farniente consulted her family physician for a bad case of semi-invalidism and received from him the advice that she was suffering from too much help in the kitchen.

Acting on this advice, Mrs. Farniente dismissed one of her maids and began to use a broom and duster herself, thus bringing into play muscles which had grown limp and flabby from disuse.

In the morning Mrs. Farniente made beds and found that the various twistings of the torso required by the exercise caused her to take deep breaths and started her circulation, which had been sluggish for years.

At the suggestion of her doctor she left all the windows of the chambers wide open while she was making the beds so she might have fresh air with her exercise.

For the first time in her life she began to notice how many different muscles were called into play by the ordinary duties of housework. Later she began to observe a decided improvement in her health and spirits, and at the end of two months she reported to her physician that no prescription she had ever tried had helped her so much as the last one he had given her.

This is only one instance out of many thousands that have never been chronicled in print in which the practice of a woman's natural gymnastics (housework) has changed a semi-invalid into a healthy woman.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

The old fashioned remedy for sore throat and a croupy cough is hard to excel. Over half a cupful of minced onions pour a tablespoonful of vinegar and a half cupful of boiling molasses. Use half a teaspoonful of the sirup every fifteen or twenty minutes for an hour or two, then less frequently.

It is claimed that a sure remedy for cold feet is to dip them quickly two or three times before retiring into a shallow pail of cold water, then rub briskly with a coarse towel until dry. After accomplishing this take hold of each end of the towel and draw it back and forth through the hollow of the foot until a glowing sensation is experienced.

Every household should have an emergency outfit and keep it where every adult member of the family will know where to find it when the emergency arises. The outfit should include a bottle of carbolic acid, a bottle of listerine, sterilized gauze or clean linen rags, a roll of absorbent cotton, one or two rolls of bandages and a cake of aseptic soap.

A little child should never be allowed to go to sleep with its face partly under the bedclothing. Mothers are supposed to know this, but they are often careless. A child's face must be entirely uncovered when asleep, so that it inhales only perfectly pure air and not that which has already been breathed. It is trifling things like this which make or mar a child's future health.

A Sewing Hint.

If you wish to shirr a girdle or ruffles, it is much easier to do so on the sewing machine. Make the tension of the upper thread quite loose and stitch where you want it gathered, then pull the lower thread, and it will gather. You must fasten one end of the thread securely or it will pull through.

Albuquerque.

Albuquerque, N. M., was named by the Spanish from a town of the same name in Spain, which took its title from Alphonso d'Albuquerque, a famous Portuguese soldier.

A Dog Habit.

The habit of turning around three or four times before lying down has survived in the domestic dog from his savage ancestry. It then served to break down the tall grass and spikes and

KING EDWARD HUSTLES.

Monarch Answers His Letters Promptly and Is Early At Work.

Considerable snap is now imparted to royal functions. Before the King's accession levees began at 2 o'clock. Old friends lunched together at their clubs, toddled over to Buckingham Palace and spent half the afternoon chatting round huge fires that burnt in every room. Things are now speeded up. Levees begin at 12 and are over in three-quarters of an hour. Those who in old times used to remain chatting with the then Prince of Wales are a little huffed in consequence.

Distinguished folk are hustled a good deal at the court, too. Those who are wise reach Buckingham Palace about 9 o'clock p. m. Proceeding to the first room they are then the earliest to pass before their Majesties, after the diplomatic corps has been received. Early arrivals at once take up a position on the raised seats, commanding a fine view of the show.

Great Display of Gowns.

It's a sight to behold some of the women wrestling with their court trains, which require considerable practice to handle gracefully. Talking of trains reminds me that here, too, things are on the upgrade. Women no longer borrow the well-worn train of their sister, aunt or of a retired duchess or go in for patchwork get-up.

The one object at present is to exhibit a gown both beautiful and original. Lace, tulle, gauze, tissue and other flimy materials are used, and the effect when seen in contrast with the men's brilliant uniforms beats fairyland.

By the bye, "hock cup" is just now in great demand at court suppers. It was once a specialty in the days of Queen Victoria. The recently revived taste for light wines is largely due to the royal lead, hock being a favorite with the King.

King Edward has broken right adrift from his mother's prejudice. Elevators have recently been installed in Buckingham Palace. The writing-room where His Majesty attends to business affairs is fitted up like a city magnate's private office. He has not yet taken to a roll-top desk, but an American letter filing system is now in constant use. A battery of new typewriters have been installed in the private secretary's office.

Business Methods Used.

The King manages his vast correspondence on strictly "business" lines. Every letter has its number and proper index reference. It is not generally known that the King prides himself on the fact that he leaves no letter unanswered overnight. Dictating to various secretaries, His Majesty really dispatches a big "bunch" of correspondence each morning before most society leaders have had their second breakfast.

The personal suites of rooms in Buckingham Palace have just been gorgeously re-decorated. Queen Alexandra's bedroom is panelled in pale rose silk, with hangings of white satin. Her bathroom is quite new, an annex being specially built for it. It is fitted with a bath of Grecian marble from special quarries.

Queen's Life in Letters.

That important chapter of history covered by "Letters of Queen Victoria" is at last to become accessible to the public, for three volumes will be issued in the autumn.

The forecast indicates that the work, which is appearing "by authority of His Majesty the King," will be one of exceptional interest. The first volume covers the correspondence of the Queen until she was nearly 25 years old. Here she will be seen as a girl princess, then as a young queen under the guidance of a courtly, chivalrous premier. Next the reader finds her called upon to select a husband after her own heart. All through there is held up a mirror of public events as they appeared from the throne.

The second volume covers a long period, dealing with the repeal of the corn laws and foreign revolutions, of which the most sensational incident will perhaps be found in the story of the flight of Louis Philippe to New Haven.

The correspondence in the third volume bears on the eastern question, the Crimean war, the Indian mutiny, the China war, the Franco-Austrian war, and the struggle for a united Italy. This volume closes with the prince consort's life, so the whole work just covers a quarter of a century—that is to say, from 1837 to 1861. Queen Victoria was a woman of strong individuality and of decided preference and even prejudices. The object throughout the book has been to show the personality of the Queen, her method of approaching and deciding questions, her outlook, her sympathies, her shrewdness, her perseverance, and her diligence.

Standardized Sausage.

The Lancet (London) which ever loves to cast a keen eye on some homely detail of everyday life, such as poison in postage stamps or the nutritive value of Christmas puddings, this week devotes an article to the sausage. It admits that on the whole nowadays sausages are made with wholesome ingredients, "though," it says, "it is a common subject of jest, since it is so often regarded as a convenient vehicle for materials which, when undisguised, certainly do not appeal to us as being suitable or even wholesome for purposes of food."

In spite of this improvement the Lancet is not satisfied and demands "a standardised sausage," so as to prevent it from being loaded with a cheap substitute, which is nearly always bread or broken waste biscuits. This, The Lancet says, is a palpable fraud, as the sausage is looked upon as a meaty and not a farinaceous food. Moreover, the price is approximately that of meat. The Lancet, therefore, demands a legal, authoritative defination of a sausage.

No Appetite

Your Food Disagrees. You're Tired--Lifeless. Skin is Yellow

You'll Feel Worse Every Day Unless You Brace Up Quick. The Best Treatment is Ferrozone.

Every day comes the good news of wonderful cures with Ferrozone.

In Peterboro it worked marvels for Louis Meehan—put him right on his feet—made him entirely well.

"About three years ago" says Mr. Meehan, "I had the Grippe which left me in a very run down condition that finally developed into Dyspepsia. I was unable to eat but a few things and had a craving for acid. I gave up treating with the doctors because they did not help me and on the advice of a friend used Ferrozone. It not only cured me of Dyspepsia and Biliousness, but has built up my strength to what it was before I had the Grippe. I can recommend Ferrozone as an ideal restorative."

Ferrozone gives you force, energy, vim.

It strengthens the stomach, cures indigestion, prevents headaches—guarantees good health.

Thousands use Ferrozone—they all improve—get better health—look better—feel better; try it yourself—sold in 50c. boxes by all druggists.

East Ward Smithy Changes Hands

Mr. John Craig, the veteran blacksmith of the east ward, it will be remembered, a few months ago, sold that long established business to Mr. W. Fitzgerald. Owing to Mr. Fitzgerald's illness the shop was closed for some time, and now Mr. George Chunk has taken the business. Mr. Chunk was employed as a blacksmith at Wm. Hamilton's previous to going into business for himself.

Does Coffee disagree with you? Probably it does! Then try Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. "Health Coffee" is a clever combination of parched cereals and nuts. Not a grain of real Coffee, remember, in Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, yet its flavor and taste matches closely old Java and Mocha Coffee. If your stomach, heart, or kidneys can't stand Coffee drinking, try Health Coffee. It is wholesome, nourishing, and satisfying. It is nice even for the youngest child. Sold by J. D. Tully.

The Mandolin Club also gave a selection. Mr. McLaren and Mr. Chambers sang in good voice, while Messrs. Chambers, Greenslade and Paddock favored the gathering with well rendered trios.

Good Record of Norwood Pupils

The Norwood Register says: At the last public commencement exercises of the High School, the chairman of the Board of Education drew the attention of the audience to the number of young men who had gone directly from this class room into financial institutions, requiring ability and trustworthiness, and their success. Among them are no less than seven bank managers, six of whom graduated from the High School during the past eight years or nearly one a year.

Case Against Local Firm Postponed

The case of a Toronto wholesale firm against a George street bookseller that was to have been tried before Judge Weller yesterday, was not on the table, as the C.P.R. conductor's appealed case for blocking George street for more than five minutes, took up the whole time of the court until after six o'clock. The case in question against the local bookman is based upon an alleged refusal to pay for a bill of goods, which it is said by the defendant were not up to the standard as shown originally. The case will be tried today.

He was in charge of Deputy Sheriff Fred Hall and Turnkey Robert Rae. Chambers may for good behavior be allowed ten months off his sentence at the penitentiary. In his last term that Chambers served at Kingston he was allowed 27 months off his sentence of ten years.

Mr. Rogers to Live Here Again

The many friends of Mr. R. B. Rogers, D.L.S., will be pleased to learn that this expert and well posted civil engineer and surveyor, who was a main factor in the successful completion of the lift lock will return to the city shortly to take up his residence in his former home on the corner of Rogers and Hunter streets in the east ward. Mr. Rogers and his family have been residing in Campbellford for some months where Mr. Rogers was largely interested in the Northumberland Paper Company of that town. "MINES AND NEAR-MINES"

We told you last week about "get rich propositions," where promoters owned a piece of barren ground, incorporated a company and sold stock for their personal uses.

In locating claims, a claim being 600 feet by 1,500 feet, the long way of the claim lies along the location ledge. A claim located on the side line adjoining, while advertised as being near such a property does not follow that it is as good or any good, compared with the mine they are using to sell their stock. In some cases they have proved bonanzas, but the chances are against it. We have two claims end to end, on a rich ledge, 3,000 feet of ledge matter. We are selling stock at 25c. per share (par value $1.00) to place a mill on the property, when no more stock will be sold at this price. We have ore enough in sight to warrant this investment, and we anticipate that the stock will go above par.

We want you to write us, and we will tell you all about it. Silver Queen Mining Co., 84 Bacon Bldg., Oakland, California. Mines in the "Wonder District," Nevada.

Words of Praise

For the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed, as given by leaders in all the several schools of medicine, should have far more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has THE BADGE OF HONESTY on every bottle-wrapper, in a full list of all its ingredients printed in plain English.

If you are an invalid woman and suffer from frequent headache, backache, gnawing distress in stomach, periodical pains, disagreeable, catarrhal, pelvic drain, dragging-down distress in lower abdomen or pelvis, perhaps dark spots or specks dancing before the eyes, faint spells and kindred symptoms caused by female weakness, or other derangement of the feminine organs, you can not do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The hospital, surgeon's knife and operating table may be avoided by the timely use of "Favorite Prescription" in such cases. Thereby the obnoxious examinations and local treatments of the family physician can be avoided and a thorough course of successful treatment carried out in the privacy of the home. "Favorite Prescription" is composed of the very best native medicinal roots known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments, contains no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs.

Do not expect too much from "Favorite Prescription;" it will not perform miracles; it will not dissolve or cure tumors. No medicine will. It will do as much to establish vigorous health in most weaknesses and ailments peculiarly incident to women as any medicine can. It must be given a fair chance by perseverance in its use for a reasonable length of time.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this remedy of known composition.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is guarded as sacredly secret and womanly confidences are protected by professional privacy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best laxative and regulator of the bowels. They invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative; two or three a cathartic. Easy to take as candy.

Sanctuary in Corfu Where no Extradition Treaty Exists---By Bribery He Gets Secure Protection.

PARIS, April 28.—Fernand Bolles, a bookkeeper, whose manner of life caused his employers to give him notice, discovered in reading of the exploits of the runaway bank clerk Gallay that Greece had no extradition treaty with France, and therefore resolved to seek a sanctuary in Corfu, whither he fled in October, 1905, with $27,500 from forged checks, and with Amelia Bigouville, her sister, and her child.

His adventures were brought to light in the Paris courts yesterday. "I tried to be an honest man," beexplained, "but as my employers prevented me I resolved to be as dishonest as I could be." In a pretty little suburb of Corfu, handsome villas surrounded by palm trees and a world of roses, which has earned an unsavory reputation as the residence of many notorious characters from all parts of Europe, the party found a roomy villa, surrounded by a large garden, with a splendid view of the sea.

PURCHASED A VILLA.

The landlord was a local notary. Bolles resolved to settle down, and bought the place for $7,000. Then, supposing himself safe from pursuit, he sent his friends in Paris picture postcards, one representing himself and his companions on the verandah.

From these the Paris police found their clue. Two detectives visited the island, but one had to return to Athens to arrange for the expulsion of Bolles. Despite the intervention of the French minister, delay followed delay, and meantime the chief of the Corfu police, a friend of Bolles, notary landlord, kept him acquainted—for a consideration—with what took place. One pretext of delay was that the matter could not be dealt with while the Hellenic Parliament was debating the question of molesting foreigners. Operations were, therefore, postponed till parliament rose.

AIDED BY POLICE.

As a result of a formal complaint from the French minister, the chief of the police was in December removed from his position. Bolles, however, was taken to a safe hiding place by two policemen, and afterward went to live with smugglers at Mandrittino, whom he paid dearly for his food and lodging.

Unfortunately, he became so annoyed at the way he was being exploited by the police and smugglers that he returned to Corfu and in February, 1906, Bolles was expelled.

In court yesterday he said that he had been ruined by the sums paid to the Corfu police and the smugglers. The French detectives calculate, however, that these "tips" did not cost more than $1500, and believe that he has hidden away the remainder.

Dominion Bank Will Move Today

Handsome New Premises on George and Simcoe Streets to be Occupied.

An important change will be made in local banking circles this morning, when the Dominion Bank staff, books, and other requisits of the business, will be transferred from the temporary premises on Simcoe street to the bank's handsome new quarters.

Under the capable management of Mr. John Cruse, the business of this bank has increased so rapidly that a prompt removal to more commodious and suitable quarters was inevitable. As is generally known, the Dominion Bank have practically rebuilt and remodelled the store at the corner of George and Simcoe streets, formerly occupied by the China Hall. A complete dress of cut stone now encloses the lower floor of the large building, and presents a most attractive appearance. The whole walls in fact have been changed, new style windows inserted and other changes made to give the building a more imposing front ensemble. Two sets of entrance doors have been placed in position, the outer being of handsome and up-to-date wrought iron bars. The whole interior of the bank has been changed entirely. A beautiful mosaic pavement, has been laid, with a contrast with the polished marble sides, counters, etc., makes this bank one of the handsomest in Canada. Every detail of the metal work over counters, cages, etc., is a harmonious contrast with the other elegant fittings.

Everything possible has been done in the arrangement of the fittings, counters, etc., to expedite work and ensure comfort for the bank's customers. We venture to predict that Mr. Crane and his staff will in the future as in the past obtain a large share of local business.

Dam and Bridge for Buckhorn

It seems that the minister of railways and canals is making good the promises he made when the county council was in Ottawa some months ago. His department is advertising for tenders for the building of a concrete dam and highway bridge at Buckhorn. Not only will the dam be re-constructed, but the bridge will be built as well, and the county thus saved considerable expense.

Tenders for this work will be received up to May 15, and plans and specifications of the work may be seen at the office of the superintending engineer of the Trent Canal, at Peterborough.

Douro Priest Was Gratefully Remembered

Purse of Gold Presented to Rev. Father Kelly.

A pleasing function was enacted in St. Andrew's Hall, connected with St. Joseph's church, Douro, when the men of that church, presented a purse of gold, amounting to about $140, to Rev. Father Kelly, for the past six months curate to Rev. Father Kelly.

The occasion was taken advantage of by some 150 members of the Douro congregation to gather and show tangibly the regret felt, because Father Kelly was about to leave to connect himself with St. Peter's cathedral, and take charge of the Havelock church. The address was as follows;

Rev. P. J. Kelly;—

Dear Reverend Father,—We, the members of Douro parish, having learned with deep regret that you are, in a short time, to leave the parish in which you have so zealously done such excellent work during the past six months, and to transfer your scene of activity to another field, have taken advantage of the opportunity in order that we might prove to you that we truly appreciate your admirable qualities.

During your short stay among us you have made many warm friends and acquaintances, and have firmly endeared yourself to everybody in the parish by your zealous devotion to religious duties, by your willingness to assist the needy, by your sympathy for the distressed, and by your gentle words of consolation to the sick and afflicted. Your pleasant disposition, your unselfish nature and your unceasing kindness have left an impression on the minds of the people which can never be effaced.

We would like to assure you of our continued interest in you, though your field of labor may be far removed from Douro, and as an evidence of our esteem and a mark of our appreciation of your services, we ask you to accept of this purse and hope that your will continue to prosper, with the work to which you have chosen to devote your life.

We earnestly hope that you will remember us in your prayers, especially at the Holy Sacrifice of the mass, and in return we assure you we will always remember you in ours.

Signed on behalf of the parish of Douro

A Golden Message to Investors

A Colorado Mine that Seeks Fullest Investigation by Prospective Investors.

The Golden Message Mining Company, with headquarters at Boulder, Colorado, has a property that they invite all who contemplate buying stocks to visit and fully investigate and will refund all expenses if matters are not as represented. The company owns ten claims in the richest part of the gold producing State of Colorado. Four of these claims are already patented and six are being patented. This mine is no mere prospect or chance as $25,000 worth of development has already been done, and shipments of the ore prove this mine to be a veritable bonanza. The lowest grade ore (mill ore) brought $46.80 per ton, the second grade $262, whilst the highest grade ore produced $1621.16 per ton.

With such a record as this, purchasers of stock in the company will receive a genuine "Golden Message" as their dividends are declared. For a short time stock in the Golden Message Mining Co., of a par value of $1 each, are offered at 25 cents per share. This price is a recent raise from 10 cents per share, and the shares will doubtless take another similar raise shortly.

For full particulars address the Golden Message Mining Co., Boulder, Col., or H. F. Griswold, manager Home Investment Co., Boulder, Col.

Left 20 Millions to Lady Cooper

NEW YORK, April 28.—The American claims to have information that under the will of James Henry Smith, the millionaire who died recently in Japan, the widow, who was Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart, receives $5,000,000, or an income from that sum out of this immense estate.

Lady Jane Cooper, his sister, inherits $20,000,000, it says, while others of his blood relatives get liberal bequests.

According to the American, friends of Mrs. Smith declare that she will not be satisfied with the provision made for her in this testament and will contest it.

The will is said to be in the possession of Lord and Lady Cooper, who recently came to New York. The testament will be probated after the funeral of Mr. Smith, whose remains are now en route to that city from Japan.

The American also says that there is a possibility that there is another and later will, made just after Mr. Smith's marriage, in which Mr. Smith made far more liberal provisions for his widow. Such a will, it states, would also probably be contested by his blood relatives.

Fire This Morning

This morning about 1.30 the local fire brigade was hastily summoned to a fire in the vicinity of the Exhibition grounds. The house which was occupied by Mr. Van Zant, was completely destroyed, so the fire had gained too strong a hold before the firemen arrived, although they responded promptly to the call. It is understood that the house and furniture were not insured.

PARIS, April 28.—A costermonger named Windels went into a cafe at Courtrai last night and played dice with the landlord at a penny a throw until he won sixpence.

When Windels asked for payment the landlord told him mockingly to "call again." The costermonger thereupon drew his knife and stabbed the man to the heart. The murderer fled, and has not been arrested.

Presentation Made to Rev. Dr. O'Brien

Popular Local Priest Given Handsome Bag and Purse of Gold.

A pleasing feature of the Ladies' Literary section of St. Peter's T.A.S. meeting on Friday night was the presentation of a purse and handsome club bag to Rev. Dr. O'Brien, previous to his trip to Ireland. On behalf of the Ladies' Literary Society Miss L. L. Coleman read the address and Miss O'Connell made the presentation.

The address was in part as follows;

Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Spiritual Advisor of St. Peter's T.A.S.

Reverend Father,—We, the members of the Ladies' Literary society, having heard that in the course of a few days you will leave for Ireland to enjoy the rest which has been earned by your unceasing work and untiring efforts in the interests of the parish at large and in the welfare of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society, desire to express our pleasure that you should enjoy the recreation which you have so well deserved. We most heartily and warmly wish you "bon voyage" and hope that the trip you contemplate will lack no element of enjoyment or pleasure.

In conclusion reverend father, we ask you to accept this gift. In enjoying the pleasure of viewing again the emerald hills and vales of "Fair Erin," and the many historic sites of that far-famed "Home of Saints and Scholars," may it serve to remind you that in Peterborough you have won many warm friends who will find their greatest pleasure in wishing you a glad "Welcome Home."

Woman Shoots Man

BALTIMORE, Md., April 28.—Some excitement was created during the races at Pimlico yesterday by a woman, whose name is given as Mrs. Nina King, shooting Wm. Dunn, a betting commissioner, whose home is understood to be in Elmira, N.Y. Dunn saw what Mrs. King was about to do just in time to throw up his arm, and the bullet aimed at his head lodged in the arm.

It made a bad but not dangerous wound. The fact that some cool-headed bystanders acted out that it was only accidental prevented a panic.

Mrs. King, who comes from Buffalo, N.Y., is said to claim to be the wife of the man she shot. She was arrested, and is held on a charge of shooting with intent to kill.

Fear Revolution in Indian Empire

LAHORE, British India, April 27.—Rifles and 20 rounds of ball cartridge have been served out to the local volunteers in consequence of signs of marked unrest among the Hindoo student elements.

The publication of inflammatory and seditious articles in the native newspapers, inciting race hatred against the Europeans and demanding native control of the Government of India by means of an elected parliament, has been followed recently by riots there and elsewhere in the Punjab, and by attacks on Europeans.

Professional and political agitators are now fomenting strikes on the railroads, and the government has concluded that it is time to suppress the rioting by forceful means if necessary.

The authorities are satisfied that a determined front will speedily end the outward signs of disaffection, especially as they have the support of the great Mohammedan population, who at numerous mass meetings have emphatically condemned the anti-European movement.

Recent events have given a formidable impetus to enlistment in the volunteers. The recruits include five judges of the Supreme Court, the director of public instruction, university professors, high government officials, and leading bankers and merchants, all of whom have entered the ranks as privates.

Railway Officials Plot With Thieves

TURIN, April 28.—The wholesale arrests of Italian railway officials implicated in the international train robberies, effected last week, were the outcome of repeated protests on the part of a Scotch gentleman tourist, Walter Neilson, of Ayr, whose portmanteaus were ripped open and plundered between Modane and Genoa.

The Turin authorities, after weighing the circumstances of several hundred complaints from foreigners about their missing property, became convinced that the culprits must be associated with the state railways staff. Cavaliere Giambrano, who was appointed to superintend the secret investigations, discovered that a coterie of railway men were in the habit of meeting together frequently in a reserved saloon of a popular Turin cafe, where they were always joined by a certain Rossi, a peddler merchant, who seemed to be on a flourishing financial condition. On being more closely watched, the habitues of these reunions were noticed journeying often by express trains in which they had no business.

Nine arrests were made to begin with, including the suspected peddler. The arrested officials had in their possession their latest hauls, together with bunches of keys of every description for opening baggage. The police then raided their homes and a city warehouse rented by the peddler accomplice.

Among the abstracted good recovered are comprised hundreds of yards of silks and satins, neckties, handkerchiefs, boots, patent leather shoes, kodaks, spirals of cigars and Panama hats; also a wardrobe of priestly paraphernalia.

Women Have Their Ears Cut Off

MARSEILLES, April 28.—The latest exploit of the hooligans of Marseilles has struck terror into the heart of every woman in that city.

A few nights ago a woman on her way home was suddenly approached on the Quai du Vieux Port by a stranger and asked to hand over her gold earrings. She started back in alarm, and a minute later screamed and fell fainting to the pavement. When she was picked up by a policeman it was found that the lobe of her left ear had been cut off, and the ear rung with it.

A woman wearing a pair of pearl earrings was accosted by a well-dressed man in a quiet street, and asked to give up her earrings. She offered resistance and screamed. In an instant her left ear was cut entirely off and the thief ran away with the ear. Another woman had both ears. Quite a number of women have been similarly robbed during the last few days.

Several cases have been found, and M. Cavailler, the Marseilles juge d'instruction, has had them preserved in alcohol. In one case the assailant has been captured, and is to be tried before the assizes at Aix, when the ear will be produced as evidence.

One result of the crimes is that the women of Marseilles have now begun to discard earrings altogether.

Poses as Prince of Abyssinia

LONDON, April 28.—A strange story was told to the mayor of Grimsby yesterday by a colored man, who called himself Prince Thomas Makaroo, nephew of Menelik, King of Abyssinia.

The mayor was rung up on the telephone at 8.2 o'clock in the morning from one of the principal hotels of the town. "I'm Prince Makaroo, of North Africa," said the voice. "I've just landed from Hamburg, and before going on to Buckingham Palace, I should like to see you."

The mayor and Alderman Bickwell, made an appointment for later in the morning, and the "Prince," in full hat and fashionably cut clothes, drove up to the town hall. He explained that he had been in communication with Buckingham Palace in regard to the oppression of the Zulus as a consequence of the importation of Chinese labor into South Africa, that he had been robbed of 4,000 roubles, a watch and 1,000 marks, and that he wanted a temporary loan.

Inspector Bagley, who was consulted by the mayor, identified the "Prince" as "Khaki Sam," a man with a criminal record. He confronted him with his photograph, and detained him pending enquiries.

ROOSEVELT WILL NOT BACK DOWN

His Letter Respecting Haywood and Mayer Still Stands---He Defines His Attitude--Big Shook Policy.

Washington, April 27.—In a letter addressed to Honore Jaxon, of Chicago, chairman of the "Cook County Moyer-Haywood Conference," made public yesterday, President Roosevelt replied to the criticisms of his recent letter, in which he referred to Moyer and Haywood, officials of the Western Federation of Miners, charged with implication in the murder of former Governor Steunenberg, of Idaho, as "undesirable citizens." The President says he regrets any body of men should so far forget their duty to their country as, by formation of societies and in other ways, to endeavor to influence justice and coerce court of jury; that they, not he, are trying to influence justice, and he condemns what he calls their flagrant impropriety in the matter. He says that he indicated no opinion as to their guilt of the Steunenberg murder, but that it was a simple absurdity to suppose that because a man is on trial he is free from criticism as to his manner of life. He might as well be accused of trying to influence the suits against Harriman, some of whose friends had also criticized him. He said that Moyer and Haywood stand as representatives of those who habitually appear as guilty demnation of him for his criticism and of incitement to or apology for bloodshed or violence. He added that he was profoundly indifferent to the con- of the undesirable class of citizens, regardless of the power of either labor or capital.

DID NOT EXPRESS OPINION.

The letter says in part: "In my letter to which you object, I referred to a certain prominent financier, Mr. Harriman, on the one hand, and to Messrs. Moyer, Haywood and Debs on the other, as being equally undesirable citizens. It is as foolish to assert that this was designed to influence the trial of Moyer and Haywood as to assert that it was designed to influence the suits that have been brought against Mr. Harriman. I neither expressed nor indicated any opinion as to whether Messrs. Moyer and Haywood were guilty of the murder of Governor Steunenberg. If they are guilty they certainly ought to be punished. If they are not guilty they certainly ought not to be punished.

"But no possible outcome either of the trial or the suits can affect my judgment as to the undesirability of the type of citizenship of those whom I mentioned. Messrs. Moyer, Haywood and Debs stand as representatives of those men who have done as much to discredit the labor movement as the most speculative financiers or most to discredit honest capitalists and fair dealing business men.

"They stand as the representatives of those men, who, by their public utterances and manifestos, by the utterances of the papers they control or inspire, and by the words and deeds of those associated with or subordinated to them, habitually appear as guilty of incitement to or apology for bloodshed and violence.

BIG SHOCK POLICY.

"If this does not constitute undesirable citizenship, then there can neve rbe any undesirable citizenship. The men whom I denounce represent the men who have abandoned the legitimate movement for the uplifting of labor, which I have the most hearty sympathy with; they have adopted practices which cut them off from those who lead the legitimate movement. In every way I shall support unscrupulous employers of labor and debauchers of legislatures have done the law-abiding and upright representatives of labor, and in no way can I better support them than by drawing the sharpest possible line between them on the one hand and on the other hand these preachers of peace, who are themselves the worst foes of the honest laboring man.

"You say you ask for a square deal for Messrs. Moyer and Haywood. So do I. When I say square deal, I mean a square deal to everyone; it is equally a violation of the policy of a square deal for a capitalist to protest against denunciation against a capitalist who is guilty of any wrongdoing, and for a labor leader to protest against the denunciation of a labor leader who has been guilty of wrongdoing. I stand for equal justice to both, and so far as in my power lies, I shall uphold justice, whether the man accused or guilty has behind him the wealthiest corporations, the greatest aggregations of riches in the country, or whether he has behind him the most influential labor organization in the country."

State Control of Power

ALBANY, April 28.—An important measure designed to provide for a proper regulation of the development of the water power of the State, was introduced by Senator Fuller and Assemblyman O'Brian yesterday. By it the State Water Commission is authorized to devise plans for the progressive development of the water power of the State for the public use of the State, under State ownership and control. The commission is to adopt regulations governing the use of the water powers of the State and prevent a monopoly thereof. The commission is to proceed at once to gather and collate all possible information relating to the water powers of the State which is necessary to the development of its policy in this respect, and shall report to the Governor and the Legislature on the first of January, 1908, showing the progress made in its investigation, and shall make final report to the Governor on January 6, 1909. Fifty thousand dollars are appropriated to carry out the provisions of the bill.

Chinese in Bond

MONTREAL, April 28.—A recent train from the west brought 26 Chinamen who are bound for Havana, Cuba; Trinidad, Jamaica, and one of them for England.

The Chinks were in charge of Mr. J. W. Purdy, and are going through the country in bond. They landed in Vancouver from the C.P.R. boat Tartar. They came right through to Montreal in charge of Mr. Purdy, and from here were started off to their different destinations. There were four men in charge to prevent any of them leaving the train en route and escaping. Twenty of them will go to Havana via Halifax, and five are going to Trinidad, Jamaica, via New York, while one is going over to the Old Country via St. John.

FOOD ECONOMY

How to Save Money and get Strong

Nature always economizes. There is no waste in nature except as man brings it about.

In keeping up life and energy, Nature requires just so much of the simple element that go to make up proper food—man often causes waste of energy, by over eating.

A Minn. man cut down on his food schedule and was able to get rid of a lot of ills and be comfortable. He writes:

"For 25 years I suffered from chronic rheumatism and many other serious ills, including indigestion, headaches, and sluggishness of mind and body, which were very trying.

"I was advised by a doctor, who is an ardent advocate of Grape-Nuts, that my trouble lay in too much food—too much meat—eaten too fast without proper mastication. He advised me to try Grape-Nuts.

"An experiment of only a few day's convinced me that he was right.

"I made the change, and have found Grape-Nuts not only valuable as a food, but extremely helpful to perfect digestion by thorough chewing.

"Two eggs and a handful of Grape-Nuts with a little cream, thoroughly chewed, for breakfast now take the place of four eggs, some bacon or ham and a lot of pancakes or fried potatoes."

"With a corresponding change in my other two meals, I find myself, for the first time in 25 years, entirely free from rheumatism, indigestion and medical attendance. And my wife declares I am more agreeable and intelligent than ever!" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

PARLIAMENTARY DECENCY

The people of Canada have read with profound regret the accounts of certain recent proceedings in the House of Commons, during which members hurled charges across the House at each other, couched in language utterly out of keeping with such a chamber. There was a time when the Canadian House of Commons ranked with that of the United Kingdom, of which it used to be said that it was the first gentlemen's club in Europe, but unhappily that day seems to have past. As Sir Wilfrid Laurier said recently, there are men in that assembly who are not fit to be allowed in the presence of gentlemen. Of Sir Wilfrid himself and of Mr. R. L. Borden it is impossible to speak in too high praise, so far as their instincts and demeanor go. They would ornament any body of gentlemen in the world. Happily also there are very many men on both sides of the House concerning whom only words of approval can be said, but there is a distinctly ill-bred element, and it sits both on the right and the left of Mr. Speaker.

It is idle to attempt to disguise the fact that the presence of such men in the House of Commons not only lessens the respect in which that body is held by the public, but actually impairs its usefulness. No legislative body, in which the scenes and language at times are such as one might look for in a brothel, can be regarded as a deliberative assembly. Deliberation is impossible when disgraceful epithets are being hurled across the floor, and when more than half the House is wondering from day to day what new species of slander or brutality is going to be witnessed next. The public will lose all confidence in such a body.

It seems to us that the leaders of the two parties owes a duty to themselves, to the House of Commons and to the country in this regard. It is to stamp out all parliamentary indecency. We grant that the existence of facts which make such exhibitions of vulgarity possible is more to be regretted than the disgraceful scenes, and thins brings us to another point, which is that both political parties ought to take steps to purge themselves of men of the stamp so disreputably prominent of late. It is not enough to preserve parliamentary decency. The party leaders should exert their influence with their supporters to prevent the nomination of men, who in the first place so conduct themselves that their actions will not stand examination, and in the second place hasten when elected to violate every canon of parliamentary behavior.

Le Canada Favors a Canadian Navy

MONTREAL, April 27.—Le Canada, the French organ, in discussing the colonial conference, advocates the organization of a Canadian navy, just as we have a Canadian militia.

"We are all agreed," it says "that as far as the land army is concerned, the best thing for us to do is to organize a Canadian militia that will be able to defend the country. The problem is the same, and its solution should be the same in organizing a naval defence. Our contribution to the defence of the Empire should take the form of a general organization of a purely Canadian fleet. The history of Canada shows that the best policy for the Empire is to let the country attend to their own affairs, as they see fit.

Break Through Ice and Race for Port

DETROIT, Mich., April 27. — The first boats of the long delayed down bound grain fleet, held up above the Soo by the ice blockade, were forcing their way through the Soo river near Lime Island late last night, and are now believed to be in clear water at the head of Lake Huron. Five of the largest of the lake steamers are in the lead and there will be a lively brush between them for the honor of delivering the first cargo of the season at a lower lake port. The big upbound fleet is in Lake Superior rushing to the west end ports.

The Bohemian for May

The Bohemian for May is readable to the last word. Its special articles have the quality of entertaining without tiring. Its stories are thoroughly interesting, and the verse is worth more than a passing notice. The two features which will attract the most attention are Edward Marshall's "Dictionary of Unnatural History," and a funny travesty entitled, "How to Write a Comic Opera."

Miss Cecelia Loftus, one of the most charming women "on the boards," well known at different times as Henry Irving's leading woman and as "Peter Pan" in the London production, writes her little autobiography in "My Yesterdays." Miles Bradford, in his household article, tells of "Some Harmonies in Mushroom Cookery," giving an account of several attractive ways of preparing a food that is growing in favor with the epicures. "Little Glimpses of Famous Musicians" puts the reader on familiar terms with the leading artists who are helping to make contemporary music worth while.

The short stories are: "The Livery of Luck," a tale of a dress suit and the adventures into which it took its penniless wearer; "The Circumventing of Mr. Watts," telling how a young captain of industry out-generaled a veteran in the ways of finance; "The Enchantment of Pan," showing how the wholesome woods recalled a pampered son of fashion to his manhood and the surprising result of his wooing; "The Red-Headed Man;" "Horace, the Guide;" and "Even as You and I."

The latter story is written by Frank Hepburn Crawford, a newcomer in short-story ranks and one of exceptional promise, as a casual reading of this story of a strong man's fight with nature for revenge will show.

Besides this rich material, the department Bohemiana overflows with articles satirical, ironical and humorous.

Judgment to Decide and Courage to Act

Everybody works for themselves and earns their own money.

Self-reliance is the foundation of every rich man's fortune.

Advice of a friend may be good in many instances, but, if you invest money on a friend's advice and lose, will be pay back your loss? No.

And if you don't invest your money in the enterprise that appeals to your own judgment on the advice of a friend

And if that investment makes money, will that friend pay you from his own pocket what you have lost by not investing? Absolutely no.

Here are some facts about our business that you should know.

The 7% Guaranteed, Cumulative Dividend is the interest that our Preferred Stock will pay to shareholders.

A 5% discount from regular prices will be allowed to all shareholders in this institution, which is in itself a very attractive dividend on the investment in this Company.

That thousands will own this business instead of a few individuals.

That we will have a big mail order department to accommodate Out-of-Town Customers and Patrons.

And that your stock in this Company is free of tax in this State.

AS AN INVESTMENT

Department Store merchandising offers unexcelled opportunities to the person with limited means.

It gives them a safe and liberal guarantee on the amount invested, and also provides for their participating in the additional earnings of the business, which the history of Marshall Field, of Chicago, and many others, show to be limited only by the enterprise and integrity of the concern itself

CO-OPERATION means working together. This store is Co-operative and furnishes its shareholders with the best merchandise at the least possible advance over actual cost.

If you do not understand Co-operation and what it can do for you, you should send for our beautifully illustrated book. It will cost you nothing.

Manhattan Gold Field

If you never invest you never make

The millionaires of to-day are the investors of yesterday.

In choosing your investment these things should be considered; the ability, responsibility and integrity of those in charge of the company; that the property is in a proven district, and is owned by the company, and that gold has been found upon the property; that the money is being used for the interests of the company; that the company has no debts or obligations.

We have all these essentials, and own four claims, located in the heart of the Wonderful Manhattan District, from all of which we have taken rich ore, OUR AVERAGE ASSAY BEING OVER $400.00 TO THE TON.

We have so thoroughly tested our claims that WE KNOW WHAT WE HAVE. THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW! Stock selling at 20 cents a share, par value One Dollar, fully paid and non-assessable.

REPORT OF OFFICERS

"To the Directors of the Manhattan Independent Mining Co.:

"We have been in Manhattan, Nevada, and thoroughly tested our four claims, namely, 'American Flag,' 'Anglo Celtic,' 'Peerless' and 'Independent,' and personally took 100 or more samples of ore from different places along the 5200 feet of main ledge crossing our claims, and across the width of same, together with numerous samples from the cross-ledges, and had the same assayed, and the result of the assay was an average of $400.00 to the ton. We also had some of the samples panned, and the pannings bore out the assays. These samples were in no way selected, but were taken from all the ledges with no regard to value. Our property is all we could ask and is easy of access. Throughout our entire 80 acres we have an unlimited rich deposit of free milling gold, as good as the best in this wonderful camp.

"Respectfully submitted,

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Roden's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by HARPER & BROTHERS

They laid the body on the floor and covered the face, which was less grewsome in death, for the pity of the eyes had given place to peace.

The morning light, bursting suddenly through the trees as it does in equatorial Africa, showed the room set in order and Guy Oscard sleeping in his camp chair. Behind him, on the floor, lay the form of Victor Durnovo. Joseph, less iron nerved than the great big game hunter, was awake and astir with the dawn. He, too, was calmer now. He had seen death face to face too often to be appalled by it in broad daylight.

So they buried Victor Durnovo between the two giant palms at Msala, with his feet turned toward the river which he had made his, as if ready to arise when the call comes and undertake one of those marvelous journeys of his which are yet a household word on the west coast.

The cloth fluttered as they lowered him into his narrow resting place, and the face they covered had a strange mystic grin, as if he saw something that they could not perceive. Perhaps he did. Perhaps he saw the simiacine plateau, and knew that, after all, he had won the last throw, for up there, far above the table lands of central Africa, there lay beneath high heaven a charnel house. Hounded down the slope by his tormentors, he had left a memento behind him surer than their torturing knives, keener than their sharpest steel. He had left the sleeping sickness behind him.

His last journey had been worthy of his reputation. In twenty days he had covered the distance between the plateau and Msala, stumbling on alone, blinded, wounded, sore stricken, through a thousand daily valleys of death. With wonderful endurance he had paddled night and day down the sleek river without rest, with the dread microbe of the sleeping sickness slowly creeping through his veins.

He had lived in dread of this disease, as men do of a sickness which clutches them at last; but when it came he did not recognize it. He was so racked by pain that he never recognized the symptoms. He was so panic stricken, so paralysed by the nameless fear that lay behind him, that he could only think of pressing forward. In the night hours he would suddenly rise from his precarious bed under the shadow of a fallen tree and stagger on, haunted by a picture of his ruthless foes pressing through the jungle in pursuit. Thus he accomplished his wonderful journey alone through trackless forests. Thus he fended off the sickness which gripped him the moment that he laid him down to rest.

He had left it, a grim legacy, to his torturers, and before he reached the river all was still on the simiacine plateau.

And so we leave Victor Durnovo. His sins are buried with him, and beneath the giant palms at Msala lies Maurice Gordon's secret.

And so we leave Msala, the accursed camp. Far up the Ogowe river, on the left bank, the giant palms still stand sentry, and beneath their shade the crumbling walls of a cursed house are slowly disappearing beneath luxuriant growths of grass and brushwood.

CHAPTER XXII.

In a dimly lighted room in the bungalow at Loango two women had been astir all night. Now, as dawn approached, one of them, worn out with watching, wearied with that blessed fatigue of anxiety which dulls the senses, had lain down on the curtain covered bed to sleep.

While Marie slept Jocelyn Gordon walked softly backward and forward with Nestorius in her arms. Nestorius was probably dying. He lay in the Englishwoman's gentle arms, a little brown bundle of flexible limbs and cotton nightshirt. It was terribly hot. All day the rain had been pending. All night it had held off until the whole earth seemed to pulsate with the desire for relief. Jocelyn kept moving so that the changing air wafted over the little bare limbs might allay the fever. She was in evening dress, having, indeed, been called from the drawing room by Marie, and the child's woolly black head was pressed against her breast as if to seek relief from the inward pressure on the awakening brain.

A missionary possessing some small knowledge of medicine had been with them until midnight, and, having done his best, had gone away leaving the child to the two women. Maurice had been in twice, clumsily, on tiptoe, to look with ill concealed awe at the child and to whisper hopes to Marie, which displayed a ludicrous, if lamentable, ignorance of what he was talking about.

"Little chap's better," he said; "I'm sure of it. See, Marie, his eyes are brighter. Devilish hot, though, isn't he? Poor little soul."

Then he stood about, awkwardly sympathetic.

"Anything I can do for you, Jocelyn?" he asked, and then departed, only too pleased to get away from the impending calamity.

Marie was not emotional. She seemed to have left all emotion behind, in some other phase of her life which was shut off from the present by a thick curtain. She was patient and calm, but she was not so clever with the child as was Jocelyn. Perhaps her greater experience acted as a handicap in her execution of those small offices to the sick which may be rendered useless at any moment. Perhaps she knew that Nestorius was wanted elsewhere. Or it may only have been that Jocelyn was able to soothe him sooner, because there is an expedition law, that those who love us best are not always the best nurses for us.

When at last sleep came to the child it was in Jocelyn's arms that he lay with that utter abandonment of pose which makes a sleeping infant and a sleeping kitten more graceful than any living thing. Marie leaned over Nestorius until her dusky cheek almost touched Jocelyn's fair English one.

"He is asleep," she whispered.

And her great dark eyes probed Jocelyn's face as if wondering whether her arms, bearing that burden, told her that this was the last sleep.

Jocelyn nodded gravely, and continued the gentle swaying motion affected by women under such circumstances.

Nestorius continued to sleep, and at last Marie, overcome by sleep herself, lay down on her bed.

Thus it came about that the dawn found Jocelyn moving softly in the room, with Nestorius asleep in her arms. A pink light came creeping through the trees, presently turning to a golden yellow, and, behold, it was light! It was a little cooler, for the sea breeze had set in. The cool air from the surface of the water was rushing inland to supply the place of the heated atmosphere rising toward the sun. With the breeze came the increased murmur of the distant surf. The dull continuous sound seemed to live amid the summits of the trees far above the low built house. It rose and fell with a long drawn rhythmic swing. Already the sounds of life were mingling with it—the low of a cow, the crowing of the cocks, the hum of the noisier daylight insect life.

Jocelyn moved to the window, and her heart suddenly leaped to her throat.

On the brown turf in front of the house were two men stretched side by side as if other hands had laid them there dead. One man was much bigger than the other. He was of exceptional stature. Jocelyn recognised them almost immediately—Guy Oscard and Joseph. They had arrived during the night and, not wishing to disturb the sleeping household, had lain them down in the front garden to sleep with a quiet conscience beneath the stars. The action was so startlingly characteristic, so suggestive of the primeval, simple man whom Oscard represented as one born out of time, that Jocelyn laughed suddenly.

While she was still at the window Marie rose and came to her side. Nestorius was still sleeping. Following the direction of her mistress' eyes, Marie saw the two men. Joseph was sleeping on his face, after the manner of Thomas Atkins all the world over. Guy Oscard lay on his side, with his head on his arm.

"That is so like Guy Oscard," said Marie, with her patient smile; "so like, so like. It could be no other man—to do a thing like that."

Jocelyn gave Nestorius back to his mother, and the two women stood for a moment looking out at the sleepers, little knowing what the advent of these two men brought with it for one of them. Then the Englishwoman went to change her dress, awaking her brother as she passed his room.

It was not long before Maurice Gordon had hospitably awakened the travelers and brought them in to change their torn and ragged clothes for something more presentable. It would appear that Nestorius was not particular. He did not mind dying on the kitchen table if need were. His mother deposited him on this table on a pillow, while she prepared the breakfast with that patient resignation which seemed to emanate from having tasted of the worst that the world has to give.

Joseph was ready the first, and he promptly repaired to the kitchen, where he set to work to help Marie with his customary energy.

It was Marie who first perceived a

OTTAWA, LARDER AND OPASITIKA LAKE SYNDICATE

A syndicate is now being formed to take up 2,800 acres which is composed of five claims situated to the South of the West arm of Larder Lake and adjoining the Fitzpatrick claims, and nine claims are next to the now famous Dr. Reddick claims at the North East arm of the Lake.

Fifty-six claims are in the Province of Quebec, just East of Larder Lake and take in a portion of Opasitika Lake and close to the "King of the North" and other good properties, where copper and gold has been found in large quantities.

There are only 550 Syndicate shares to be sold, at One Hundred Dollars per Share, which will entitle the holder to one thousand shares in a million dollar company.

Samples of ore can be seen and further particulars can be had at our office.

This property is equal to seventy 40-acre claims and it is anticipated that these syndicate shares will be taken up quickly. Applications will be allotted in the order received, and over subscriptions will be returned.

All checks must be made payable to James K. Paisley, Esq. and D. O'Connor, Jr., jointly, who will act as trustees until the formation of the Company, or to the Standard Bank of Canada, Ottawa, or any of its branches.

par value $1.00. As a result of last summer's work numerous veins of rich ore were uncovered, assaying from $10 up to $5000. There is every indication that this property will prove sensationally rich, and with the low capitalization of $500,000, $150,000 of which is in the Treasury, the dividends should be large, and the stock become very valuable. This is a thorough business mining proposition, and will stand the most critical examination.
